——S. 106 — Contract to the contrary — Statutory period of notice enlarged by contract with respect to tenant only — Landlord's right to give notice for statutory period.

By an agreement the period of notice may certainly be made longer in the case of the tenant than in the case of the landlord. It cannot be argued that because the period of notice was made longer in the case of the tenant than the statutory period of 15 days, the period was necessarily enlarged in the case of the landlord as well. A landlord can avail himself of the statutory period of notice unless that period is also varied by agreement express or implied. S. A. ——S. 106—'Contract to contrary.'

Section 106 is attracted only in the absence of a contract to the contrary. Where the rent deed executed by the tenant expressly provides that he will be liable to vacate the house when an intimation of two weeks is given to him by the landlord and a similar right is reserved in favour of the tenant as well, there is an express contract to the contrary which overrides the provisions of S. 106 of the Transfer of Property Act. Assuming that S. 106 applies, then in this case a written notice sent to the tenant demanding that the tenant should quit at the end of the last day of a month of the tenancy or the beginning of the next day does completely satisfy the requirement of S. 106 of the Transfer of Property Act. 60 Mad LJ 293 : AIR 1931 Mad 352, Rel. on. AIR 1959 J & K 87 (88) (Pt A) (Pr 4).

——S. 106—'Contract to the contrary'—Must be valid —Payment of annual rent—Presumption—Rebuttal.

The contract to the contrary as contemplated by S. 106 need not be an express contract: it may be an implied one. The only qualification is that it must be valid stipulation. If there is a contract to the contrary, then the presumption that the tenancy arising from the payment of annual rent was from year to year is rebutted. Where the term in a lease deed provided that the landlord would be at liberty to demand surrender of possession at any time he chose, with a corresponding right to the tenant it is a contract to the contrary within meaning of S. 106. 1963 Ker L T 1009 : 1963 Ker L J 1125 : AIR 1964 Ker 218 (219) (Pt A) (Pr 8) (DB).

——Ss. 106, 116—Contract to the contrary — Mere absence of provision regarding notice is not contract to the contrary—Proper notice held was necessary — Holding over—Notice, not a term of tenancy — Section 4 of Kerala Compensation for Tenants Improvement Act does not dispense with notice.

The mere absence of any provision regarding notice to quit is not to be construed as a contract dispensing with such notice. 47 I C 19, Disting.

The relevant recital in the document was that, in case the lessor evicts the lessee after the period of six years, the lessor agrees to pay the value of the chamayams already existing at the time of the document and the value of the shop thereafter to be constructed by the lessee according to the local custom and also the amount of Rs. 10 already received, and the lessee agrees then to surrender possession to the lessor.

Held, (i) that thare was not even an undertaking that the lessee will surrender possession without any objection when the value of the building was paid. It was not therefore a contract dispensing with notice to quit. The utmost that could be said was that there was no contract between the parties regarding notice to quit; and in such a case, because a contract dispensing with notice to quit is absent, S. 106 must apply. AIR 1924 Mad 771, Rel. on.

(ii) Even if it were considered that there was a contract to the contrary and that the notice was dispensed with, considering that the lease had expired and the tenant was holding over, S. 116 must apply and the provision as to the notice contained in the expired lease could not be held to be a term of the tenancy arising by holding over, and if so, proper notice to quit was necessary. (1952) 2 MLJ 227, Rel. on.

(iii) that if a proper notice to quit was necessary for the determination of the tenancy, that requirement was not dispensed with or abrogated by S. 4 of the Kerala Compensation for Tenants Improvements Act, which only gave the tenant a right to continue in possession after such valid determination of the tenancy. ——S. 106—Applicability—Parties agreeing to give notice of one month while terminating tenancy — Contract fixing different period of notice, which was a contract to the contrary making S. 106, Transfer of Property Act, inapplicable.

There was a special contract between the landlord and the tenant extending the period of quit notice to one month. The question was whether the notice given on 4.9.1959 asking the tenants to vacate by 4-10-1959, when the tenancy commenced on the first of each month, was valid.

Held, that S. 106, Transfer of Property Act, contained but a single rule and where the lease provided for a month's notice being given before the lessee could be asked to vacate, there was a variation of the requirement of the notice expiring with date of the lease. A notice of one month was sufficient even if it did not expire with the end of the month of tenancy. In S. 106, Transfer of Property Act, the words "by fifteen days' notice expiring with the end of a month of tenancy" contained only one condition and that the contract fixing a different period of notice was a contract to the contrary, making S. 106 inapplicable to the case. If, therefore, there is a contract providing for a different period of notice, then the second provision requiring 15 days' notice expiring with end of a month of the tenancy obviously does not come into play, as it is a concomitant part of the requirement, and forms an indivisible condition. I L R (1955) 5 Raj 115 : 1955 Raj L W 499 : AIR 1955 Raj 1 (3) (Pr 18) (DB).

A notice to quit in accordance with a specific contract between the parties is valid under S. 106, Transfer of Property Act though it did not comply with the provision therein that it is terminable by 15 days' notice ending with the month of tenancy; the specific contract is a "contract to the contrary". AIR 1951 Raj 88 (88) (Pt B) (Pr 4).

——S. 106 — "Contract to the contrary" — Contract modifying period of notice without specifying time when notice is to expire.

Section 106 prescribes two separate and independent conditions for validly terminating a monthly lease; first that the notice is to be a fifteen days' notice and secondly that it is to expire with the end of a month of the tenancy, and in order that these should cease to apply the contract to the contrary must specifically provide for them both. If the contract contains a stipulation only as to the period of the notice it modifies the provisions of S. 106 to that extent but does not affect the other requirement of the section, viz., that the notice is to expire with the end of a month of tenancy, and this latter requirement has to be complied with in order that the lease can be validly terminated. ——Ss. 106, 110—Lease for three years fixing yearly rent—Lessee remaining in possession after expiry of term—Tenancy-at-will—Notice to quit—Validity.

According to the term of the lease fixing yearly rent deed the tenancy could be determined after the expiry of the period of three years only by a demand by the landlord. The tenant continued to be in possession and paid rent from year to year. The landlord filed a suit for recovery of possession after giving notice. It was contended that the suit was not maintainable for want of proper notice.

Held, that as no demand for surrender was made by the landlord the tenant must be deemed to be in possession under the terms of the tenancy created by the lease deed. As that tenancy had not been determined the tenant was not really holding over but was in possession by virtue of the tenancy-at-will created by that document. The tenancy was not from year to year merely because an yearly rent was reserved in the lease deed or because the rent was paid on an yearly basis after the period specified therein. The tenancy evidenced by the lease deed was a tenancy-at-will and although it was certain for a period of 3 years thereafter the tenancy was one at will and therefore the notice given by the landlord although not expiring with the end of the year or of the month of the tenancy, was a proper notice and that determined the tenancy. AIR 1955 Kutch 11 (12) (Pt A) (Pr 5).

——S. 106—Period of lease—Contract to the contrary—Lease for indefinite period with option to tenant to terminate it any time—Construction.

There is a statutory presumption for construing a lease of immovable property for other than agricultural or manufacturing purposes as one from month to month and the burden of proving a contract to the contrary lies very heavy upon the tenant and he must have satisfactory evidence to displace the presumption and to establish a definite contract.

Held, on facts that the condition of the lease did not purport to create a lease other than a lease from month to month and the only purpose of the condition was to guarantee to the tenant the protection of the Rent Control legislation that might remain in force from time to time. The Rent Control legislation having ceased to operate in the area in question, the parties must be governed by the general law as embodied in the Transfer of Property Act. Under that law, the landlord had an unqualified right to determine the tenancy by a notice to quit. When this was done, the landlord was entitled to eject the tenant. AIR 1941 Pat 228, Rel, on. 7. Presumption of yearly or monthly tenancy under this section.

● ——S. 106—Applicability to leases implied by law.

The rule of construction embodied in S. 106, T. P. Act applies not only to express leases of uncertain duration but also to leases implied by law which may be inferred from possession and acceptance of rent and other circumstances. Ram Kumar v. Jagdish

Chandra. 1952 SCR 269 : 1952 SCA 79 : ILR 31 Pat 21 : 1951 S C J 813 : 1952 Mad W N 120 : 65 Mad L W 219 : AIR 1952 S C 23 (26) (Pt A) (Pr 13).

● —S. 106 — Lease of land for building purposes for ten years fixing yearly rent—Lease inoperative under law — Acceptance of yearly rent — Tenancy from month to month arises by implication of law.

The defendant executed a registered Kabuliat dated 8.12.1924 in favour of the Receiver who was in charge of the plaintiff's estate by which he purported to take a settlement of land in suit for building purposes for a period of 10 years at an annual rent. The first payment of annual rent was made on 3-3-1925 and the second payment was made on 16-3-26. Since then no further payments were made. The Kabuliat not being an operative document under S. 107, T. P. Act, the question was whether the tenancy created by implication of law was a monthly tenancy under S. 106, T. P. Act.

Held that the tenancy created by implication of law in favour of the defendant should be held to be from month to month since its inception in 1924. The tenancy not being for manufacturing or agricultural purposes it could be regarded as a tenancy from month to month under S. 106 unless there was a contract to the contrary. The stipulation as to payment of annual rent would no doubt raise a presumption that the tenancy was from year to year but being contained in an inoperative document could not come in the way of raising a presumption under S. 106. A lease for one year certain could not be inferred from the payment of annual rent because to do so would be to substitute a new agreement for the parties which they never intended to do. 11 C W N 1124 : AIR 1916 Cal 358, Approved. ——S. 106— Notice to terminate tenancy — Form of —Repeated notices demanding payment of rent with threat to terminate tenancy — No intention to terminate tenancy.

No hard and fast rule or technical formula can be laid down about the language of a notice under S. 106. The precise words are immaterial provided the notice terminates the tenancy. Where the landlord wrote to the tenant, that he had not paid the rent in spite of repeated demands and the notice ended thus (translated in English) : 'Now you will kindly pay by the end of July, 1956 a sum of Rs. 50 in respect of rent and also vacate the house and hand over possession to us or else at the expiry of the period of this notice suitable action will be taken against you in the law Courts' taking into consideration the fact that the landlord had sent repeated notices like this, the notice was capable of the interpretation that it was another demand for rent coupled with a threat to terminate the tenancy and in such a situation the benefit of the doubt should go to the tenant and therefore, this notice did not indicate a clear decision to terminate the tenancy. 1961 All L J 152: 1960 All W R (HC) 96 : AIR 1960 All 544 (545) (Pt A) (Pr 3).

——S. 106—Presumption of yearly tenancy.

The presumption laid down in S. 106 applies only in the absence of a contract to the contrary. Where, therefore, there is a specific contract that the rent will be paid from month to month and the lease is for a fixed period of eleven months only, then under the contract it cannot be said that the lease is from year to year and that as such it can only be determined by a six month's notice on the plea that the lease of the premises is for manufacturing purpose. 1955 All L J 304 : AIR 1955 All 679 (680) (Pt A) (Pr 5) (DB).

——S. 106—Nature of tenancy — Presumption as to from mode of payment of rent.

The mode in which rent is expressly payable affords a presumption that the tenancy is of a character corresponding to the nature of the monthly or the annual payment. AIR 1955 Assam 102 (Pt B) (Pr 6) (DB).

——Ss. 106, 116—Holding over under invalid lease from year to year.

Normally, in the absence of a written lease a presumption of annual tenancy may be drawn from the fact that rent was payable annually.

Where the agreement of lease for residential purpose is not in writing the stipulation as to payment of annual rent is a condition of an inoperative lease. Section 106, T. P. Act, comes into play and the tenancy, therefore would be from month to month. A fifteen days notice expiring with the end of the month of the tenancy would be valid in law.

To exclude the operation of S. 106 the contract should be a valid contract. It need not be express, and may be implied but if it is no contract in law, S. 106 will be operative and will regulate the duration of the lease. I L R (1953) 5 Assam 207 : A I R 1954 Assam 58 (58) (Pt A) (Pr 6).

——Ss. 106, 105—Lease of uncertain duration.

S. 105 does not require that term of lease should be certain on the date of the lease. The period can be express or implied. Provision for a period implied by law or usage would be enough. This is clear from language of S. 106 which provides that in the absence of a contract or usage or local law to the contrary a lease would be deemed to be from year to year if it is for agricultural purpose and from month to month if it is for other purposes. AIR 1954 Assam 58 (59) (Pt B) (Pr 6).

——S. 106 — Presumption regarding duration of tenancy — When arises (Tenancy Laws— Bombay Tenancy and Agricultural Lands Act (67 of 1948), S. 5)

The presumption as to the duration of tenancy arises under S. 106, T. P. Act only in the absence of a contract or local law or usage to the contrary. The Bombay Tenancy Act clearly displaces this presumption by making it impossible for the landlord to terminate the tenancy either of a protected or non-protected tenant by giving a six months' notice expiring at the end of the year. The tenancy of protected tenant cannot, therefore, be regarded as one from year to year. 55 Bom L R 341 : AIR 1953 Bom 332 (332) (Pt B) (Pr 2) (DB).

Where the lease deed shows that the tenant took a lease of some bagat lands for the purpose of residence by erecting non-permanent structures for an indefinite period and although an annual rent was reserved, even this was payable in two equal instalments in Aswin and Chaitra of each year, such a lease under S. 106 of the Transfer of Property Act, taken for residential purpose is terminable by fifteen days' notice expiring with the end of the month of the tenancy and by three months' notice under S. 4 (b) of the Calcutta Thika Tenancy Act. (1957) 99 Cal L J 65 : 61 Cal W N 170.

——Ss. 106 and 105: — Intention to create permanent lease — No operative lease coming into existence — Party remaining in possession and paying rent —Presumption and duration of tenancy.

Where even though the parties intended to create a permanent lease no operative lease came into existence and the defendant remained in possession of the land belonging to the plaintiff with his permission and paid rent to him, a tenancy has to be presumed. There being no valid contract for a permanent lease, the tenancy should be deemed to be from month to month, terminable on the part of either lessor or lessee, by fifteen days' notice expiring with the end of a month of the tenancy. 95 Cal L J 230 : AIR 1955 Cal 502 (502, 503) (Prs 6, 8) (DB).

——S. 106 — Presumption of monthly tenancy — Building lease — Subsequent agreement raising rent and fixing term of lease rendered void for non-registration —Lessee continuing in possession after expiry of lease — Presumption of monthly tenancy can be drawn in absence of contract to contrary, subsequent agreement being void.

After terminating old lease a new agreement of lease raising the rent and fixing the term of lease for two years was entered into but was not registered as required under the Transfer of Property Act. If the lessee continues in possession even after the expiry of two years period under the new arrangement a presumption of monthly tenancy can be drawn as there was no contract to the contrary for the reason, that the new arrangement was in the eye of law no contract at all. In the case of a tenancy of a house the presumption always is that it is a monthly tenancy unless there is something to the contrary.

Where the rent note says that on the date of execution Rs. 6 were paid as rent for the year, that does not show that it is a yearly tenancy. Rents are paid sometimes in a lump sum at the end of a year even though the tenancy may be a monthly one. 1952 Nag L J (Notes) 165.

——Ss. 106, 107 — Lease for residential purposes — Execution by only lessee—Validity.

Where a lease for residential purposes though registered is executed by the lessee only but not by lessor it is not in accordance with the provisions of S. 107, and hence the document has to be completely ignored but when the tenancy is the accepted position it would be governed by the presumption arising under the provisions of S. 106, T. Held, on facts that the lease deed not having been executed in accordance with S. 107 could operate only as a tenancy from month to month by virtue of S. 106 and therefore no sanction of the District Judge under S. 29, Guardians and Wards Act was necessary for the lease. Therefore the widows as well as the minors would be bound by that monthly lease as it was within the competence of the widows to grant such a lease. A I R 1952 S C 23, Rel. on. 8. Lease for agricultural or manufacturing purposes.

——S. 106 (as amended by U. P. Act 24 of 1954) — Termination of lease—Notice—Lease of shop found to be for manufacturing purpose — Such lease is governed by S. 106—Notice of six months is required.

In respect of a tenancy found to be one for manufacturing-purposes, the rule of construction in S. 106 of the Transfer of Property Act lays down that it would be deemed from year to year. Even though the parties fail to carry out their intention by having the terms of the tenancy reduced in writing and get it registered and no yearly tenancy has come into existence in law because of S. 107 of the Transfer of Property Act, yet as far as the applicability of S. 106 is concerned, it is deemed to be from year to year once it is shown that the defendant took the shop in question for manufacturing purposes. And, therefore, for terminating the lease a notice of six months is required under S. 106 of the T. P. Act, (1882). ——S. 106—Lease for manufacturing purposes.

In considering whether a lease is for manufacturing purpose the Court must look to the original intention of the parties which can be gathered from the deed itself and not to the subsequent conduct of the lessee. If after taking a lease for a show-room the lessee, (a manufacturing concern) began to carry on any manufacturing operation upon the premises the lease is not converted into one for manufacturing purposes. The very fact that the lease was only for a period of one year indicates that the original intention was not to let out the premises for manufacturing purposes. 1951 All W R (HC) 67 : 1951 All L J 154 : A I R 1951 All 396 (398) (Pt D) (Pr 6) (DB).

——S. 106 — Purpose of tenancy — Lease to a company — Reference to recital in Memorandum and Articles of Association not proper for deciding such purpose.

As regards the purpose of the tenancy granted to a company it is wrong to refer to the objects as recited in the Memorandum and Articles of Association because in the Memorandum and Articles of Association many objects may be mentioned, but a company may actually be doing a limited business covered by one only of the objects mentioned. Thus the actual business which was being done by the company must be looked into for determining the object of the lease. AIR 1963 Cal 198 (203) (Pt G) (Pr 19).

——S. 106—Lease for manufacturing purpose—Lease of premises for both building and repairing of coaches and motor cars—Lease is for manufacturing purpose.

It is the dominant purpose of the lease that should be considered to govern the lease for deciding the kind of notice required under S. 106. Manufacture must be understood in the popular sense of making articles of trade and commerce by means of machinery. From that point of view preparation of sweetmeats, for sale done in a kitchen does not amount to manufacture. Similarly, printing with a small press set up in a room of a dwelling house cannot also be treated as manufacturing, although the printing and making of magazines and books in rotary press machines may be regarded as manufacturing Where coaches and cars are both built and repaired, the building or manufacture should be taken as the dominant purpose. Coach building and building of bodies of cars and buses may be considered as making of articles of trade and commerce by means of machinery. That being so, the leases in such a case must be regarded as manufacturing leases, and so 15 days notice ending with a month of each tenancy must be held to be insufficient; it is necessary to serve 6 months notice ending with a year of the tenancy. Where the lessee is running a hosiery factory in the premises the mere fact that one of the rooms is being occupied by one of his officers for residence would not make the purpose of the tenancy a residential purpose or a mixed purpose, i.e., both manufacturing and residential purpose. It would still be a manufacturing purpose. Six months' notice would be necessary. ——Ss. 108, 107 and 116 — Manufacturing unregistered lease — Notice to terminate — Applicability of S. 106.

Section 107, does not control S. 106 and, notwithstanding the former section, the latter will apply to a manufacturing lease, whether registered or unregistered so as to make it a lease from year to year for purposes of that section (S. 106), terminable with a six months' notice to quit, or, in other words, to control its duration and period of notice, in the absence of a contract or local law or usage to the contray. The lease will be a lease from year to year for the limited purpose of S. 106, that is, for the limited purpose of its duration and period of notice, the duration being until the notice expires. This will not raise any conflict with S. 107 : 54 C W N 58; A I R 1952 S C 23, Rel. on.; In S. 116, the statute itself indicates by necessary implication, that S. 106 will apply to all leases covered by the statute, whether under registered instruments or not, to supply the omission as to duration and period of notice. 63 Cal W N 29 : ILR (1959) 1 Cal 639 : A I R 1959 Cal 181 (185, 186) (Pt B) (Prs 26, 27) (DB).

A tenancy taken for starting a motor repair 'work' or a motor repairing workshop would not, even ordinarily or prima facie—and, certainly not, necessarily—be for a manufacturing purpose. ——S. 106—Manufacturing purpose — Preparation of sweetmeats for sale.

The use of the word "manufacture" to describe the process of preparation of sweets though not unknown is, generally speaking, not very appropriate and as a general rule it cannot be held that preparation of sweetmeats would answer the test of "manufacture" for purposes of Section 106 of Transfer of Property Act. Normally it does not.

Held, on facts that whatever the meaning of the words "manufacture" may be the lease in question was a lease so much for sale of sweets as for preparing the same in the disputed premises. That being so, it was not solely for manufacturing purposes but was as much for other purposes as well. It was, therefore, a lease for "any other purpose" within the meaning of section 106.

Held, further that the primary purpose of running the sweetmeat shop was to sell sweets, whether manufactured at the spot or brought from elsewhere. Accordingly even applying the test of primary purpose the disputed tenancy would not be held to be one for "manufacturing purposes" so as to require a six months' notice to quit for its termination. In such a case the law supplies the omission and enacts that the lease shall be deemed to be a lease from year to year. The Rent Controller, in a previous application by the landlord to eject S on the ground that sub-tenancy had been in favour of D, held that a kind of tenancy had been created by acquiescence and knowledge of the landlord. The landlord made another application to eject D on the ground of failure to pay annual rent in advance. The landlord was unable to prove any agreement with D.

——S. 106—Lease—Legal title to lands under, found subsequently not with the lessor — Liability of the lessor and the lessee to mesne profits to the rightful owner —Mesne profits —Basis of right —(Civil P. C. (1908), S. 35, O. 20, R. 12).

In a suit filed on 21st January 1948, for ejectment and for recovery of profits, past and future, the plaintiffs, as the lawful owners of certain lanka land (patta to the same having been issued long back in their favour by the 1st defendant Government) questioned the lease dated 7th September 1944 by the first defendant Government in favour of defendants 2 to 4 for three years in respect of the same land. The 1st defendant Government admitted the title of the plaintiffs to the suit land but pleaded that by an unfortunate mistake they were included in the lease, that on their being appraised of the mistake they caused a survey and check-measurement of the lands and directed on 25th February 1947 immediate exclusion of the suit lands from the lease and that they are prepared to hand over the rents received by them under the lease from defendants 2 to 4 and that they are not liable to any of the claims prayed for in the suit. Defendants 2 to 4 while denying the title of the plaintiffs to the suit land pleaded lawful possession under the lease and even after the expiry of the lease contended that they were tenants holding over and in bona fide possession, that they have not received any notice to quit and that the claim of the plaintiffs for mesne profits is against them was not sustainable and in any event was highly exaggerated :

Held, the rights of the plaintiffs to claim mesne profits depends upon whether the possession of the defendants was wrongful from the inception, i. e., from the date of the lease. So far as the 1st defendant is concerned he can be regarded as being in wrongful possession in the sense that he was taking the rent from the other defendants, though he was not entitled to do so. The 1st defendant therefore cannot retain the rent which is not legitimately his and has to disgorge himself of it. There is no basis for holding the 1st defendant a trespasser and make him liable jointly along with the other defendants for profits on the calculation of what defendants 2 to 4 got out of the land. The measure of damages in this respect can only be profits received by 1st defendant or which might have been received by him with due diligence, Held further, it is difficult to look upon defendants 2 to 4 as trespassers. They were inducted into possession by the first defendant as lessees in the year 1944. At the time of the lease it was thought by all the parties concerned that the legal title to the lands existed in the Government.

The theory of "relation back" — wrongful possession from the inception can have no application to a case like the present where the title of the plaintiffs was not recognised on the date of the lease.

The plaintiffs before they could succeed in their claim for mesne profits should prove that they made a formal claim. Defendants 2 to 4 could not be viewed as trespassers from the time of their lease. It is only after the title of the plaintiffs to the suit lands has been accepted that their possession should be regarded as wrongful, i. e., after 25th February 1947 and they will be liable to pay mesne profits from that date. (1954) 2 MLJ (Andhra) 141 : 1954 Andh L T (Civ) 128 : AIR 1955 Andh 36 (37, 38, 39, 40) (Pt A, B, C) (Prs 6, 11, 13, 14, 16).

Whether it was correct to treat the tenant in such a case as a mere licensee or a tenant-at-will a notice under S. 106 was not necessary to terminate the tenancy. A tenancy at will could be terminated by any act which was inconsistent with the will to continue the tenancy. P. (Temporary) Control of Rent and Eviction Act (3 of 1947), S. 3 (1) (a).

A notice stating that the tenancy shall stand terminated if the tenant does not pay rent within one month of its receipt is valid under S. 106.

A notice like any other document has to be read and interpreted as a whole. No particular words are prescribed for a notice under S. 106, T. P. Act. But it is well settled that the notice to quit should indicate with reasonable clearness and certainty an intention on the part of the person giving it to terminate the existing tenancy at a certain time. A notice, therefore, must not be vitiated by uncertainty or vagueness with regard to the intention of the person giving it. A conditional notice is invalid only if the condition contains this element of uncertainty or vagueness, that is, if the condition is of such a nature that it makes the intention of the person giving it vague or uncertain. [Observations in Mulla's T.P. Act, 4th edition, p. 619, commented upon.]

A notice would be bad if it is to take effect on a contingency, but a contingency is different from a condition which is certain and clear.

The difference between a notice based on an uncertain contingency and a notice terminating the tenancy unles the tenant pays up the arrears of rent is based on principles of equity and justice. The former type of notice places the tenant in an unfair position as he would not know, on the receipt of the notice, the precise fate of his tenancy and would be faced with the difficult problem of staying or finding accommodation elsewhere. But a notice terminating the tenancy unless he pays the rent does not depend upon any event or contingency outside the control of the tenant. It is entirely within his power to make the notice infructuous by promptly paying the rent. A notice stating that the tenancy shall stand terminated unless the tenant pays arrears of rent within the prescribed period is really a notice terminating the tenancy with a proviso in the tenant's favour that it shall stand automatically waived on payment of rent. A tenant cannot object to the validity of a notice which leaves nothing uncertain but gives him an option to treat the notice as waived on payment of rent.

A combined notice demanding rent under S. 3 (1) (a) of the U. P. Control of Rent and Eviction Act and terminating the tenancy unless the rent is paid contains a conditional notice under S. 106, T. P. Act. Such a notice is valid. (1898) I L R 22 Bom 241, Rel. on. 1965 All L J 298.

—S. 106 — U. P. (Temporary) Control of Rent and Eviction Act (3 of 1947), S. 3:— Intention to terminate tenancy, upon failure to pay arrears within one month — Intention to terminate is to be gathered from the whole notice.

The nature and purpose of the notice must be gathered by reading the document as a whole and not from any words read out of context or from any omission to use the formal language of a solicitor. Where the landlord warns the tenant that if he fails to clear the arrears of rent within a month of the receipt of the notice he will be liable to ejectment and in that event he must treat the notice as a "legal notice" and vacate that accommodation within a month, it is clear that the demand that the tenant should vacate the accommodation signifies the termination of the tenancy and the words "legal notice" could only refer to a notice under S. 106 of the Transfer of Property Act. —S. 106—Notice to be construed liberally—Notice stating that if tenant thought that tenancy commenced on some other date he might vacate on corresponding date — Notice not vague and held valid.

The Transfer of Property Act prescribes no form of notice nor any particular words. The object of the notice under S. 106 is to give the tenant sufficient time to vacate the premises and such a notice should be liberally construed. The real point in such cases is that the person on whom the notice is served should understand that his tenancy has been terminated and he is required to vacate at the end of the period of the tenancy. If the tenant attacks the notice on the ground of vagueness he must show that its defective language caused him to misunderstand its nature.

Where the notice given by the landlord said "or if you think that the tenancy commenced on some other date, you may vacate the land on the corresponding date."

Held, that the notice was not indefinite and vague and was valid. A I R 1949 All 173, Rel. on, 1963 All W R (HC) 132 : AIR 1963 All 54 (54) (Pr 4).

(3) that no rent was due on 30th October, 1950 and that therefore the notice issued by the p'aintiff on that date for the payment of arrears within one month was a wholly infructuous notice; (4) that rent having become due on 31st December, 1950, the only notice that was given after this date was the notice of 4th May, 1951; (5) that as in law the tenant must have a full period of one month before he could be sued for eviction and as in the present case the suit was instituted within one month from the date of the notice, no decree for eviction could be passed. ——S. 106—Notice to quit—Requirements of validity —Period of determination of tenancy —General form —Commencement of tenancy — Burden of proof — (Evidence Act (1872), Ss. 101-104).

The two requirements of the validity of a notice under S. 106, T. P. Act, are — (1) that the notice should expire by the end of the month of the tenancy and (2) that fifteen days' clear notice is to be given to the tenant to vacate the premises. No particular form of the notice has been prescribed. If the tenant knew the commencement of the tenancy and if the notice states that he has to vacate after the expiry of the next month of the tenancy, the tenant could have very well known the date by which he had to vacate the premises.

By merely putting a date which is subsequently found to be incorrect, it cannot be said that the notice becomes valid and by merely putting the notice in the general form without an erroneous date put down in the notice as an alternative will not make the notice any the less valid.

Although in the absence of evidence by the landlord to show when the year or month of the tenancy commenced, his suit for ejectment must fail, the question of burden of proof loses its importance when both the parties have led evidence and on consideration of that evidence the Court below has come to the conclusion : Case law reviewed. I L R (1960) 12 Assam 1.

——S. 106 — Notice to quit mentioning only portion of premises of which possession was demanded — Validity.

Notices to quit, though not strictly accurate or consistent in the statements embodied in them, may still be good and effective in law, the test of their sufficiency is not what they would mean to a stranger ignorant of all the facts and circumstances touching the holding to which they purport to refer but what they would mean to tenants presumably conversant with all those facts and circumstances, and further, they are to be construed, not with a desire to find faults in them which would render them defective, but to be construed ut res magis valeat quam pereat. 45 I A 222, Foll.

The notice to quit referred to the defendant's tenancy under the plaintiff as one in respect of the first floor flat of premises No. 4 Moira street, inclusive of furniture, crockery, etc. and demanded possession of the said first floor flat and it expressly mentioned the rental as Rs. 500 per month. It did not, of course, specifically, or, in express terms, mention the garage and the godowns in the ground floor which also were admittedly part of the defendant's above tenancy under the plaintiff.

Held that the description of the said tenancy in manner aforesaid was sufficient to attract the said garage and godowns in view of the express mention of the rental of Rs. 500 per month in the light of the substantially similar description of the defendant's tenancy in the previous correspondence between the parties. Further, the notice to quit was, at the worst, ambiguous. It obviously intended cessation or termination of the defendant's tenancy under the plaintiff of Rs. 500 per month, though purporting to demand possession only of the first floor flat and not expressly of the garage and godowns in the ground floor which admittedly were part of the defendant's said tenancy. The ambiguity, however, could not have misled the defendant. Therefore, the notice to quit was a good and valid notice which duly terminated the defendants tenancy. ——S. 106 — Notice to quit — Nature and construction of — Notice should be construed 'ut res magis valeat quam pereat'.

It is well established that a notice to quit being a unilateral act in exercise of a contractual right to put an end to an existing relation of landlord and tenant, must conform strictly to the requirements of law. It is not a consensual document; it is a document which must, on its face and on a fair and reasonable construction, do what the law says that it must do.

A notice to quit though it may not be strictly accurate or consistent in the statements embodied in it may still be good and effective in law; the test of sufficiency would be satisfied if the notice to quit conveys to the tenant that his tenancy would be determined at a certain and definite time expiring with month of the tenancy. ——S. 106—Notice to quit—Rules of construction — Liberal construction to be put.

Section 106 does not require that the exact date of the termination of the tenancy should be specified in the notice. Hence, if the tenancy is to expire at the end of a month according to the English calendar it is enough if the landlord says in the notice that the tenant should vacate at the end of the month, without mentioning any particular date.

The English rule of construction to give such a sense to ambiguous words as will effectuate the intention of the parties is based on sound common sense and is applicable to India also. The only difference between the English law and the law in India may be that S. 106 insists on the notice being in writing signed by or on behalf of the person giving it. The notice has not to be given with all the particularity of a pleading. Naturally, therefore, it is not subject to strict interpretation. A liberal construction has to be put upon the notice so as to find out the true intention of the party giving the notice and whether the party served with the notice could understand it in the sense meant by the giver of the notice. Courts should give such constructions as would not work a hardship on the tenant and would not strain the language too much against the landlord.

In addition to the requirement of a reasonable notice the law has placed further restrictions by emergency legislation (Rent Control Laws) on the right of the landlord to evict his tenant. The necessity for a proceeding before the revenue authorities to obtain permission to serve notice on the tenant is itself a lengthy process and sometimes has been known to take years. The Court, therefore, should not be too strict to forge another fetter against the landlord in the exercise of his lawful rights to eject his tenant. 1954 Nag L J 436 : ILR (1954) Nag 624 : A I R 1954 Nag 292 (293) (Prs 5, 6) (DB).

——S. 106—Notice to quit — Construction — Rule as to—Monthly tenancy—Notice asking tenant to vacate by the first of the next month is not invalid.

Notices to quit are to be construed not with a desire to find faults in them which render them defective but are to be construed ut res magis valeat quam pereat. The principal test is to consider what the notice would mean to the tenant who is personally conversant with the terms and circumstances. That would necessarily depend on the form of the notice in each case. 46 Cal 458 (PC) Rel. on.

A notice to quit has not to be worded with the accuracy of a plea.

In the case of a monthly tenancy commencing from the first of each month, the notice is not invalid because the tenant is asked to vacate not by the end of the month but by the first of the next month. Reading the notice as a whole the tenant is not left in doubt as to the termination of the tenancy at the end of that month. AIR 1931 Mad 352; (1895) 1 Q B 378, Rel. on; A I R 1949 Ajmer 38; A I R 1950 Orissa 1, Not Foll. 1952 Nag L J 125 : A I R 1952 Nag 101 (101, 102) (Prs 7, 9).

——S. 106—Notice — Validity — Validity depends on terms of each notice and circumstances.

——S. 106 and S. 8—Notice to quit —Construction of —Notice held expired with end of month of tenancy.

The principle for construing the provisions of S. 106, T. P. Act is that the Courts are to put a rational construction of the notice and ought not to split a straw.

In a case of monthly tenancy according to the English calendar the relevant portion of the notice was to the effect that the defendants were to quit the house by the morning of 1-10-1949. This notice was issued by the plaintiff on 26-8-1949 and was served upon the defendants on 27-8-1949.

Held, that it could not be said that the landlord or the tenants intended that the former allowed the latter to remain in the house for any part of the next month of tenancy. The notice, read as a whole, made it absolutely clear that it was to terminate on the expiry of the month of tenancy. (1895) 1 Q B 378 and AIR 1931 Mad 352 and AIR 1918 PC 102, Rel. on. AIR 1956 Orissa 128 (128) (Pr 6) (DB).

——S. 106 —Notice to quit — Validity—Notice to be so interpreted as to uphold its validity — Tenancy commencing from 1st August — Notice to vacate by midnight of 31st July or 1st August held valid.

Held, on facts that though there was some ambiguity with regard to the point of time by which the tenant was asked to vacate, the proper way to read it was that it gave an option to the tenant to vacate the premises on the midnight of 31st July, 1954, or that of the 1st August, 1954, whenever the tenant thought his tenancy terminated. The absence of the word 'or' between the two dates was of no consequence. The notice was, therefore, valid as being in compliance of S. 106, T. P. Act. ——S. 106—Quit notice—Requirements of.

All that S. 106 or the T. P. Act requires is that the notice, apart from being of a certain duration as required by law, according to the nature of the tenancy should also be such that it expires at the end of the month or the year of the tenancy, as the case may be. If the lessor who is in doubt as to the correct date of commencement of tenancy, gives a quit notice to the lessee wherein he proposes three alternative dates for the determination of the tenancy and gives the lessee an option to choose any one of the proposed dates, the notice is not bad for uncertainty. What a notice like this does is to give him a full and free choice to choose his own date of the termination of his tenancy. AIR 1949 All 173 and AIR 1921 Pat 307 and AIR 1958 All 774, Rel. on.

The date of commencement of tenancy is not altered simply because the plaintiffs happened to purchase the disputed shop from its previous owners on a particular date. ——Ss. 106 and 111—Notice complying with S. 111 —Effect of.

Section 106, does not indicate what should be the nature of the notice by which the lease is terminable. All that it lays down is that the lease is terminable by a notice, and consequently, a lease governed by this section will be terminable by any notice which, under any other provision of law, can determine the lease. Thus a lease governed by S. 106, can be determined by a notice which complies with the requirements of S. 111. Of course, the further requirement that the notice should be such as to make the lease terminable with the end of a month of tenancy has also to be satisfied. I L R (1958) 2 All 1 : AIR 1958 All 729 (731) (Pt C) (Pr 6) (DB).

——Ss. 106 and 111 — Determination of lease—Essentials.

In a suit for rent the defendant alleged that he had never been a tenant of the plaintiff. The plaintiff by producing evidence succeeded in proving that the defendant was a tenant. In revision, for the first time, the defendant contended that as he had informed the plaintiff when he gave a notice that he was not a lessee, the lease should be deemed to have terminated thereon and that the suit for rent thereafter did not lie.

Held, that for a proper termination of the tenancy the tenant should make over possession to the landlord. In the present case the defendant not only did not make over possession but also denied, having ever got into possession of the premises. Therefore, it became necessary for the Court to determine whether the defendant was a tenant of the plaintiff and the plaintiff could claim rent by proving that he was a tenant. Hence, under the circumstances, it could not be argued by the defendant that the tenancy had terminated : A I R 1937 Lah 121; I L R 22 Bom 348 and AIR 1953 Mad 996, Disting. 1957 All L J 507 : AIR 1958 All 32 (33, 34) (Pt D) (Pr 8).

——S. 106—Landlord and Tenant—Creation of new tenancy subsequent to decree for ejectment obtained by landlord—Test—Onus.

The test for deciding the question whether after the decree for ejectment obtained by the landlord the transmission of rent by money order from tenants and the acceptance thereof by the landlord raises an inference of a new tenancy is, whether quo animo the rent was received and what the real intention of both parties was; (1775) 1 Comp. 243, Relied on; (1949) 1 A E R 768; 58 C W N 438, Ref.

In order to find out whether the money transmitted by the plaintiffs tenants as rent was transmitted as such and whether the receipt of the money by the defendant landlord was received by the latter as such, surrounding circumstances may be taken into consideration.

Where at the time when the money was transmitted for the first time the landlord had succeeded up to the lower appellate Court in his suit for ejectment of the tenants and in the suit filed subsequently by the tenants for declaration of tenancy right and for injunction restraining the landlord from executing his decree, the tenants did not suggest any specific date when the new tenancy came into existence nor did they state the terms of the tenancy and in the evidence also, one of the tenants stated that rents were deposited with the Rent Controller up to September and October, 1947, that thereafter no rent was paid for fifteen months and that then there was some change in the law and 'we again began to pay rent, this time by money order.'

Held, that the parties did not intend to bring into existence a new tenancy. The burden of proof lay on the tenants and they failed to discharge it. I L R (1956) 1 Cal 136 : 58 Cal W N 602 : A I R 1955 Cal 229 (230, 231) (Pt B) (Prs 8, 9) (DB).

It cannot be said that the notice of ejectment required by S. 106 of the Transfer of Property Act should be given after the expiry of one month from the service of notice of demand under S. 3 (1) (a) of the U. P. (Temporary) Control of Rent and Eviction Act. The Transfer of Property Act is the general law of land. The U. P. (Temporary) Control of Rent and Eviction Act is a special and local enactment, and as such overrides the provisions of the general Act so far as it is in conflict therewith. The two acts have to be read together and the provisions of the general Act will stand amended to the extent of the inconsistency with the special Act, S. 3 of the U. P. (Temporary) Control of Rent and Eviction Act creates a bar to the ejectment of the tenant. Unless the bar is removed, no tenant is liable to be ejected. Therefore, that although the notice under S. 106 of the Transfer of Property Act has been given, the tenant is not liable to be ejected until one of the conditions laid down in S. 3 of the U. P. (Temporary) Control of Rent and Eviction Act is fulfilled. Thus in spite of the expiry of the notice given under S. 106 of the Transfer of Property Act, and in spite of the provisions of S. 111 of the Transfer of Property Act, the tenant does not cease to be a tenant till the bar to his ejectment laid down in S. 3 of the U. P. (Temporary) Control of Rent and Eviction Act is lifted. A suit for ejectment filed after the expiry of the two periods, i. e., the period of fifteen days as provided in S. 106 of the Transfer of Property Act and the period of one month as provided in S. 3 (1) (a) of the U. P. (Temporary) Control of Rent and Eviction Act, is rightly instituted. 1956 All L J 787.

Held, on facts that the sale having been validly repudiated by the plaintiff, the relationship of landlord and tenant which was subsisting between parties on the date of sale continued uninterrupted. The rights of lessor and lessee would have merged in the larger estate created by sale but as the transaction of sale was voidable and stood repudiated, the rights of lessor and lessee continued to subsist between the parties unimpaired. The doctrine of merger could not be invoked in the case because the entire estate could not be held to be united in the same person due to the sale being ineffective.

The plaintiff was, therefore, entitled to keep alive the old tenancy which began from the 10th of every English month. The notice given was legal. 1954 Nag L J 573, Foll. 1963 M P L J (Notes) 136.

—Ss. 106 and 111 (g) — Requisites of valid notice —Denial of lessor's title — When operates as forfeiture of lease.

A valid notice to quit under S. 106 of the Transfer of Property Act should determine the tenancy by the time of 15 days expiring with the end of the month of tenancy. The notice should specifically state what the month of the tenancy was.

In order to plead in a suit that a denial of the title of lessor or a disclaimer of the tenancy operates as forfeiture of the lease under S. 111 (g) of the Transfer of Property Act, the denial forfeiture must have occurred prior to the suit and should form part of the cause of action on which the suit is based. A denial of tenancy after the suit is instituted will not operate as a forfeiture under S. 111 (g) of the T. P. Act. 73 Mad L W 688 : (1960) 2 Mad L J 351.

——Ss. 106 and 116 — Expiry of lease by efflux of time:— Tenant continuing in possession by virtue of Rent Control Legislation— Payment and acceptance of rent by landlord—Status of tenant—Notice under S. 106—Necessity.

Where a contractual tenancy to which the rent control legislation applies has expired by efflux of time or by determination by notice to quit and the tenant continues in possession of the premises by virtue of statutory protection, acceptance of rent from the tenant by the landlord after the expiration or determination of the contractual tenancy will not afford ground for holding that the landlord has assented to a new contractual tenancy. Apart from an express contract, conduct of the parties may undoubtedly justify an inference that after determination of the contractual tenancy, the landlord had entered into a fresh contract with the tenant. The statute protects his possession so long as the conditions which justify a lessor in obtaining an order of eviction against him do not exist. Once the prohibition against the exercise of jurisdiction by the Court is removed the right to obtain possession by the lessor under the ordinary law springs into action and the exercise of the lessor's right to evict the tenant will not, unless the statute provides otherwise, be conditioned.

Held, on facts that A had not acquired the status of a tenant holding over within the meaning of S. 116, T. P. Act and as such notice prescribed by S. 106, T. P. Act was not necessary. ——Ss. 106, 107, 116 — Lease — Expiry of — Lease not validly terminated—Lessee continuing in possession of land—Lease is renewed but not continued — Period of lease counts according to nature of tenancy —Protest from lessee against enhancement of rent disentitles lessor to enhanced rent — Yearly lease does not require registration — Year to year lease also does not require registration where lease is result of operation of law and not act of parties.

Section 116 of the Transfer of Property Act provides that if a lessee remains in possession of the leased property after the determination of the lease and the lessor assents to his continuing in possession the lease is, in the absence of an agreement to the contrary, renewed from year to year, or month to month according to the purpose for which the property is leased as specified to S. 106 of the Act.

Held, on facts that since the lessee remained in possession of the leased property after the determination of the lease on 15-7-50, there being no agreement to the contrary the lease being for industrial purposes it must be deemed to have been renewed from year to year as specified in S. 106 of the Transfer of Property Act. There was thus a renewal of lease from 16-7-50 and one of the terms of the lease was that it was a lease from year to year and in terms of S. 106 of the T. P. Act, it was a lease terminable by six months notice expiring with the end of a year of the tenancy. A perusal of S. 116 of the Act would show that the lease had determined but it was renewed. The renewal of the lease would mean that its terms and conditions would be the same as the previous lease except that having regard to the nature of the lease it would be deemed to have been renewed from year to year in view of the specific provisions contained in S. 116 of the T. P. Act. The appellant was not therefore, required to pay more than Rs. 1,000 a year for continuing to be in possession of the land.

As a result of holding over the old lease is terminated but it is renewed. It is not the case of the original lease continuing. The terms of the new lease would however be the same as the old lease except that it would be a lease from year to year or from month to month according to the nature of the tenancy. If a lease is granted for a fixed period of three years and is terminable after the expiry of the period and there is holding over after the termination of the lease the new lease will not be a lease for three years but will be a lease from year to year or from month to month according to the nature of the lease, i.e., if it is a lease for industrial or agricultural purposes it would be a lease from year to year and if it is a lease for any other purpose if would be a lease from month to month.

Since the petitioner had protested against the enhancement of rent and the Government did not take any ejectment proceedings, Government is not entitled to claim rent at the enhanced rate. Where enhanced rate of rent is proposed by a landlord and the tenant continues to occupy the leasehold property without any protest as to the proposed enhancement in rent, then alone the latter should be deemed to have accepted the proposal. A I R 1933 Oudh 465, Foll.

In order that a tenancy may be vaildly terminated the notice should be in accordance with the provisions of: S. 106, of the T. P. Act, i e., a six months' notice expiring with the end of the year of the tenancy. In the absence of such a notice the holding ever continues, and the tenancy is not terminated.

It is true that an unregistered lease-deed does not create a tenancy and there would then be no question of holding over under S. 116 of the T. P. Act but in order that the provisions of S. 107 of the Act may apply to a lease, it should be a lease from year to year or for a term exceeding one year or it should be a lease reserving a yearly rent; the section does not apply where the lease is only for a year. The term 'year to year' implies that the tenancy continues so long as the party desires it to continue though it is terminable at the option of either party at the end of any year. The lease from year to year is: not ipso facto determined at the end of every year. When a lease is only for a year, it is determined at the end of the year. Where the term used is 'yearly rent' it implies that the lease is for a number of years or at least is not for one year only. The provisions of S. 107 of the T. P. Act do not apply even to a year to year lease where such a lease is the result of operation of law and is not the act of the parties concerned. 1965 All L J 275 : ILR (1965) 2 All 519 : AIR 1965 All 326 (330, 331, 332) (Pt A) (Prs 11, 12, 18, 19, 20, 21) (DB).

——Ss. 106, 116—Year or month of tenancy—Tenant holding over with consent of landlord after expiry of term in middle of month — Payment of rent according to English Calendar month — Nature and commencement of tenancy.

Where a tenant after the expiry of the term of his lease on the 25th of the English Calendar month, continued to hold over the premises with the consent of the plaintiff landlord at an enhanced rent which was used to be realised according to the English Calendar month the monthly tenancy would not coincide with the English Calendar month but the month of the tenancy would be from the 25th of one month to the 24th of the following month, and in order to prove that the month of the old tenancy was altered by a fresh agreement the plaintiff must prove that fact by more satisfactory evidence. The mere payment of rent from month to month according to English Calendar would not be sufficient, by itself, to prove the month of the tenancy, because the month of the tenancy may very well be different from the month according to which rent is realised, and the payment of rent according to English Calendar may be merely a mode of payment and nothing more. 59 I A 414, Rel. on. Alteration of the month of a tenancy may be proved either by direct evidence by proving a new agreement by which the month of the original tenancy was expressly altered or by circumstantial evidence showing that whereas formerly rent used to be realised from the middle of one month to the middle of another, subsequently the rent for the broken period of this calendar month was either paid or adjusted and rent was paid from month to month according to English Calendar. If rent used to be realised from month to month according to English Calendar both during the period when the monthly tenancy ran from the middle of one month to the middle of another and during the period when the monthly tenancy coincided with English Calendar month, the mode of realisation of rent is inconclusive. 61 C W N 407 : AIR 1957 Cal 357 (358, 359) (Pt B) (Prs 7, 8, 11) (DB).

——Ss. 106, 116 -Terms as to notice cannot be imported under S. 116 when tenant holds over.

Terms of the expired lease cannot be imported under S. 116 when the tenant holds over. Thus the term in the expired lease that the tenant was to surrender possession after the termination of the period of lease and no notice under S. 106 would be necessary, cannot be imported as one of the terms on which the tenant would hold over under S. 116, after the termination of the lease. Where a notice to quit given by the lessor to the lessee is coupled with a demand for enhanced rate of rent if the lessee should continue in possession after the date fixed in the notice and the lessee continues in possession in spite of such notice then in a suit for ejectment brought by the lessor against the lessee the lessor cannot as of right claim enhanced rate of rent according to the notice because a demand for the enhanced rate given in the notice is in the nature of an offer and unless it is accepted by the lessee, he cannot enforce that condition by his unilateral action.

In such a case the Court has, however, power to award damages to the plaintiff but the grant of damages is in the discretion of Court and the exercise of such discretion by the lower appellate Court would not be interfered with in second appeal unless there are good grounds to do so. 1955 Raj L W 129 : AIR 1955 Raj 167 (173) (Pt H) (Pr 33).

Notice to terminate tenancy was given under instructions from one out of the two managing trustees of a temple and the suit was filed in the name of the deity though the trust was registered in the name of the temple. It was urged that as the trust was not registered in the name of the deity but in the name of the temple, there was no identity established between the plaintiff and the registered public trust.

Held:—The contrast between the two provisions, Rules (1) and (2) of O. 31, Civil P. C., made it clear that a trustee could represent beneficiaries and it was not necessary to join all the trustees compulsorily though the Court in suitable cases might order them or any of them to be impleaded as parties but when the suit was between trustees all the trustees must be joined to the suit. 1953 Nag L J 667, Foll.

The Deity being the owner of the property could act only through some human agency in sending the notice. The notice sent by the managing trustee of the temple, had to be reasonably construed and could not be interpreted in a pedantic manner. Thus interpreted, it was on behalf of no other person but the deity itself. It could not reasonably be inferred in the case that the identity of the person sending the notice and the identity of the plaintiff was different. 1963 M P L J (Notes) 46.

——S. 106 — Joint tenants—Notice terminating tenancy sent to the address of one of them — Tenant refusing to accept—Effect of.

A notice calling upon two joint tenants to quit but sent to the address of one of them is in law a notice addressed to both. The address on the envelop is no part of the notice but only a direction to the post office to deliver the letter to a particular person. A I R 1935 Bom 247, Dissented from. The requirement with regard to service of notice is fulfilled if it is sent by post to the person concerned and it was tendered or delivered personally to him. Section 106, does not say that the notice is not complete unless tenant accepts it, but merely that it should be tendered or delivered.

In case of joint tenants tender of notice on one is sufficient notice on all and it is immaterial whether it is accepted or refused, for the requirements of S. 106 are complied with. If joint tenants are permitted to take shelter behind the refusal of one of them to accept it, it would be impossible for the landlord to serve a valid notice terminating a joint tenancy, because one of the tenants would keep refusing the notice while the others keep out of its way. 1965 All L J 880 : 1964 All W R (HC) 351 : AIR 1965 All 287 (287) (Prs 4, 5).

Held, further that for the reasons for which the notice under S. 106 has been held to be sufficiently served on all the joint lessees, the notice demanding rent may be taken to have reached all the lessees. 1956 All W R (HC) 543 : 1956 All L J 650.

——Ss. 106, 105 — Lease to Hindu in his personal capacity — Tenant dying leaving several heirs including married daughters:— Heirs joint tenants and not tenants-in-common vis-a-vis landlord — Notice terminating tenancy to some — Valid and binds all heirs—'Family' in S. 106 meaning — Hindu Succession Act (1956), Ss. 11 and 19.

Where a Hindu obtains a lease of certain shop premises in his own right and dies intestate leaving several heirs of the first degree under the Hindu Succession Act, the succeeding heirs hold under the leasehold vis-a-vis the landlord as co-tenants or co-lessees. All the co-lessees or tenants hold as joint tenants in the sense that they have a single tenancy relationsnip with the landlord and they are not different tenants vis-a-vis the landlord, and a notice terminating the tenancy under S. 106, T. P. Act, served on one or some of the co-tenants, would be a valid and good notice to all, provided notice is intended to be notice to all the joint tenants.

The position is not altered even though some of the heirs are daughters who are married and reside at other places in their husband's families. The word "family" in the context in which it is used in S. 106, T. P. Act includes all those who are connected by blood relation or by marriage with each other, and in that sense would cover married daughters.

Even in the case of Hindu families girls who are married and go to the husband's families do not cease to belong to the family of the father. Whatever may be the concept at one time under the existing law, even married daughters take substantial interest in the family and the family property. Thus, the prevailing concept as to "family" far from being restricted, has been considerably expanded by creating interest in the family and substantial interest for many persons who had no such interest in the property, such as widows of pre-deceased heirs, or even married or unmarried daughters or widowed daughters. 65 Bom L R 647 : 1963 Mah L J 883 : I L R (1964) Bom 391 : A I R 1964 Bom 96 (99, 100) (Prs 11, 12, 16, 17, 18).

25. Period of notice.

——S. 106—Underlying principle.

The principle underlying the rule contained in S. 106 seems to be that the tenant must have a clear 15 days' time prior to the end of the month of his tenancy, so that he may in the meanwhile remove his effects after arranging for another accommodation. If in addition to these 15 days he is allowed a few hours more, so that he leaves the premises by the first day of the ensuing month, he cannot be said to be prejudiced. Indeed he has little more time to do the needful to comply with the notice served by the landlord. It would be too technical and hairsplitting to hold that, because of the tenant having been given a little more time even after the expiry of the month of the tenancy, he has been prejudiced and the landlord must wait for another month to give somewhat less generous notice and thereby procure his tenant's ejectment. A notice asking the tenant to vacate the houses "by the 1st May, 1947" and not on or by the 30th April, 1947 is not therefore, an invalid notice. 1952 All L J 727 : 1952 All W R (HC) 18 : AIR 1953 All 218 (219) (Pt B) (Pr 13).

——S. 106—Lessee to the knowledge of lessor using land for manufacturing purpose—Six months' notice necessary.

——Ss. 106 and 110—Notice to quit Construction—Month to month tenancy — Calculation of period—Omission of first day of month not necessary.

Section 110 has no application to the case of a tenancy from month to month. Therefore, it is not necessary to omit from calculation the first day of the month. The notice to quit would be a valid notice if it expires with the end of the month of tenancy. Hence, where the tenancy from month to month commenced from the 8th of a month, a notice to vacate the premises by the 7th of a month would be a valid notice : Further, notices to quit are not to be construed with a desire to point faults in them. A notice need not be worded with the accuracy of a plea. I L R (1962) Madh Pra 689 : 1963 MPLJ 157 : 1963 Jab L J 305.

——S. 106—Period of notice.

Under S. 106, in the absence of a contract to the contrary, the tenant is entitled to a notice for a period equal to half the length of the term of the tenancy, secondly, he is also entitled, without prejudice to this right, to stay on till the end of a full month or a full year of the tenancy, as the case may be. If, the time given is in excess of the half term of the tenancy and the tenant is able to stay on for a half term before the date of the termination of the lease period, the section is complied with and in fact, more than complied with, though the notice terminates the tenancy on a date other than the one on which the lease term itself ends. 1961 Jab L J 140 : 1961 MPLJ 446 : AIR 1961 Madh Pra 232 (233) (Pr 3).

——S. 106 — Notice expiring with end of month of tenancy—Notice held valid.

A monthly tenancy commenced on the first day of each Hindi month. The landlord by his notice had required the tenant to vacate the premises on the first day of the month following the month in which the notice was given. As such, the notice expired with the end of the month of the tenancy. As a further precaution the landlord had allowed the tenant to vacate the premises on such day of the Hindi calendar month as the latter himself believed to be the date on which the tenancy expired.

——S. 106 — Notice to quit 'on a particular date' — Meaning.

The legal connotation of the expression 'to quit on a particular day' is that the person required to quit can remain in occupation till the midnight of that day if he so desires. Where therefore a month to month tenancy expires on the 30th of September, a clear 15 days notice to quit 'on the 30th September' is a perfectly valid notice. Though a notice should as far as possible be liberally construed and must not be allowed to be defeated merely by reason of certain minor errors or inaccuracies, yet where the language of the notice is such that it is difficult to come to the conclusion that the tenant must necessarily have understood the notice to mean that he was required to hand over possession of the properties upon the expiry of a full and clear year as defined in S. 2 (20), the landlord cannot ask for interpretation of the notice upon a liberal construction. AIR 1918 P C 102, Rel. on.

Held, that the expressions 'before the 31st March, 1950' and 'you are to hand over possession to us for our personal cultivation before the abovementioned date,' in the Notice taken together meant that the tenant was called upon to hand over possession of the fields not on 31st March, 1950 itself, latitude being left to him to choose his own time on that day, but even on any date before 31st March, 1950. The landlord used language which was really slipshod and the benefit of slipshod language could not be given to him. AIR 1956 Bom 113 (114) (Prs 5, 6) (DB).

——S. 106—Notice to quit — 'Expiring with the end of a month of tenancy'.

By the notice, the defendant was asked to vacate within the 30th April, but that was followed by another clause, requiring delivery of possession on the 1st of May.

Held, that reading the two clauses together, there could be no question of any ambiguity in the notice to quit, or of any defect and that the notice to quit was legal, proper and sufficient. (1956) 60 Cal W N 308.

——S. 106 — Notice terminating tenancy as per month of tenancy and also mentioning two additional earlier dates on which tenant could determine it — Notice held valid.

Held that so far as the landlord was concerned, he determined the tenancy on 30th November, 1959, which was a date certain and the last day of the month of the tenancy. The notice to quit, therefore, expired with the month of the tenancy. The two other dates suggested by the landlord-plaintiff were not the alternative dates on which the plaintiff sought to terminate the tenancy of the defendant, so as to render the date of termination of the tenancy vague and uncertain but they merely represented the dates earlier in point of time than the actual date of termination of the tenancy, at which the plaintiff was prepared to accept the determination of the tenancy. This did not have the effect of invalidating the notice. (1962) 3 Guj L R 113 : A I R 1962 Guj 229 (231) (Pt B):(Pr 4).

——S. 106—Notice to quit—Construction—Monthly tenancy commencing from second day of month — Notice to quit by midnight of the last day of the month or on the day when the 'time of the notice expired'—Validity.

Notices to quit, though not strictly accurate or consistent in the statements embodied in them may still be good and effective in law; the test of their sufficiency is not what they would mean to a stranger ignorant of all the facts and circumstances touching the holding to which they purport to refer but what they would mean to tenants presumably conversant with all those facts and circumstances; and further, they are to be construed not with a desire to find fault in them which would render them defective but to be construed ut res magis valeat quam pereat. But these principles are applicable to notices containing mistakes honesty but inadvertently made and not to inaccuracies deliberately inserted for fraudulent purposes. A I R 1918 P C 102, Foll. Where monthly tenancy commenced from the second day of the month and the notice determining the tenancy gave the option to the tenant to vacate either by the midnight of the last day of the month or on the day when the 'time of the notice expired' and it was beyond doubt that the error in the notice was an honest but inadvertent error. ——S. 106 — Tenancy commencing from 1st day of English Calendar month — Notice to vacate on 31st July, 1960 is valid—Validity of notice should not be decided on hypertechnical considerations.

The tenancy being a monthly tenancy commencing from 1st of English Calendar month, the landlord served a notice on the tenant calling upon him to vacate the premises on 31st July, 1960. It was contended that the notice was invalid as it did not expire at the end of the month of the tenancy.

Held, that the intention of the plaintiff was to give the tenant time till midnight of 31st July, 1960. Notice was, therefore, not invalid. A notice can require the tenant to vacate at or before the midnight of the last day, but even so as the tenant has the legal right to occupy the premises till the last moment of the midnight, a notice requiring him to vacate on the 1st moment of the next day cannot also be said to be bad. The validity of the notice ought not to depend on such hypertechnical considerations and consequently—Courts have held both notices expiring on the last date and those expiring on the next date to be valid, thus leaving out of account the fraction of a day. No distinction should be drawn between tenancies commencing "at" a particular time or "on" a particular day and "from" the same day, because "at", "on", "from" and "on and from" are for this purpose equivalent expressions and any distinction between them is far too subtle for practical use. 1965 Jab L J 366 : 1965 M P L J (Notes) 62 : ILR (1965) Madh Pra 824 : A I R 1965 Madh Pra 140 (141, 142) (Prs 3, 5).

——S. 106 — Tenancy commencing on 19th of a month —Landlord giving notice purporting to terminate tenancy on 19th—Notice not invalid.

The tenancy commenced on 19th of a month. The landlord issued notice purporting to terminate the tenancy on 19th. It was contended that the landlord should have terminated the tenancy on the 18th as the month of tenancy commenced on the 19th of a month. The lower Courts interpreted the notice as meaning that the tenant was expected to vacate the premises on the day mentioned. There was no suggestion that the interpretation was wholly unreasonable or that the tenant was misled by the notice. Therefore, the contention that the notice was not valid on this ground was not accepted. (1962) 40 Mys L J 611.

——Ss. 106 and 110 and S. 116—Lease for a definite period—Day of commencement not fixed — Notices under S. 106 determining the lease — Exclusion of the date of the lease—If necessary.

Lease deeds, dated 6th August 1944, and 1st January 1946 in respect of portions of a premises in favour of different persons were for a period of 11 months in each case. The tenants were holding over. Notices determining their tenancies were issued on 11th August 1949. Whereby the leases were determined by the midnight of 5th September 1949 and 31st August 1949, respectively and possession was demanded on the mornings of 6th September 1949 and 1st September 1949, respectively. In a suit for eviction founded on such notices the first appellate Court, held the notices were short by 12 hours.

Held, in order to apply the rule of interpretation under S. 110, T. P. Act in the matter of the exclusion of the day in the computation of the period of the lease, it should have been expressed that the lease commenced from a particular day. Where no such day is named the principle of exclusion of the particular date does not arise ; the section itself states that where no day of commencement is named the time so limited begins from the making of the lease.

(i) The time began from the first and sixth of the months when the leases were made ;

(ii) Where the tenants were merely holding over the tenancies from month to month (subsequent to the period of the lease) under S. 116 and commenced on the corresponding dates of the leases ;

(iii) The notices terminating the leases on 31st September 1949 and 5th August 1949, the dates of the end of the months of tenancy in each case and demanding delivery on the morning of the subsequent days conformed to the requirements of T. The rent deed was dated 8-10-1934 and the notice given to the tenant mentioned that the defendant was to vacate the house "by 7th July 1949, or other date when the month ends".

Held, that though the date of the commencement of the tenancy is to be excluded, and, as such the month of tenancy was to expire on the midnight of 8th July, and not 7th July, as mentioned in the notice, the notice was regularised and validated by insertion of the subsequent clause "or other date when the month ends". ——S. 106—Calendar for calculation of time.

Where there is an express or implied contract that the period in a lease from year to year or month to month should be reckoned according to Bengali year and not according to British calendar, a notice expiring with end of the year or the month of the tenancy calculated according to the Bengail calendar will be sufficient to terminate the tenancy. ILR (1952) 4 Assam 441 : AIR 1953 Assam 202 (202) (Pt B) (Pr 5).

——S. 106—'Monthly tenancy' meaning of.

Section 106 of the Transfer of Property Act clearly contemplates any kind of "monthly tenancy" and it is well known that a monthly tenancy may be according to an English calendar, Bengali calendar Sambat calendar and so forth, and may commence on any day of the particular month, say, from the 5th of one to the 4th of the next and so on.

Hence it is incorrect to say that all tenancies from month to month under S. 106 must be according to the English calender in view of S. 33, General Clauses Act. View of Rau J. in 43 C W N 76, Diss. from. AIR 1952 Cal 19 (20) (Pt A) (Pr 6).

——S. 106—Notice to quit—Validity.

A notice to quit written in Bengali was given on 20-12-1948 calling upon the tenant to vacate 15 days after the notice within the month of Poush, that is to say, by the first of Magh. The month of the tenancy was the Bengali month.

Held, that the notice to quit was not defective. The intention was to give notice to the tenant to vacate at the end of the Bengali calender month which was known to be the month of tenancy. Out of a sort of extra caution whoever drafted the notice has mentioned the period of 15 days which is required under S. 106 and the meaning there is clearly that the vacating is to take place not less than 15 days after the receipt of the notice and within the month of Poush. AIR 1952 Cal 19 (20) (Pt B) (Pr 7).

——S. 106 — Notice to quit must terminate with the end of the month of tenancy—Rent note mentioning both Hindi Miti and English date for commencement of tenancy—Tenancy held was governed by English calendar in the absence of anything specific in the rent note to show that it was to be governed by Hindi calendar — (General Clauses Act (1897), Ss. 3 (33), (59) and S. 4). 29. Form of notice.

——S. 106—Landlord and Tenant—Notice terminating tenancy of house—Demanding incorrect rent — Validity of notice.

A landlord has to demand only the correct amount of the arrears of rent and not such arrears of rent as would not be recognized by a Court of law. Hence a notice demanding improper arrears of rent would be defective notice and would not entitle the landlord to ask for eviction of the tenant if the latter fails to pay it within one month. (1951) A M L J 34 : A I R 1951 Ajmer 54 (1) (54) (Pt B) (Pr 2).

——S. 106—Notice to quit—First part of notice clearly asking tenant to vacate — Second part of it showing intention of landlord to continue tenancy without effecting termination if tenant pays enhanced rent — Notice is not an effective notice terminating the tenancy.

The notice terminating the tenancy must be unconditional unequivocal and clear that is to say a tenant whose tenancy is intended to be terminated and who is asked to quit has no power left to arrest the effect of it and a tenancy must stand terminated on the expiry of the notice period. But in a case where before the expiry of the notice period and before the tenancy actually comes to an end the tenant is afforded some alternative or some condition on the compliance of which the existing tenancy continues even though on modified terms such a notice would not be unequivocal, unambiguous and clear notice to quit.

Where the landlords had served a notice to the tenant on 30-12-1959 clearly asking the tenant in the earlier part of the notice to quit and hand over the possession of the accommodation on the expiry of the 30th day of the receipt of the notice and in the second part of the notice the tenant was asked to pay the specified enhanced rent from 1st January 1960.

Held, that the notice in question did not comply with the requirement of law and was not an effective notice terminating the tenancy within the meaning of S. 108. (1879) 4 Ex D 201 and A I R 1921 All 194 and 19 Ind Cas 758 (All), Disting. On the principles of harmonious construction of documents and to avoid conflict the document should be read as a whole and the second part could only be reconciled as showing an intention on the part of the landlords to continue the tenancy without effecting its termination if the tenant agreed to pay the enhanced rent. The offer by the landlords to the tenant to have the tenancy continued on the payment of the enhanced rent could not be construed as an offer for entering into a new contract of tenancy for the simple reason that by his acceptance of that offer on any day before 29th January 1960 the tenant could continue the existing tenancy on a higher rent and avoid the consequences of handing over possession on the expiry of 30th day from the receipt of the notice. 1964 All W R (HC) 595 : 1964 All L J 1105 : A I R 1965 All 323 (324, 325) (Prs 2, 3).

What is required by the provisions of Ss. 106 (as amended in U. P.) and 111 (h) is that in the case of tenancy from month to month terminable on thirty days notice a notice terminating the tenancy should be given and that the tenancy is terminated on the expiry of thirty days. The mere use of present tense in the notice as 'your tenancy is terminated' and not 'your tenancy is terminated today' does not mean that the landlord is terminating the tenancy in presenti. The use of present tense is quite consistent with the termination of the tenancy in future when the act by which the tenancy is to terminate in future is done in presenti. 1963 All L J 567 : 1963 All W R (HC) 490 : ILR (1963) 2 All 729 : A I R 1963 All 581 (583) (Pt B) (Pr 3) (DB).

A composite notice under S. 3 of the U. P. (Temporary) Control of Rent and Eviction Act as well as S. 106, T. P. Act is valid.

Where the notice stated that the tenant should vacate the house within thirty days of the service of the notice and should deliver possession of the house to the landlord next day.

Held, that reading the former clause requiring the tenant to vacate within thirty days, by itself the notice would be invalid but this clause stood qualified by the subsequent clause of delivering the possession next day. Obviously the intention of the landlord was that the tenant should vacate the house on the 30th day and then deliver possession next day. 1956 A L J 787, Rel. on. 1962 All W R (HC) 822 : 1962 All L J 1035.

The joint status of a family is not disrupted simply because the widow of a deceased coparcener gets an interest in the joint family property in respect of which she can claim partition. If the joint status of the family continues, the karta of the family must be held to be entitled to be continue managing the affairs of the family and to represent the entire family including the widow in all affairs. Whatever the karta does in the interest of the family must be held to have been done on behalf of all the members including the widow. Where two sons of a landlord who were admittedly managing the affairs of the family, served a notice of ejectment on the tenants they must be deemed to have done so on behalf of the entire family including their mother. —S. 106—Notice to quit — Construction—Test of sufficiency—Notice requiring vacant possession.

The notices to quit though not strictly accurate or consistent in the statements embodied in them may still be good and effective in law; the test of their sufficiency is not what they would mean to a stanger ignorant of all the facts and circumstances touching the holding to which they purport to refer, but what they would mean to tenants presumably conversant with all those facts and circumstances; and further, they are to be construed not with a desire to find fault in them which would render them defective but to make such use of them as may be possible (ut res magis valeat quam pereat). A I R 1918 P C 102 : 35 M L J 707 (P C), Relied on. Where a monthly tenancy was terminable by the end of a month of the Gregorian Calendar, a notice requiring the tenant to give vacant possession by the end of June, 1950 cannot be held to be improper. All that the landlord wanted was that the tenant should quit the land by the 30th June, which act by itself would amount to delivery of possession to the landlord. An independent act of delivery of possession to the lessor is not essential in case of the lessee quitting the land under a lease and as such, it could not be construed that the intention of the landlord was that the tenant should give up possession before the midnight of 30th June, 1950. ILR (1954) 6 Assam 60 : AIR 1956 Assam 96 (96) (Prs 1, 2, 3).

——S. 106 — Notice to quit — Sufficiency — Reason given in notice—If material.

Where the notice to quit recited that the defendant No. 1 was the tenant and that the defendant No. 2 had merely paid portions of the rent by cheques and that as a matter of abundant caution, the notice was also served on him, the reason given in the notice to quit is not material for determining the question whether the notice under S. 106, T. P. Act, was sufficient or not. The essential requisite is whether the person intended to be bound by the notice was asked to vacate the premises in question. The notice is, therefore, sufficient to determine the tenancy of defendant No. 2 if such a tenancy is ultimately found to be true. AIR 1952 Cal 221 (222) (Pt B) (Pr 8).

——Ss. 106 — Notice to quit with demand for enhanced rent if tenant stays on — Acceptance — Effect of.

A notice to quit with a demand for enhanced rent if the tenant stays in the premises must be deemed to be an offer of a fresh tenancy on revised terms which if accepted, expressly or impliedly, will generate a new contract in supersession of the old.

Where the tenant in reply to such notice not only contested his liability for enhanced rent but also denied the specific arrangement set up by the plaintiff.

Held, that no acceptance of a fresh tenancy could be inferred from the circumstances and therefore the landlord's claim for enhanced rent was unsustainable. 1959 Ker L J 1413 : 1960 Ker L T 65 : (1960) 1 Ker L R 107 : AIR 1960 Ker 216 (218) (Pr 6).

——Ss. 106 and 111 (h) — Notice to quit need not mention any breach committed by the tenant — Notice mentioning a breach committed by tenant not invalid.

A lease of immovable property is determined in any one of several ways detailed in S. 111 of the Transfer of Property Act. Even where forfeiture has been incurred, the landlord may still choose to determine the tenancy by a notice to quit as contemplated by clause (h) of that section. Where, therefore, the tenancy is determined by a valid notice to quit, it cannot be challenged as invalid only on the ground that the notice mentions a breach committed by the tenant. 1963 M P L J (Notes) 44.

——S. 106 — Notice to quit — It is not necessary to specify exact date of termination of tenancy—Exact date of commencement of tenancy unknown—Notice to quit at expiry of next month of tenancy is valid—Notice not to be construed in a manner as would work hardship on the tenant, nor to strain the language too much against the landlord. 1954 N L J 436 : AIR 1954 Nag 292 and (1948) 1 K B 444, Rel. on. 1962 M P L J (Notes) 290.

——S. 106 — Date of commencement of tenancy need not be stated in the notice terminating the tenancy.

The date of commencement of the tenancy need not be mentioned in the notice given under S. 106 of the Transfer of Property Act terminating the tenancy. ——S. 106 — 'Fifteen days' notice' — Notice given more than 15 days before end of month—Validity.

If a notice gives at least 15 days to the tenant and if it expires with the end of the month of tenancy it is a good notice to determine the lease. The period should not be less than 15 days but there is no outside limit; the notice can be given several months before the date on which the landlord desires to determine the lease. 1960 M P C 365 : 1960 M P L J 87 : 1960 Jab L J 190 : AIR 1960 Madh Pra 134 (135) (Pt B) (Pr 4).

——S. 106 — Quit notice — Specification of leased premises—Necessity.

A quit notice under S. 108 of the Transfer of Property Act does not require the specification of the leased premises to be mentioned in the notice. In the absence of any description of the leased premises, the presumption would be that the notice relates to the property which was actually leased out. 1960 M P L J (Notes) 161.

——S. 106—Notice to quit—Notice demanding rent in arrears—If bad.

The plaintiff brought a suit for ejectment and arrears of rent alleging termination of tenancy by notice to quit and non-payment of rent for over a month in spite of notice to pay the arrears of rent. It was contended that the notice of demand was vague and did not mention the rent which was due then.

Held, that since only one month's rent was due to be paid on the date of receipt of notice there could have been no vagueness as the defendant must be credited with the knowledge what his monthly rent was. Moreover a notice demanding rent in arrears is not bad for vagueness. 1959 M P L J (Notes) 163.

In a monthly tenancy commencing on the first day of the month when the landlord gives a notice asking the tenant to vacate the premises at any time on the last date of the month, the substance of the demand is that the tenant should vacate before the expiry of the last date and should not reside beyond such expiry. It cannot be urged by a tenant that the notice requires him to vacate before the last date and so does not allow him to stay on the premises on the last day. (1960) 2 O J D 421 : ILR (1961) Cut 122.

——S. 106—Notice to quit sent in closed envelope — Refusal to accept delivery — Knowledge of contents can be imputed to addressee — Notice addressed to joint lessees tendered to and refused by one of them — Constructive knowledge to other lessees may be presumed.

Where a closed envelope is tendered to a person and he refuses to accept delivery of the same, he of course, has knowledge of the contents of that envelope but when he does not care to accept delivery of the envelope, the law should impute knowledge of the contents thereof to him, and it is on that basis that refusal to accept delivery of a registered or unregistered notice is regarded as sufficient notice of the contents of the envelope to the addressee. And, if in the case of a joint lease, service of the notice is to be deemed sufficient on the tenant other than the one to whom it was actually tendered (provided he was also one of the addressees) even he may be presumed to have constructive knowledge of the contents of the sealed or closed envelope. ——Ss. 106 (U. P.) and 111 (h)—Lease from month to month—Termination—Notice—Essentials.

A notice terminating the tenancy may include a demand for possession but a notice only demanding possession cannot be interpreted as a notice terminating the tenancy.

There is a distinction between terminating the tenancy at once and calling upon the tenant to deliver possession after 30 days (in the case of month to month tenancy) and terminating the tenancy after 30 days. In the former case the relationship of landlord and tenant comes to an end at once and the tenant is given a right to remain in possession for 30 days either as a licensee or as a tenant on sufferance whereas in the latter case he remains a tenant for 30 days. But where it is clear from the notice that the landlord did not intend to terminate the tenancy on the date on which he gave notice the mere fact that the notice also required the tenant to deliver possession at the end of thirty days would not mean that the tenancy was terminated on the date of the notice, for though, under the Act only a notice to terminate the tenancy is required and not a notice to deliver possession because it is the tenants' own duty to deliver possession as soon as his tenancy is terminated, it does not follow that a notice terminating the tenancy cannot include in it a demand for delivery of possession or that a notice to deliver possession means that the tenancy has already been terminated. 31. Service by post.

——S. 106—Service by post.

When a notice is sent by post and evidence given that the notice is so sent, a presumption arises that the letter reached its destination if the evidence also indicates that it was not received back undelivered. Similarly, if evidence is produced to show that the letter was tendered and refused by the addressee, it may be presumed that it was served on him. But where there was an endorsement on the envelope indicating that the tenant had disappeared in order to avoid taking the registered letter, no such presumption can be raised as the letter is received back undelivered. In such case it must be held that the notice was not sent by post. 1954 A M L J 32 : A I R 1954 Ajmer 65 (66) (Pt A) (Pr 2).

——S. 106—Service by post.

Notice sent by registered post returned to lessor with a note on envelop that it had been refused by lessee.

Held, that as the letter was actually returned to the sender, there could be no presumption of its having been received by the addressee and that without adducing evidence indicating the actual tender of the letter to the lessee and its refusal by him the lessor was not entitled to a decree for ejectment. 11 Ind Cas 35 and A I R 1919 Sind 66 (2), Disting. ——S. 106—Registered letter containing notice sent to tenant in arrears—Letter refused—Presumption of receipt of notice by tenant will be raised.

Where a tenant knows that he is in arrears of rent and receives a registered letter from the landlord but refuses to accept it, it will be presumed that he did it because he thought it contained a notice of demand and the onus is on him to rebut this presumption. 1963 All L J 25 : 1963 All W R (HC) 70 : A I R 1963 All 250 (251) (Pt B) (Pr 5).

——S. 106 (as amended by Act 20 of 1929)—Notice to quit—Service by post — Presumption — (Evidence Act (1872), S. 114).

The purpose of the amendment, evidently, was to make service by post an alternative provision for giving the notice under S. 106. The words requiring the delivery or tender of notice to the lessee 'personally or to one of his family or servants' did not apply to a notice sent by post. Under S. 106 as amended, it is not necessary that a notice sent by a registered post should be delivered personally to the lessee or to one of his family or his servants. Where the notice was received by somebody who signed on behalf of the addressee tenant, it is the duty of the tenant to prove that the person who signed was neither his servant nor agent nor a member of his family and in the absence of proof on this point the presumption which arose in the case of a registered letter delivered at the house in dispute could not be rebutted. 1957 All L J 504 : 1957 All W R (HC) 478 : AIR 1958 All 369 (370, 371) (Pt B) (Prs 5, 6).

——S. 106, second part—Modes of service.

The relevant second part of S. 106 prescribes four modes of service of notice, the first by registered post, the second by personal tender and delivery, the third by service at residence by tender and delivery to a family member or servant and the fourth or the last by affixing or hanging in case the above second and third modes of personal service by tender and delivery be not practicable. This much, however, is clear from the language of the statute itself that affixing or hanging up of the notice cannot refer to the said first mode of service by registered post but has reference only to the second and the third mode, namely, personal service and service at residence. 65 Cal W N 1119 : 1962 Cal L J 46 : I L R (1962) 2 Cal 180.

Where the original lease was granted by a firm in 1942 before the Gwalior Transfer of Property Act (Samvat 2001) came into force and on account of partition amongst the members of the firm, the property leased came to the share of one of its members in 1948, after the said Act had come into force.

Held, that the right of the original lessor to eject the tenant without a notice as provided by S. 102 of the Gwalior Transfer of Property Act, was acquired by the new lessor and although the said Act came into force in the meanwhile, a notice as provided by S. 102 (corresponding to S. 106 of the T. P. Act) was not necessary to eject the tenant. Held, further that although S. 102 of the Gwalior Transfer of Property Act was not applicable in the case of leases made prior to the coming into force of the Transfer of Property Act and not containing a forfeiture clause, a reasonable notice determining the tenancy would be necessary. ——S. 106 — Leases prior to T. P. Act came into force—Applicability of equitable principles.

Although the Transfer of Property Act was not in force in Gangpur State prior to the merger (1-1-1948) the equitable principles of the Act could be applied in respect of leases which commenced prior to the coming into force of the said Act. That, however, does not mean that every provision of that Act should be applied to the very letter. Thus, the provision in S. 106 requiring that the notice should expire with the end of the month of the tenancy need not be literally applied, but reasonable notice should suffice. But the question as to what would be reasonable notice would depend upon the facts of each case, and no general rule can be laid down.

Held, in the circumstances, that one month's notice was quite reasonable. 21 Cut L T 231 : A I R 1956 Orissa 95 (95, 96) (Pt A) (Prs 4, 6).

——S. 106 — Applicability — Act does not apply to Delhi and Ajmer-Merwara—Notice to quit served on tenant—Technical defects in notice cannot make it invalid when there is substantial compliance with S. 106 — Notice on day following date of expiration of monthly tenancy served in manner provided by section — Tenant cannot contend that notice is of no effect on that ground. ——S. 106 — Applicability to leases created before Act was applied to area.

The Transfer of Property Act came into force in Marwar, i. e., the former Jodhpur State on 29th March 1949, and therefore the provisions of S. 106 of the Transfer of Property Act are not attracted to a case where the tenancy commenced prior to 29th March 1949. The provision of S. 106 of the Transfer of Property Act requiring the notice to expire with the end of the month of the tenancy is of a very technical nature and this provision cannot be invoked to a case to which the Transfer of Property Act would not apply.

Held, that as the notice to quit in the present case gave more than one month's time to the tenant to vacate it was not invalid. A I R 1933 Lah 134, Dist. 1959 Raj L W 81 : I L R (1959) 9 Raj 97.

——S. 107 — Finding as to the nature of tenancy in disregard of effect of S. 107, T. P. Act — Not binding in Second Appeal. See Civil P. C. (1908), S. 100. 1963 All L J 1005.

——Ss. 107 and 106—Lease for five years not signed by lessor—(Registration Act (1908), Ss. 2 (7), 17, 49).

A lease, where the Transfer of Property Act is in force can be made only in the manner laid down under S. 107 and where that method or manner has not been completely followed, there is no operative lease for purposes of the Transfer of Property Act. Where the document is not signed by the lessor the document may be valid for purposes of Registration Act but the Transfer of Property Act superimposes a further requirement and would not recognise it as a lease unless it conforms to its requirement. Where a lease is inoperative, the defect attaches to it from its very inception. Where a lease of five years is invalid and inoperative, the tenancy that is created by legal implication would only be a monthly tenancy under S. 106, the lease being for residential purposes and not for purposes of manufacture or agriculture. The document may be used for the collateral purpose of showing that defendant came to occupy the property as a tenant. But the term of five years is not enforceable. No lease for five years came into existence in legal contemplation. The tenancy from the beginning was a monthly tenancy under S. 106. It came into existence by implication of law. I L R (1957) 9 Assam 16 : AIR 1959 Assam 57 (58) (Pr 2) (DB).

——Ss. 107 and 117—Lease for agricultural purpose —Registration.

In the absence of any notification under S. 117, T. P. Act, the provisions contained in Ch. V will not apply to an agricultural lease. The requirements of S. 107 about execution and registration thus are not necessary to be fulfilled. ILR (1954) 6 Assam 95 : AIR 1954 Assam 102 (103, 104) (Pt A) (Pr 7).

——S. 107— Madras Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act (15 of 1946), S. 7 (3)(a)(ii), Proviso—Tenancy for specified period agreed upon—Oral lease—A lease of immoveable property for more than one year can be created under S. 107, T. P. Act (1882), only by a registered instrument — Without any express provisions in the Madras Building (Lease and Rent Control) Act (1946), validating leases invalid under the T. P. Act it cannot be held that the term fixed under an oral lease can be taken advantage of by a tenant in an application for eviction under S. 7 of the Madras Act (1946). See Houses and Rents—Madras Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act (15 of 1946), S. 7 (3) (a) (ii). AIR 1952 Mad 863.

——S. 107 — Creation of tenancy — Acceptance of rent by landlord's agent.

The mere fact that an agent accepts rents is not sufficient to establish a tenancy against the landlord unless the agent was specially authorised to grant leases in addition to recover rents. I L R (1951) Nag 895 : 1952 Nag L J 34 : AIR 1952 Nag 398 (401) (Pt F) (Pr 17) (DB).

——S. 107 — "Mustajir" lease—Nature of—Right to collect rent from tenants on land — If immovable property.

"Immovable property" as defined in the General Clauses Act, includes "benefits to arise out of land." A Mustajir lease is a lease of the right to collect rent from tenants who pay it for use and occupation of land, i. e., of a right to the benefits arising out of the land; such a lease is therefore a lease of immovable property within the meaning of S. 107, T. P. Act, and also under the Specific Relief Act. AIR 1952 Orissa 116 (117) (Pt A) (Pr 5) (DB).

—S. 107—Tenancy Laws—Bihar Tenancy Act (8 of 1885), S. 148—Lease defining shares of lessors and lessees — Suit for specified share of rent against all lessees holding them jointly and severally liable — Suit not framed in accordance with S. 148 of Bihar Tenancy Act—Court is competent to split up liabilities of different lessees—Lessees held liable for their share only even on equitable principle. 1962 BLJR 774.

—S. 107 — Permanent tenancy after Act—Verbal agreement — Sufficiency — Theory of lost grant not applicable.

However long the possession of the tenant may be and however costly and substantial the building he might have erected these acts of possession by themselves cannot, if the lease was created verbally after the passing of the Transfer of Property Act, and if the parties were aware of the nature of their respective interests in the land, confer a right of permanent tenancy, because this will amount to conferring upon a person a right which the statute enacts shall be conferred only by a registered instrument. The theory of lost grant cannot apply to a case where a tenancy is known to have been created after Transfer of Property Act: 60 M.L J 538; AIR 1931 P C 79, Rel. on. 1960 Pat L R 65 : AIR 1960 Pat 289 (290) (Pt A) (Pr 3) (DB).

—S. 107 — Scope — Lease executed on behalf of Board — Manner of execution—Effect of validity of lease. See Bihar and Orissa Local Self Government Act (3 of 1885), S. 29. AIR 1957 Pat 321 (DB).

—S. 107—Agreement resolving dispute as to interpretation of lease — (Registration Act (1908), S. 17 (1) (d).)

Where an agreement does not alter the terms of the lease but merely resolves a dispute as to its interpretation, it does not require registration. AIR 1952 Pat 409 (414, 415) (Pt E) (Pr 14) (DB).

—S. 107 — Registration Act (1908), S. 17 (1) (d)—Distinction between, pointed out.

A comparison of S. 107, T. P. Act, and S. 17 (1) (d), Registration Act, would show that leases of immovable property from year to year, or for any term exceeding one year, or reserving a yearly rent are compulsorily registrable according to both the Acts. According to the Registration Act, the registration of other leases is optional as provided in S. 18(c) According to the second paragraph of S. 107, T. P. Act, however, all other leases of immovable property may be made in two ways; that is either by a registered instrument, or by an oral agreement accompanied by delivery of possession. 1955 Raj L W 129 : AIR 1955 Raj 167 (169) (Pt A) (Pr 9).

—Ss. 107 and 105—Oral lease reserving yearly rent —Validity.

By S. 107 of the Transfer of Property Act a lease reserving a yearly rent must be made by a registered instrument. Where an oral lease reserves a yearly rent, the parties intend to create a lease from year to year but that intention not being expressed in the proper legal form cannot be given effect to. The Court cannot make a new bargain between the parties and hold that there is a good and valid lease for at least one year. 61 Cal W N 23 : ILR (1957) 3 Cal 636 : AIR 1957 Cal 625 (626) (Pt A) (Pr 6).

——Ss. 107, 106 — Yearly tenancy not registered — Tenancy is from month to month — Rent payable annually according to agreement—Agreement can be established by conduct — Agreement established — Refusal to accept tender of yearly rent— No default. See Houses and Rents — C. P. and Berar Letting of Houses and Rents Control Order (1949), Cl. 13. AIR 1960 Madh Pra 124 (DB).

The relevant portions of a lease which was a cooly chit, were as follows :

"As I have agreed to take from you for my residence the thatched shed, consisting of 30 carpenter's koles all round, with raised mud flooring and walls, with bamboo roofing with coconut rafters for 2 rooms and terraced with mango planks with coconut door-frames in eastern portion of your Kakkarat paramba, I have agreed to pay you an yearly rent of Rs. 6 and I shall myself repair and put up the thatched roofing every year, and pay you the rent of 8 annas per month and get receipt. I shall surrender the shed whenever you require the same without causing any loss whatever."

Held, that though an yearly rent was to be payable under the document, and the house had to be repaired every year, as long it remained in the occupation of the tenants, and though the mode of payment was just at the rate of 8 annas per month, still the fact remained that whenever the landlord demanded the surrender of the house, the tenants had no option but to quit and deliver vacant possession, without causing any loss whatsoever. These terms did not create a tenancy that could be said to come within the meaning of S. 107 of the Transfer of Property Act. They amounted only to a tenancy at will not necessitating a registered document. (1956) 2 Mad L J 75.

——S. 107 — Lease reserving yearly rent — Absence of registered deed — Admission of evidence — (Registration Act (1908), S. 49).

Where in a suit for ejectment the plea of the tenant attracts the first paragraph of S. 107, T. P. Act, the tenant cannot prove the fact either of a lease from year to year or a lease of immoveable property reserving yearly rent without a registered instrument in his favour. All other evidence, therefore, is shut out under S. 49, Registration Act, and this includes even the admission of the landlord to that effect. 1955 Nag L J 103 : ILR (1954) Nag 957: AIR 1955 Nag 27 (28) (Pt A) (Pr 6) (DB).

——S. 107 — Hisab Bandobasti Sair and Kabuliyat— Nature of — Section 105 — Registration — Necessity — Registration Act (1908), S. 17 (1) (d).

Held, that prima facie Hisab Bandobasti Sair looks like a patta given by the landlord to the settlee and the Kabuliat looked like a Kabuliyat, given by the tenant incorporating the terms mentioned in Hisab Bandobasti Sair. (2) That the former document appeared to be a merely a memorandum containing the terms of the settlement between the parties. It was merely a record of a transaction which had already taken place. It did not create any right, and could not be considered to be a lease within S. 105, T. P. Act. (3) Similarly the Kabuliat also did not amount to a 'lease' within S. 105, T. P. Act. (4) Even assuming them to be a lease, the parties never intended thereby to create a lease exceeding one year, and, therefore, there was no mention 'of reserving a yearly rent' in that lease. Even the mention of yearly rent in Hisab Bandobasti Sair would not make the lease as one 'reserving a yearly rent.' The documents therefore did not require registration under either S. 107, T. P. Act, or under S. 17(1)(d), Registration Act. 1956 B L J R 105.

——S. 107 — Applicability — 'Lease reserving yearly rent' — Meaning of — Registration Act (1908), S. 17 (1) (d).

Section 107, T. P. Act and S. 17 (1) (d) of the Registration Act, the provisions of which are the same, contemplate a lease in which a yearly rent is reserved, but such a lease must be one, which on a proper construction of it, would create a tenancy from year to year, or for more than one year. These sections would not apply to a case where the lease is either for one year only, or for a period less than one year, even though the rent for a year, or even a yearly rent is mentioned. 1956 B L J R 105.

——S. 107 — Applicability — Lease reserving yearly rent — Lease for one year — Kabuliyat embodying terms — If registrable — Rate of interest — (Registration Act (1908), Ss. 17 (1) (a), 47 and 49).

A lease in which a yearly rent is reserved must be one which on the proper construction of it would create a tenancy from year to year.

Held, on facts (1) that the lease being for one year it was not a lease of the kind falling within the first para. of S. 107, but was of a kind covered by Para. 2 of that section; (2) that the kabuliyat, which was not compulsorily registrable under S. 17 (1) (a) of the Registration Act, could be relied upon and looked into for the purpose of proving the oral agreement of the lease and its terms. AIR 1943 Lah 127 (FB), Rel. on. (3) that there was delivery of constructive possession which was quite sufficient for the purposes of S. 107. AIR 1943 Lah 127 (FB), Rel. on. (4) that the facts that the kabuliyat was executed some months after the commencement of the year and the final certificate of registration was endorsed by the Registering Officer after the expiry of the year for which the lease was granted, although the document had been presented for registration about a month after its execution made no difference. AIR 1958 Tripura 14 (15, 16) (Prs 9, 11 to 14).

7. Effect of non-registration.

——S. 107 — Unregistered lease — It does not create tenancy to which S. 110 would apply — Document would be inoperative—By implication of law monthly tenancy under S. 106 would be added. See T. P. Act (1882), S. 106. AIR 1955 NUC (Ajmer) 4791.

——S. 107 — Tenancy of immovable property — No registered lease deed — Inference.

A tenancy from year to year of immovable property as enjoined by S. 107 of the Transfer of Property Act must be created by a registered document. In the absence of a registered lease deed to only inference which can legitimately be arrived at is that the lease is a monthly lease. 1963 All L J 1005.

——S. 107 — Lease—Non-registration—Effect stated. See T. P. Act (1882), S. 105. AIR 1955 N U C (All) 2027.

——Ss. 107, 116 — Applicability — Holding over of tenant who held under an unregistered lease for a year fixing a monthly rent — Nature of the holding over.

Where a tenant was let in under an unregistered lease for a year which however only fixed a monthly rent, if he holds over after that period, he cannot claim to be holding over as a tenant from year to year as that would be nullifying the provisions of S. 107 of the T. P. Act which requires the yearly lease to be registered. He can be treated only as a tenant from month to month and will be entitled only to a month's notice. 1951 A W R (HC) 72 : AIR 1952 All 634 (635) (Prs 4, 5).

[NOTE: – The reasoning in the decision seems to be wrong as it is clearly in conflict with S. 116, T. P. Act. The lease by holding over under S. 116, though it may be from year to year does not require registration. There seems no question of negativing the provisions of S. 107, as the section does not apply to leases by holding over. But the actual decision may perhaps be justified on the ground that the provision for monthly rent is an "agreement to contrary" within the meaning of S. 116—Ed.]

——S. 107 — Oral contract of lease preceding kabuliyat—Kabuliyat not registered—Effect.

The fact that subsequent to an agreement which is a completed contract of oral lease between the parties, one of the parties executes a kabuliyat for the agreed period, does not alter the fact that there was an oral contract of lease initially nor does it detract from the efficiency or enforceability of the oral contract of lease. 1961 Nag L J (Notes) 86.

——Ss. 107 and 116 — Annual lease — Lease from year to year — No registered deed — Validity.

If possession is given, an oral lease for a year is valid. An oral agreement of lease accompanied by delivery of possession, if for more than one year is valid by delivery of possession for the first year and thereafter the lessee continuing in possession with the assent of the lessor becomes a tenant by holding over under S. 116, T. P. Act. Mulla's T. P. Act, 3rd Edn., p. 657, AIR 1933 Rang 262 : AIR 1934 Pat 369 : 20 I C 715 and 1955 N L J 103, Foll. 1958 Nag L J (Notes) 22.

——S. 107 — Kabuliyat—Use for collateral purpose.

The Kabuliat in a case where the lease is required to be registered cannot operate as a valid lease, it being a unilateral document, executed by the tenant alone, and so hit by S. 107 of the T. P. Act. But user of the kabuliyat to explain the plaintiff's case in the plaint is for a collateral purpose and is not prohibited; AIR 1919 P C 44 : 38 M L J 313, Rel. on. 61 Cal W N 841 : ILR (1957) 1 Cal 233 : AIR 1957 Cal 479 (481) (Pt C) (Prs 16, 17) (DB).

——S. 107—Registered Kabuliyat — Use for founding claim for rent.

Rent is an essential and integral part of the lease and so a registered Kabuliat, it is if invalid as a lease, cannot form the basis of a claim for rent. The document is utterly irrelevant for purposes of the law of limitation in that connection. The particular tenancy must be found from other materials and apart from the said document. 61 Cal W N 841 : I L R (1958) 1 Cal 233 : A I R 1957 Cal 479 (482) (Pt C) (Pr 19) (DB).

9. Paragraph 2.

——S. 107—Qabuliat—Evidentiary value — Qabuliat can be used as corroborative evidence of oral lease for less than a year.

Obiter. — Although a qabuliat cannot be treated as independent evidence of a lease for more than a year or from year to year, or reserving a yearly rent, it can be looked into as corroborative evidence of an oral lease for a period of less than a year. Such a lease is permitted by S. 107 to be made by an oral agreement and it does not violate the principle of T. P. Act or the Evidence Act to look into a qabuliat as corroborative evidence of an oral lease which is otherwise in accordance with law. A I R 1943 Lah 127 (FB), Rel. on. Where the lessor did not execute any document and it was the lessee alone who executed a kabuliyat and the lessee was in possession of the property after the execution of the kabuliat.

Held, that it may be presumed under S. 114 of the Evidence Act that there must have been an oral agreement between the lessor and lessee agreeing to the terms on which the lessee was being put in possession of the property and there was therefore, an oral agreement accompanied by delivery of possession which satisfied the requirements of S. 107. 1954 All W R (HC) 167 : ILR (1955) 1 All 622 : AIR 1954 All 475 (480) (Pt B) (Pr 24) (DB).

——S. 107, Paragraph 2 — Absence of delivery of possession—Status of person claiming to be lessee — Right to eject trespasser.

In a suit for ejectment the plaintiff is to stand or fall on the basis of his own title. It does not matter if the defendant has not been able to prove his alleged interest or title and he is a mere trespasser. Under S. 107 delivery of possession is essential for the purpose of creating tenancy rights in other kinds of leases in the absence of a registered document in accordance with the provisions of that section. Where there is a great lacuna regarding delivery of possession in favour of the person who claims to be the lessee no title is created in his favour. As such, he is not competent to bring a suit for ejectment even as against a person who is a trespasser. ILR (1957) Cut 509 : AIR 1957 Orissa 276 (279) (Pt D) (Pr 11) (DB).

——S. 107—Absence of delivery of possession — Acceptance of rent by landlord—Tenancy if created.

Mere acceptance of rental by the landlord cannot create tenancy under the Act. 10. Paragraph 3.

—S. 107 Paragraph 2—Applicability — Lease to be executed by both lessor and lessee.

A land which was allowed to be in possession of certain persons as stall holders was granted in perpetual lease by the properietor. The lessee was stated to be "A and his son B" in the lease deed. It was signed by A but it was not known whether he signed it as a "Malik" of a firm or as a partner of a firm or as head of his family describing the family by firm name. He brought suits for eviction of the stall holders, but the suits were objected to on the ground that as there were two lessees he alone was not entitled to bring the suits.

Held, that the objection was not tenable. If A had acted on behalf of a firm the other partners of the firm would be entitled to the benefits derived by him under the deed. If he acted as head and Karta of the family the family would be entitled to the benefit of that transaction. Therefore in whatever capacity he had acted he was the second party to the lease deed. The proprietor purported to transfer to him whatever rights he had in the land and those rights obviously were his proprietary rights. The lease deed which was executed both by the proprietor and A did not contravene the provisions of S. 107 and there was no reason why it should not operate as a valid perpetual lease of the land in favour of A. As such A was the person who was entitled to possession and competent to bring the suits. 1958 All W R (HC) 70 : AIR 1957 All 369 (371) (Pt A) (Pr 6).

—Ss. 107 and 105—Qabuliat—If creates a lease — Admissibility for proving nature of possession.

Sarkat (Qabuliat) executed by lessee alone does not operate as lease—But the deed is admissible in evidence for purpose of determining nature of possession. AIR 1950 All 661 (Pt A).

—S. 107 (before 1929 amendment) — Bemeyadi kabulayat coming into existence before S. 107 of T. P. Act was amended in 1929—Deed containing no restriction on tenant from constructing any pucca structure —Construction carried on with knowledge of landlord — Permanent and mandatory injunction restraining tenant cannot be granted. See Civil P. C. (1908), O. 39, R. 1. (1965) 69 Cal W N 833 : AIR 1966 Cal 97.

—S. 107—Registered Kabuliyat signed by lessee is invalid as lease — Possession under such lease and acceptance of rent by landlord — Lease by operation of law is created — Provision for re-entry for breach of condition against alienation contained in Kabuliyat attaches to such lease—Breach of condition — Notice under S. 111 (g) not given — Decree for possession cannot be passed. See T. P. Act (1882), S. 10d. A I R 1960 Cal 40.

—S. 107 — Unilateral Kabuliat — Implied tenancy from payment and receipt of rent. See T. P. Act (1882), S. 105. AIR 1955 N U C (Cal) 5584.

—S. 107— Kabuliyat executed by lessee alone. See Evidence Act (1872), S. 21. A I R 1955 N U C (Cal) 2889.

—S. 107—Necessity of execution by both lessor and lessee.

It cannot be said that a kabuliyat executed by lessee alone is not a lease on the ground that it is not executed by both the lessor and the lessee. The requirement of S. 107 of joint execution by the lessor and the lessee applies only to a case where a lease of immovable property is made by a registered instrument. Hence a kabuliyat executed by a lessee if unregistered does not come within the mischief of S. 107. AIR 1954 Cal 207 (208) (Pt B) (Pr 4) (DB).

—S. 107, Para. 3 — Bharapatra executed by lessee only, binds the lessor, in absence of fraud. AIR 1952 Cal 352 (352) (Pr 6).

—S. 107 (Before its amendment by Act 20 of 1929) —Lease executed by lessee alone —Validity.

An instrument of lease executed only by the lessee and accepted by the lessor is sufficient to constitute a lease within S. 107 before its amendment by Act 20 of 1929. The facts that the lease is stated to be an indenture and contains mutual covenants by the lessor and the lessee are not conclusive to show that the document to be valid must be executed by the lessor and the lessee. I L R (1951) 2 Cal 444 : A I R 1951 Cal 361 (364) (Pt A) (Pr 47) (DB).

—S. 107—Execution of lease—Formalities.

In the light of the third paragraph added to S. 107 in the year 1929 there is no 'lease' unless the instrument is executed by both lessor and lessee Hence the question of such an instrument being inadmissible in evidence for want of registration does not arise. 1959 Ker L R 218 : 1959 Ker L T 247 : A I R 1959 Ker 400 (400) (Pt A) (Pr 3) (DB).

—S. 107—Primary purpose of lease agricultural—Lessee acquires tenancy right upon acceptance of rent by lessor—Fact that lease is not signed by lessor or lessee is immaterial — Question of applicability of S. 107 cannot be raised for first time in second appeal, question being mixed question of law and fact—Civil P. C. (1908), S. 100.

Where the recitals in the lease deed showed that it was granted for cultivation and residence and no averment was taken up in the pleadings that the primary purpose of the lease was residential the primary purpose of the lease was agricultural and the lessees acquired tenancy right even independent of the lease on acceptance of rent by the landlords. The lease is not invalid on the ground that it was not signed by the lessors and the lessees. Moreover question whether the lease not having been signed by the lessors and the lessees is invalid is a mixed question of law and fact and should be pleaded in the.

written statement and an issue should be framed and evidence gone into. The point cannot be permitted to be taken up for the first time in the second appeal. ILR (1964) Cut 111.

——Ss. 107 and 117 — Lease for agricultural purposes — Unregistered document executed by landlord alone—Planting of banana trees and temporary use of land for other purposes does not affect its character—S. 107 does not apply.

A unilateral unregistered document of lease executed by the landlord would be valid if the lease is for agricultural purposes. Where the origin of the lease was for agricultural purposes the mere raising of the banana trees and the temporary use of the land for any other purpose will not destroy the original character of the lease. Hence by virtue of S. 117, S. 107 of the Transfer of Property Act has no application to such a case. An agricultural tenant could be inducted even without any document and by the mere acceptance of rent by the landlord. (1963) 29 Cut L T 409 : ILR (1963) Cut 643.

——S. 107, Paragraph 3 — Lease not executed by both lessor and lessee is clearly invalid. ILR (1957) Cut 509 : AIR 1957 Orissa 276 (278) (Pt C) (Pr 10) (DB).

——Ss. 107, 105, 106 (before amendment by Act 20 of 1929) — Lease, creation of, before amendment —Valid lease could be created by a patta executed by lessor and not by kabuliyat executed by lessee. See T. P. Act (4 of 1882), S. 105. A I R 1960 Pat 344 (FB).

——S. 107 — Lease — Registered Kabuliyat coupled with acceptance — Sufficiency — (Registration Act (1908), S. 2 (7)).

In the case of an agricultural lease a registered Kabuliayat coupled with the acceptance of the same by the landlord is sufficient to constitute a lease in the eye of law. ILR 36 Pat 1027 : AIR 1959 Pat 89 (101) (Pt M) (Pr 27) (DB).

——Ss. 107 and 105 — Invalid lease — Possession under.

Lease is invalid if registered instrument is not signed by both the lessor and the lessee. Nevertheless the lessee in possession is entitled in law to maintain possession against the whole world except the rightful owner. AIR 1957 Pat 408 (416) (Pt N) (Pr 28) (DB).

——S. 107 — Kabuliyat not executed by lessor — Contract is invalid — Terms of contract cannot be proved by any other evidence—(Evidence Act (1872), S. 91). AIR 1957 Pat 331 (333) (Pt B) (Pr 12) (DB).

——Ss. 107 and 105 — Usufructuary mortgage — Lease back to mortgagor — Kerayanama executed by mortgagor lessee only—Validity—Suit for arrears of rent on basis of Kerayanama — Whether maintainable — Claim for use and occupation — Rate of compensation — Debt Laws — Bihar Money-lenders Act (3 of 1938).

Where a usufructuary mortgagee has leased the mortgage property (house) back to the mortgagor and the alleged kerayanama was executed by the mortgagor lessee only, it is hit by S. 107 and therefore a suit for arrears of rent by the mortgagee landlord on the basis of kerayanama is not maintainable. But the mortgagee landlord is entitled to recover compensation for use and occupation from the mortgagor lessee for the period he was in possession and enjoyed the property. AIR 1944 Pat 35, Rel. on. The contract between the mortgagor and the mortgagee, by which the mortgagee stipulated to realise 24 per cent. of interest from the mortgagor on the house under the veil of house rent is clearly illegal, and is hit by the Money-lenders Act. The rate at which such compensation for use and occupation of the house can be allowed should be such as would represent interest at 9 per cent. per annum on the sum advanced. A I R 1957 Pat 24 (29) (Pt D) (Prs 19, 22, 24, 26).

——Ss. 107, 116 —Scope —Registered instrument of lease for 21 years signed by the lessor alone — Validity of — If may be construed as oral lease for one year and treated as valid.

An instrument purporting to be lease or patta for 21 years, made in writing, registered and signed by the lessor alone, but not signed by both the lessor and the lessee as required by S. 107, T. P. Act, neither constitutes nor creates a valid lease. It cannot be construed to be an oral agreement of lease for one year, as it is within the mischief of S. 107, T. P. Act, and its invalidity cannot be cured by construing it to be a lease by oral agreement accompanied by delivery of possession. So to construe it would defeat the provisions of S. 107. AIR 1951 Pat 160 (161, 162) (Pt A) (Pr 8) (DB).

11. Proviso.

——S. 107, Proviso—Lease of house—Effect of non-registration—Notification—Under Proviso issued by U. P. Government.

By a notification published in the U. P. Gazette, dated 21st June 1905 under S. 107 of the T. P. Act only leases in which the total amount of the rent reserved is below Rs. 50 can be made by an unregistered writing. All other leases if in writing have to be registered. Hence where a lease for a house is for one year and the total amount of rent reserved is more than rupees fifty, it is, if unregistered, inadmissible in evidence except for collateral purposes as provided in S. 49 of the Registration Act. 1956 Andh W R (HC) 711 : 1956 All L J 625.

12. Lease by Government.

——S. 107 — Lease of Government lands—Exemption from provisions of S. 107—Registration of lease deed not necessary—Lessee entering into possession is enough (Per Division Bench).

Per Division Bench—Where a lease of Government lands is exempted by a notification, from the provisions of S. 107 of the Transfer of Property Act, a document creating such a lease does not require registration as provided by S. 90 of the Registration Act. In such case there is a demise of the lands so soon as the lessee takes possession. Ramnarayan v. State of M. 13. Lease embodied in a decree or order of a Court.

——S. 107 — Compromise decree creating perpetual lease — Property containing paddy land and house — Document required registration — Being unregistered was unenforceable. See T. P. Act (1882), S. 10. AIR 1955 N U C (Mad) 3950.

14. Lease and part performance.

——Ss. 107, 53-A — Registration Act (1908), S. 49 — Statutory tenant, who is—Person remaining in possession after the period fixed in a compromise decree, where lease as contemplated by the agreement was neither executed nor registered, does not become a statutory tenant—S. 53-A of T. P. Act does not confer any right on such person — Such person after the period agreed to in the compromise is over, becomes a trespasser—Suit by such person for declaration of his right as a tenant and for permanent injunction not maintainable. See Houses and Rents — West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act (12 of 1956), S. 2 (1). AIR 1964 Cal 235 (DB).

——Ss. 107, 53-A — Patta for 25 years executed by A in favour of B on monthly rental — Patta not signed by B — B going into possession and effecting improvements in terms of patta — Suit for arrears of rent and eviction of B before expiry of patta—There is no implied tenancy from month to month — Doctrine of part performance held applied.

Held, that the patta, though not a lease was a writing within meaning of S. 53-A. From such a writing the terms necessary to constitute a transfer could be ascertained with reasonable certainty. B in part performance of the contract had taken possession of the subject of the contract. A was debarred from enforcing against B any right other than the right expressly provided by the terms of the contract. And it was expressly provided that B should remain in the premises undisturbed by A, till expiry of 25 years. Thus, S. 53-A came to the aid of B. In this case there was hardly any room for "presumed" or "implied" tenancy because a lease of immovable property for any term exceeding one year can be made only by a registered instrument. AIR 1950 Cal 23, Rel. on. AIR 1944 Pat 35, Approved. After the expiry of 25 years B will have to quit and no notice will be required. AIR 1962 Cal 502 (503, 504) (Prs 6, 11).

——S. 107—Document invalid as lease, being without signature of lessee — Facts and circumstances revealing that there was completed contract of lease—Document is sufficient to attract S. 53-A. See T. P. Act (1882), S. 53-A. AIR 1965 Pat 467 (DB).

——Ss. 107, 53-A—Lease executed by lessor alone—Lease is not completed "in manner prescribed therefor" within meaning of S. 53-A. See T. P. Act (4 of 1882), S. 53-A. AIR 1960 Pat 354.

——S. 107—Lease — Doctrine of part performance—S. 53-A has no application to a case where the document upon which a party relies is not a contract of transfer by the lessor but is a kabuliyat executed by the lessee. See T. P. Act (1882), S. 53-A. AIR 1957 Pat 24.

——S. 107, Para. 2—Document of lease not signed by lessor — Document is admissible as evidence of part performance of agreement to grant lease under S. 53-A. See Transfer of Property Act (1882), S. 53-A. 6 Sau L R 378.

15. Agreement to lease.

——Ss. 107 and 105—Kabuliat cannot create lease. See T. P. Act (4 of 1882), S. 105. AIR 1953 All 499.

——S. 107—Agreement to lease — Registration is not necessary. See Registration Act (1908), S. 2 (7). AIR 1955 Nag 170 (DB).

——S. 107—Agreement to lease—Execution by lessor alone—Sufficiency.

Section 107, T. P. Act, only lays down how a lease is to be made and not how an agreement to lease is to be made. There is no provision which requires that a written agreement to lease should be signed both by the lessor and lessee. It is enough if it is executed by the lessor alone. CLAUSE (q)

45. Upon determination of lease, lessee to put lessor into possession.

1. General.

——Ss. 108 and 109 — Rights of lessor and his transferee in demised property—Nature.

A lessor has certain primary and auxiliary rights in the demised property. One of the primary rights is the right to evict the lessee from the property in certain circumstances, and as an auxiliary to that right there springs the right to give notice in writing to the lessee of the intention to determine the lease and to ask him to quit the property. It follows from S. 109 of T. P. Act that all the rights, primary and auxiliary, of the lessor to the property stand transferred to his transferee, and the latter becomes substituted for the former for all practical purposes. 1961 All L J 644 : 1961 All W R (HC) 510 : ILR (1961) 2 All 554.

RIGHTS AND LIABILITIES OF THE LESSOR
CLAUSE (b)

2. Obligation to give possession.

——S. 108—Tenancy determined by notice to quit—Action in ejectment for purposes of building or rebuilding—Form of decree — Decree keeping tenancy intact while directing tenant to vacate within certain date cannot be passed. See Houses and Rents—W. B. Premises Rent Control (Temporary Provisions) Act (17 of 1950), S. 12 (1) (h). (1964) 68 Cal W N 115.

——S. 108—Possession — Constructive possession—Effect—Held possession of the documents meant in the circumstances of this case constructive possession of the goods. AIR 1963 Cal 163 (173) (Pt C) (Pr 43).

——S. 108—Landlord and tenant—Suit for damages for use and occupation against tenant holding over —No evidence that tenant cultivated land himself—Plaintiff is not entitled to decree merely because tenant failed to surrender possession after expiry of his lease.

In a suit by a landlord against his lessee for damages for use and occupation of the land after the expiry of the lease, the sole criterion to determine whether the plaintiff is entitled to any decree is whether the defendant did or did not actually cultivate the land as a tenant holding over. Where the land is an open field on which there is no homestead or any movable property, there is no necessity to surrender possession to the landlord after the expiry of the lease and in the absence of evidence that the tenant cultivated the land, the plaintiff is not entitled to a decree against the tenant in such a suit on the sole ground that he failed to surrender possession after the expiry of lease. ——S. 108, Cl. (b) — Obligation to give possession—Delay by lessor — Remedy of lessee — Lessor deliberately setting up third party to obstruct lessee from acquiring possession — Lessee is entitled to mesne profits from date of obstruction to date of delivery of possession — Position would be same even if lessor's default be treated as breach of contract—Contract Act (1872), Ss. 73 and 74. AIR 1965 Pat 39 (43, 44) (Pt B) (Prs 12, 16) (DB).

3. "On the lessee's request."

——S. 108 (b)—'On the lessee's request'—Obligation of lessor to put lessee in possession.

Under Cl. (b) of S. 108 of the T. P. Act, 1882 there is a legal obligation on the lessor to put the lessee in possession on a request being made to him to that effect. Where, however, the lessee is acquainted with the land leased to him, and there is no likelihood of obstruction to his going upon the land and taking possession of it, there is no duty on the lessor to put the lessee in possession unless the latter request him to do so. In the absence of such a request and the consequent failure by the lessor in performing his obligation, the lessee cannot make a case for refund of the consideration money from the lessor on his failure to get possession from a third party. 1963 B L J R 965 : AIR 1964 Pat 59 (59, 60) (Pt A) (Pr 4) (DB).

4. Failure to give possession—Effect.

——S. 108 (b)—Failure to give possession to lessee—Lessee can repudiate contract and claim damages—

T. P. Act and Contract Act have to be read together—Advance paid by lessee and expenses incurred can be recovered — Case is analogous to case of mortgagee whose quiet enjoyment has been disturbed—(Contract Act (1872), Ss. 55 and 73). AIR 1955 NUC (All) 3605.

——S. 108 (b) — Rental agreement by father and daughter—Vacating of premises by daughter without delivering vacant possession to lessor—Does not put an end to her joint liability for payment of rent.

Where a father and daughter executed a rental agreement and in a suit for rent for recovery of rent the daughter pleaded that she had already vacated the house and went to Madras. Held : that her vacating the house will not avail her to escape the joint liability for rent till delivery of possession was given to the lessor. 1953 Mad W N 48 (2) : (1952) 2 M L J 883 : AIR 1954 Mad 92 (92) (Pr 2).

——S. 108 (b) — Suit for possession by purchaser of tenancy rights on ground of alleged dispossession by landlord—Question whether plaintiff is tenant not required to be decided by Mamlatdar 'for the purposes of the Act'—Jurisdiction of Civil Court to award possession to tenant not taken away by Act. See Tenancy Laws—Bombay Tenancy and Agricultural Lands Act (67 of 1948), S. 85A. (1963) 2 Mys L J 47.

——Ss. 108 (l) (b) and 117 — Failure to give possession—Absence of demand — Right of lessee to claim abatement or suspension of rent — (Evidence Act (1872), S. 115).

The right to recover rent from the lessee arises only when the lessee has been delivered possession of the demised property. This principle applies to all kinds of leases, agricultural and non-agricultural. AIR 1920 Pat 611, Rel. on. The mere absence of demand for possession of the lands which were not delivered by the lessor for certain number of years will not estop the lessee from claiming abatement of rent for all those years. The right of a landlord for recovery of possession of the properties from a tenant on the determination of the tenancy need not be based on any contract expressly entered into in that behalf. The landlord's right to recover, and the tenant's liability to surrender, the properties leased, on the determination of the lease, are inherent in the very relationship of landlord and tenant and are implied by the law. Section 108, T. P. Act, recognises this obligation of the tenant. 1951 Ker L T 770 : ILR (1951) Trav-Co 522 : AIR 1952 Trav Co 359 (361) (Pt B) (Pr 7) (DB).

——S. 108 (c)—Scope—Covenant for quiet enjoyment — Breach — Landlord's refusal to give consent to electric installation — Issue of mandatory injunction —(Specific Relief Act (1877), S. 55).

No act of a lessor can be regarded as an actionable breach of a covenant for quiet enjoyment unless it involves some physical or direct interference with the enjoyment of the demised premises and in determining whether the enjoyment of the premises has been disturbed or interfered one must look to the purpose for which the premises were granted. Thus, where the rooms are let out to the tenant for locating a dispensary and a laboratory and the effect of the landlord's refusal to give consent to enable the tenant to have the electric energy on the premises is to make the rooms unfit for that purpose, there would be a breach of the covenant for quiet enjoyment and the tenant would be entitled to a mandatory injunction compelling the landlord to give the necessary consent. The plea of the landlord that he does not wish to give consent as, for some reasons, he wants to get rid of the tenant is no answer to the claim resting on the covenant. 1959 M P C 18 : 1959 Jab L J 120 : 1959 M P LJ 285 : AIR 1959 Madh Pra 191 (192, 193) (Pt A) (Prs 3, 4, 5).

When a statutory provision does not apply but the principles underlying it are invoked as a matter of equity, the Court is not bound to apply the provision literally, but may well consider whether it is equitable to apply it to the facts of the particular case before it. Where a lessee has taken a lease of an agricultural field knowing that it is under mortgage, it would be inequitable to permit him to invoke the aid of S. 108 (c), T. P. The plaintiff was the lessee of the property of the defendant. In a suit for partition filed by the minor son of the defendant the plaintiff had to compromise with the minor by paying a sum of Rs. 275 in respect of the leased property. In the partition suit the defendant-father was ex parte. The present suit was for recovery of the sum of Rs. 275 from the defendant.

Held : Under S. 108 (c) of the Transfer of Property Act, the lessor shall be deemed to contract with the lessee that, if the latter pays the rent reserved by the lease and performs the contract binding on the lessee, he may hold the property during the time limited by the lease without interruption. This provision also means that the title, which has been conveyed by the lessor to the lessee, is a good title and that there is no infirmity in it. The words "without interruption" in S. 108 (c) are not qualified in any way, and have been understood to mean what in England is known as a covenant for quiet enjoyment in an unqualified form. The covenant protects the lessee only against the lawful disturbance, but does not cover tortious entries, eviction or interruption by trespassers. As the plaintiff had done all that he had covenanted to do under the lease deed, the defendant must be deemed under the law as having given a covenant for quiet possession. There could not be a clearer threat when the minor son of the lessor attached the alienation of the father in a suit and prayed for recovery of possession of the leased property. There was an interference with the covenant for quiet enjoyment. The plaintiff need not give any notice to the defendant in the partition suit of the proposed compromise with his minor son. Since the defendant remained ex parte in that suit, he should be fastened with constructive knowledge of entire proceeding in that suit including the compromise decree. The suit for damages without notice is therefore not vitiated. There is no reason why the principle of covenant of title vitiated in a sale deed should not be extended to the covenant for title and quiet enjoyment in a lease deed. 77 Mad L W 202 : 1964 Mad W N 163 : (1964) 2 Mad L J 142 : I L R (1964) 2 Mad 582 : A I R 1964 Mad 514 (515, 516) (Prs 3, 4, 5, 7).

His action would be tortious if he actually dispossesses the plaintiff or if he procures a breach of contract with the plaintiff by the lessor. In the absence of proof of this the lessor would be liable for breach of contract under S. 108 (c). ——S. 108 (c) — Effect of breach of covenant — Lessee is entitled to claim damages — Pre-requisites of claim for damages—Contract Act (1872), S. 73.

Under S. 108 (c) the lessor is deemed to contract with the lessee that he may hold the property during the time limited by the lease without interruption. This is a right of a quiet enjoyment of the lease property in an unqualified form. The covenant for quiet enjoyment extends against the disturbance of the lessee's possession by the lessor or by persons claiming under him and not to disturbance caused by a trespasser. In other words, the lessee is entitled to enjoy the lease against any unlawful entry, eviction or interruption of any person. This right, however, does not extend against tortious entries, evictions or interruptions. Wrongful acts of trespasser are, no doubt, to be defended by the lessee on his own and the lessor is not liable for damages for that. But if the interruption or dispossession is occasioned by persons claiming by right paramount to the lessor, the covenant for quiet enjoyment in an unqualified form would entitle the lessee to damages from the lessor. Three conditions, however, are necessary to be fulfilled for that purpose ; the eviction must be from something actually forming part of the property demised, the party evicting must have a good title and the lessee must have quitted against his will. 1965 B L J R 679 : A I R 1965 Pat 179 (181) (Pt A) (Pr 6) (DB).

Defendants had taken a certain property on lease for 3 years from the plaintiff on a certain fixed annual rent. Rent for the first year was paid and the rent for the third year was deposited by the defendants after the suit for lease rent was filed by the plaintiffs. It was contended by the defendants that they were not liable to pay the rent for the middle year as the crop raised in that year was completely destroyed by unexpected floods and it was not possible to raise a second crop during that year.

Held, that even though the lease was for a fixed period of three years, the stipulation was to pay rent due for each of these years separately and at the end of each year. There was a separate agreement as it were in respect of the rent payable each year. The parties might be relieved of their obligations under any of these separate and distinct agreements on the happening of a frustrating event which might not affect their obligations under the other agreements embodied in the same lease transaction. Such an event happened in the middle year and it put an end to the contract relating to the rent for that year. ——S. 108 (e) — Doctrine of frustration — Claim for reduction of rent on partial destruction and for suspension of rent on total destruction of leased premises — Claim can only be sustained where doctrine of frustration has been invoked by exercising option under cl. (e).

Clause (e) of S. 108 is based on the principle of frustration of contract, and was enacted to safeguard the rights of the tenant in case of the total destruction of the property leased to him. It gives him the right to escape his liability as a tenant by declaring the lease void. It follows that if the tenant does not exercise the option under cl. (e) that is, does not invoke the doctrine of frustration the lease shall continue for the benefit of both the parties. There is no other provision under the Act providing for a reduction of rent in case of partial destruction of the leased property or for total suspension in case of its complete destruction. 1964 All L J 1120 : 1965 All W R (H C) 81 : AIR 1966 All 225 (226) (Pr 3).

——S. 108 (e)—Scope—Provision contains modified form of 'Frustration' — Contract Act (1872), S. 56.

Section 108 (e) of the Transfer of Property Act is exhaustive so far as the rights and liabilities of lessor and lessee are concerned. This section has given the various rights and liabilities of the lessor and lessees. There is good reason for the enactment of S. 108 (e) of the Transfer of Property Act which has given an option to the lessee to treat a lease void on the happening of a certain event, for if there is a material destruction it is to the prejudice of the lessee and even after that destruction the lessee wants to continue in possession he has been given an option to remain in possession and fulfill the part of his contract. In such a case if the lessee chooses to continue the terms of the lease it will not at all be prejudicial to the lessor and it has rightly been enacted that in such a case it is the option of the lessee that would bring about frustration if at all this term is applicable in such a case, for frustration would ordinarily mean the dissolution of the contract automatically. This is a modified form of frustration which has been enacted in section 108 (e) of the Transfer of Property Act. AIR 1950 Cal 441; AIR 1963 Punj 49; 64 Cal W N 932; AIR 1952 Cal 571; AIR 1961 Cal 70 and AIR 1952 S C 47, Ref.

Consequent on the acquistion having been held invalid the premises were returned to the lessor. The lessor determined the lease and contested a suit by lessee alleging inter alia frustration by reason of the structures having been demolished by the State.

Held, that the lessee not having exercised his option to treat the lease as void his tenancy did not come to an end by the acquisition of the premises by the State or by the complete destruction of the construction by the State Government. 1965 All L J 689 : ILR (1965) 2 All 458.

A lease does not determine as soon as the building is demolished. By the demolition there would be no frustration. The entire law of the doctrine of frustration as may be applied to leases is to be found in S. 108 (e) of the Transfer of Property Act. Even if the house is destroyed wholly, the lease does not determine unless the lessee so chooses. Section 111, T. P. Act, is the only section which deals with the conditions under which a lease determines. This section does not include frustration as a ground for determination of the lease. Section 108 (e) itself uses the words 'wholly destroyed' and the word 'any' has been used which may mean all which may also mean 'a portion of it' and the option lies with the tenants; so that prima facie even after the building is totally destroyed if the tenant does not exercise his option to terminate the lease, the lease would still be continuing. 64 Cal W N 932 : ILR (1961) 2 Cal 14.

16. Lessor's neglect to make repairs.

——S. 108 (f) — Landlord not carrying out repairs—Tenant has to take recourse of the provisions of S. 7-E of U. P. (Temporary) Control of Rent and Eviction Act and not S. 108 of T. P. Act — Remedies are not in alternative.

For keeping the house wind-proof and water-proof responsibility has been absolutely placed by S. 7-E (1) upon the landlord. He is made bound to make necessary repairs in order to keep the house wind-proof and water-proof. With regard to other repairs it has been provided that the landlord will make other repairs only if he is bound to make them either by law, contract or custom. Sub-section (3) of S. 7-E, does not apply to the first kind of repairs.

In the case of former kind of repairs the legislature has made elaborate provisions in sub-ss. (4), (5) and (6) of S. 7-E. The legislature did not stop after creating a right and leaving the parties to their rights under the Transfer of Property Act, but provided its own remedy which is much more restricted than the remedy given to the tenant under the Transfer of Property Act. Under S. 108 of the T. P. Act, if the landlord is bound to make repairs it is the right of the tenant after giving the notice to make such repairs and to deduct the whole amount from the rent; but under these sub-sections the legislature has restricted this right of a tenant. If the tenant wants the landlord to make the repairs under sub-ss. (4) to (6) of S. 7-E he is to make an application before the Munsiff so that the landlord may be ordered to make the necessary repairs. This means that the opinion of the tenant that the house requires certain kinds of repairs which the landlord is bound to make under the Act is not final. He is to put it to the scrutiny of the Court and follow the procedure laid down in those sub-sections.

The remedy provided by the U. P. (Temporary) Control of Rent and Eviction Act is not in the alternative. It takes away that provided in the T. P. Act. AIR 1963 All 439 (440, 441) (Prs 5 to 8).

Where under a contract of lease the landlord is bound to make the necessary repairs but in spite of notice by the tenant the landlord fails to carry out the repairs, the tenant has a right under S. 108 (f), T. P. Act to carry out those repairs and to deduct the expenses incurred on repairs from the rent. S. 7-E (3) of the U. P. Temporary Control of Rent and Eviction Act which limits this right of the tenant to a deduction of only one month's rent is contrary to the provisions of the Transfer of Property Act. Where a case is clearly governed by the Transfer of Property Act, the rights of the tenant cannot be curtailed by local Act unless the Transfer of Property Act is amended. The tenant was therefore right in relying upon his rights under the Transfer of Property Act and deducting the entire cost of repairs from the rent. 1963 All L J 65: 1963 All W R (HC) 41 : A I R 1963 All 251 (252) (Prs 4, 5).

In the case of a lease governed by the Transfer of Property Act, a covenant by the lessor to repair the premises cannot be specifically enforced. The remedy of the lessee in the event of a breach of the covenant, is that provided in S. 108 (f), T. P. Act. The lessee's right can only be either by way of a reduction from the rent or by way of a claim for damages or reimbursement of money spent. When the lessee, however, does not make any repairs himself or spend any money on such repairs, he can only claim damages resulting from the default of the lessor to effect repairs. But if the lessee does not specifically plead or prove his claim for damages by way of compensation for any loss which he has suffered by reason of a breach of the landlord's covenant to repair, such relief cannot be granted to him. Where all that the lessee claims, is an abatement of rent or an assessment of fair and equitable rent, the Court cannot grant any relief. It is not enough for the lessee to merely state that there was some damage to the building which had to be repaired by the landlord, without stating what loss, pecuniary or otherwise that he suffered, and when it is not proved that such damage in any way interfered with his use of the building, that would be no basis for a claim for damages or even for abatement of rent by way of damages. The Court cannot make a contract for the parties and fix a fair and reasonable rent, discarding the amount of rent fixed in the lease as payable by the lessee to the lessor.

Nor can the lessee claim compensation or damage by way of an equitable set-off against the landlord's claim for rent, in second appeal, which was not made in the Courts below. Where he pleads a verbal agreement by the landlord for reduction of rent but the same is found against, the lessee cannot claim damages by way of set-off, when he has not pleaded or set up any such claim in the Courts below. ILR 30 P L T 231 : AIR 1951 Pat 508 (511, 512) (Pt C) (Prs 6, 7) (DB).

In the case of a lease of a building the tenant is entitled to have the building maintained in such a condition that it is fit to be used for the purpose for which it was taken on rent. Clause (f) of S. 108 of the Transfer of Property Act recognises this right. The duty of attending to the repairs so as to keep the property in a fit condition to be used for the purpose for which it was leased out, is primarily that of the lessor. He cannot by his own neglect to attend to such necessary repairs, make the tenant suffer the consequential hardships and that is why the law has recognised in the tenant, the right to attend to such repairs himself and to debit the expenses against the lessor. Further under clause (m) of the same section, the lessee is bound to keep the property in as good a condition as it was in at the time when he was put in possession, subject only to the changes caused by reasonable wear and tear or irresistible force and to restore possession to the lessor at the termination of the lease. The tenant will be in a position to keep the property in such a good condition only by attending to the necessary repairs from time to time. No general standard regarding the scope and the limitation of such repairs can be prescribed. The necessity for the repair of a particular building will depend on the extent to which it is worn but by lapse of time and on other circumstances. Renewal or replacement of old and worn out parts is inevitable in a building leased, and hence the incidents of the lease arrangement will continue to be fastened to the building in its repaired condition also irrespective of the extent of the repairs that might have been necessitated by the circumstances of the particular case. (1911) 1 K B 905, Rel. on.

In the case of a thoroughly dilapidated hut which the landlord was not prepared to repair or renew he cannot with any sense of propriety or fairness insist on mathematical accuracy being achieved in respect of the pattern and details of the old structure in the course of its repair by the tenant himself. All that can be expected in such a situation is that the structure repaired or renewed must be substantially of the same size and type as the old one, so that the tenant may continue to occupy the same under the subsisting terms of the tenancy in respect of that structure.

Applying these tests to the facts and circumstances of the case it was held that the tenant was strictly within his right in keeping alive the tenancy by repairing and renewing the dilapidated parts of the kutcha hut and thus preventing its destruction. The tenant must be deemed to be retaining possession of the building thus repaired and renewed under the same terms as embodied in the original rent deed. The landlord plaintiff could not be allowed to get a premature determination of the tenancy by the destruction of the subject-matter of the tenancy on account of natural courses by failing to carry out the necessary repairs. 1955 Ker L T 801 : ILR (1955) Trav-Co 1262.

——S. 108 (g) — Right of tenant to adjust rent towards tax paid by him — (Contract Act (1872), S. 69).

Generally a tenant is not entitled to claim adjustment of all payments made by him on behalf of the landlord, even though he is interested in such payment, against rent payable by him. A tenant may sue the landlord for reimbursement of the money which he had to pay in order to save his own interest and may recover the money so paid. In order to entitle a tenant to claim adjustment of such payment against rent payable by him something more is required, namely, some sort of contract or understanding that such payment shall be adjusted against rent account. Such adjustment cannot be made by the tenant alone without the concurrence of the landlord. No question of any claim by the defendant by way of set-off however arises in a suit for possession of the disputed premises. Where the tenant had to pay Corporation rates due by the owners and also the occupier because she has been served with a notice of demand by the Corporation of Calcutta, under S. 246 of the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1951 and it appears further from certain correspondence exchanged between the landlords and the tenant that on a previous occasion payment by the tenant towards Corporation rates had been adjusted against the rent payable by the tenant, it would not be unreasonable to infer that there was some sort of understanding between the landlords and the tenant that Corporation taxes paid by the tenant would be adjusted against rent payable by her and the amount so paid could be adjusted towards the arrears of rent. ——S. 108 (g) — Contract to the contrary — (Lease —Construction).

A lease of premises granted for the purpose of Cinema shows contained a covenant for free admission to effect that the lessee "shall at all times during the period of the lease keep one box containing not less than four seats . . . . . at the disposal of the lessor for the use of herself or other person or persons authorised by her or on her behalf in writing . . . . . A further clause in the lease provided that if the lessee 'fails or neglects to carry out or perform any of the terms, covenants and conditions, then the lessor shall, notwithstanding herein before contained, be at liberty to determine the lease and shall re-enter the said premises." In April 1949, the Bengal Amusements Tax Act 1922 as amended, imposed entertainment tax on free or complimentary passes or tickets as well, if they were for admission to a cinematographic exhibition. The question was whether the liability to pay the entertainment tax on such accommodation under the contract was that of the lessee even though the lessor was liable to pay it under the law, and whether a breach of such condition entitled the lessor to determine the lease.

Held (i) the principle that when a person enters into a contract, there is an implied covenant on his part to do all things necessary to carry it out, means that he will do all things required of him to do, but not also that he will do even the things required of the other party. The words of a contract may, however, be sufficiently wide so as to make one party liable to discharge all obligations of the other, whether existing at the time or coming into existence in future.

(ii) That the proper meaning of such a contract was that the lessee had undertaken no more than to forgo all payments in respect of the box chargeable by himself and had only agreed that as between the lessor and the lessee, the box shall be free. There was no further undertaking, implied in the covenant, that the lessee would also pay on the lessor's behalf a tax imposed on her by the State for witnessing the performances, if such a tax come to be imposed. To pay such a tax would not be to keep the box at the disposal of the lessor, but to remove further difficulties of the lessor with third parties in the way of her availing herself of the box, already placed at her disposal so far as the lessee was concerned. A I R 1955 N U C (Cal) 2865.

A lessor can sue for ejectment and possession only in respect of that property which he had let out. Where a sub-lessee had built a temporary construction by his own money and it was not included either in the lessor's claim for ejectment or in the decree the lessor cannot claim in the execution of decree when the premises let out were given back to him in the condition in which they were prior to the passing of the decree, any compensation for the removal of that temporary construction even if such removal was done after the decree. Under S. 108 (e), T. P. Act, a lease is not automatically determined on the destruction by fire or irresistible force of a substantial portion of the property leased. It is matter of option with the lessee to get rid of the lease or not. He could treat it as void if he so desired. But the law does not compel him to do so. The aspect of the matter makes it all the more necessary that an unambiguous declaration of the lessee's intention to treat the lease as void must be communicated to the lessor. The lessor would not otherwise be able to take appropriate steps on the footing that the lease has come to an end and he is therefore at liberty to deal with the property as he chooses. What is even more important is that a mere declaration of intention to treat the lease as void is not sufficient. The lessee must also yield up possession of the property to the lessor as required by the provisions of S. 108 (q) of the Transfer of Property Act. He cannot continue in possession and yet declare that he has treated the lease as void. That would obviously be an inconsistent and impermissible position to adopt. So long as a lessee has not surrendered to his lessor the possession which he obtained from the latter at the time of the lease, he cannot rid himself of his obligations under the lease. His holding the possession into which he was inducted by his lessor will estop him from disputing the right of his lessor to evict him and to recover possession from him.

A granted a lease of a plot of land together with the house thereon to B who in turn sub-leased the premises to C but the house was destroyed by fire and C merely obtained the permission of the head lessor A to construct a thatched house on the site and actually constructed a house and remained in possession even after the expiry of his sub-lease. B sued C for possession of the premises.

Held, (i) that the sub-lease in favour of C was not determined under S. 108 (e) by the destruction of the house by fire because C had not surrendered possession to his lessor B. By merely obtaining a permission from the head lessor to erect a hut on the suit property the defendant C could not improve his position; (ii) that for the same reason B's head lease was not determined by destruction of the house when there was nothing to show that plaintiff B ever treated the lease as void; (iii) that the plaintiff B was entitled to recover possession of the property from C without being liable in law to pay any compensation for the house constructed by C. C was however entitled to remove the hut without imparing the site and no permission was necessary for this. (1964) 2 Andh W R 304 : AIR 1965 Andh Pra 167 (170, 171) (Pt B) (Prs 7, 8, 9, 11, 12).

——S. 108 (h) and (o) — Mulgeni Tenants—Right to trees—Extent of.

In determining the right of the mulgeni tenants to cut the trees in the land leased to them, the matter has to be considered in three aspects. The first is with regard to the trees which were upon the land when the mulgeni lease was granted; secondly with regard to the trees which have been planted by the tenants on the land after the grant of the lease; and, thirdly, with respect to the trees which have grown spontaneously after the grant of the lease. Further, a distinction has to be made between timber trees and non-timber trees.

So far as the trees planted by the mulgeni tenant himself since the grant of lease are concerned, the tenant has every right to cut them whether they are timber trees or otherwise. The position is the same also under S. 108 (h), T. P. Act, which though inapplicable to the agricultural leases, embodies the principles recognised as good law.

With respect to the trees that were standing at the time when the lease was granted, the position is governed by S. 108 (o), T. P. Act and the tenants are not entitled to fell or sell timber trees but with respect to non-timber trees, they are entitled to make use of the property and utilize its usufruct as a person of ordinary prudence may use it as if they were his own.

As regards the spontaneous growth after the lease was granted a distinction must be drawn between timber trees and non-timber trees. With respect to the timber trees, the position is that the tenants would not be entitled to cut them. But with respect to non-timber trees, they would be entitled to cut them or to put them to any other use as they pleased. ——S. 108 (h) — Tenancy determined — Removal of fixtures—Time for removal.

The intention of cl. (h) of S. 108 is to declare the law and to substitute for a law dependent upon the personal law of the parties or general consideration of equity a definite principle. The uncertainty that prevailed under the clause as it stood prior to the amendment in 1929 regarding the tenant's right of removal of the things he has attached to the earth has now been removed by the amendment of the clause. The tenant can now remove his fixtures so long as he is in possession of property. This being the legal effect of cl. (h) of S. 108 there is no room for invoking the rule in "Thakoor Chunder Pramanik's case, 6 Suth W R 228 (FB)" after the enactment of the Transfer of Property Act. AIR 1933 Cal 875, Rel. on. 19. Lessee's right to crops sown by him.

——S. 108 (i) (h) and (o)—Trees of spontaneous growth —Rights in—(Tenancy Laws — Madras Estates Land Act (1 of 1908), S, 12).

The general and accepted principle is that the trees on a land belong to the owner. They are part of the land and the right to cut and sell them is incidental to the proprietorship of the land. This general principle is subject to the law of fixtures. Under the Roman Law, a tenant is entitled to remove all fixtures, which he has attached to the leasehold property, whereas under English Law, whatever is fixed to the soil subject to some exceptions becomes part of it.

Under S. 108, T. P. Act, which practically embodies the principles of Roman Law in sub-ss. (h), (i) and (o) the lessee must not fell timber or pull down buildings unless the timber has been planted or the building has been erected by the lessee and he must leave the property in the state in which he received it.

There is no provision enabling a tenant to remove trees of spontaneous growth in his lease-hold property. The principles embodied in the T. P. Act are founded on reason and equity and, therefore they are also applied to analogous cases which are not governed by the express provisions of other Acts, or regulated by custom. It follows that unless there is an established practice or statutory rules, trees of spontaneous growth on a land belong to the owner.

Tank bed in an estate is not a ryoti land and is not governed by the provisions of S. 12 of the Madras Estates Land Act, and in the absence of custom or a contract enabling a tenant to cut trees of spontaneous growth, they belong to the landholder and the tenant has no right to cut or remove them. 1954 Andh L T (Civ) 160 : (1954) 2 Mad L J (Andh) 217 : A I R 1955 Andh 62 (64) (Prs 12, 13).

——S. 108—Lease—Mulgeni lease — Lessee's right to trees on land at the time of grant and trees growing spontaneously thereafter or planted by him—Timber trees and others—Distinction.

A Mulgeni tenant stands on no higher footing than a tenant in perpetuity — He cannot be regarded as a sub-proprietor of the land.

In the case of trees which a lessee under mulgeni lease (permanent tenant) has himself planted, he would be entitled to cut them and to use them, because they could be regarded as things which he has attached to the earth. His right to cut them is, however, subject to the condition that he leaves the property in the state in which he leaves it. The right, is the same whether the trees are timber trees or otherwise.

In the case of trees which were in existence when the lease was granted, the mulgeni tenants are not entitled to fell or sell timber trees, but with respect to non-timber trees they are entitled to make use of the property and utilize the usufruct thereof as a person of ordinary prudence may use the same as if they were his own.

In the case of trees which are the result of spontaneous growth after the grant of the mulgeni lease the lessee is not entitled to cut timber trees, but with respect to other trees, he would be entitled to cut them or to put them to any other use as he pleased. 53 Bom 315, Approved; 24 Bom 31 ; 27 Bom 373; 38 Bom 716; 12 Bom L R 831; 22 Bom L R 118; 17 Mad 218; 33 Mad 253; 34 Mad 271, Foll. AIR 1952 Bom 100 (102, 103, 104) (Pt A) (Prs 4, 5, 6, 7).

It is a well-known maxim that whatever is affixed to the soil becomes in contemplation of law a part of it and is subjected to the same rights of property as the soil itself. It follows as a corrollary that if a person plants a tree in the land of another the owner of the soil becomes owner also of the tree. The words "such consent, however, not to be unreasonably withheld in the case of respectable or responsible person" contained in the covenant in a lease allowing the lessee to assign his interest only with the lessor's written consent do not amount to a separate or independent covenant by the lessor that he would not refuse consent except upon reasonable grounds in the case of respectable or responsible person, but they limit or qualify the lessee's covenant not to assign the demised premises without the consent in writting of the lessor. In other words, those words have the effect of relieving the lessee from the burden of the covenant if the lessor withholds his consent unreasonably in case of proposed assignment to a respectable or resposible person. Where a lease contains a covenant not to assign without first obtaining the written consent of the lessor and such consent is not to be unreasonably withheld in case of respectable or reasonable person, an assignment by the lessee to a respectable person, without lessor's consent, does not amount to the breach of covenant on the part of the lessee. Even if it amounted to a breach of covenant entitling the lessor to forfeit the lease and sue for possession, such a course would affect only the assignee and not the lessee who has already parted with the lease for a valuable consideration. The lessee cannot therefore resist the assignee's suit for specific performance of the agreement to assign the lease on this ground. Kamala Ranjan v. ——S. 108 (j)—Absolute transfer — Position of transferee—(Houses and Rents — W. B. Premises Rent Control (Temporary Provisions) Act (17 of 1950), S. 12 (1) Proviso (b)).

Under the general law (T. P. Act), a tenancy is transferable in the absence of any contract to the contrary, and the transferee becomes, on such transfer, a tenant under the general law. For acquiring that status, the transferee has not to depend on the recognition of the landlord and the latter cannot treat him except as a tenant. The tenant, therefore, is entitled to a proper notice to quit before a suit for eviction is instituted against him and the suit against him for his eviction would be a suit for eviction of an ex-tenant. There is nothing in the W. B. Premises Rent Control (Temporary Provistons) Act, 1950, to affect that position, and a transferee of the tenancy (transferee tenant) would prima facie come within proviso (b) to S. 12 (1) of that Act unless the relative transfer falls outside its scope. 63 Cal W N 29 : ILR (1959) 1 Cal 639 : AIR 1959 Cal 181 (184, 187) (Pt A) (Prs 21, 36) (DB).

The mortgagor may have been assigned remedies analogous to that of a trustee as against the mortgagee in particular situations. There is no scope however for introducing trust relationship as between the lessor and the lessee. In the matter of arrears of rent their relationship cannot be anything more than that of debtor and creditor. The improvements effected by the assignee of a portion of the lease-hold in his portion of the holding cannot be available for set-off of arrears barred or otherwise

A and B had a lease-hold interest over suit property. One V was the kanamdar of the property. The Kanom right of V was purchased by C in 1959. A and B had executed a registered mortgage in favour of D for Rs. 200 in 1948. In 1956 A and B surrendered their lease-hold interest over the property to landlord C without making any reference to the mortgage. D, the mortgagee filed suit for realisation of mortgage amount by sale of the tenancy right of A and B over the property. The question was whether the mortgage right on the lease-hold interest of A and B would be extinguished by the surrender of the lease-hold interest in favour of C.

Held, C must be deemed to have notice of the registered mortgage. A voluntary surrender by a tenant stood on a different footing from an extinction of the tenant's rights by operation of law. In the latter case the encumbrance created by the tenant would terminate on the extinction of the tenant's right in the property. But A and B could not derogate from their grant by putting an end to their estate by a voluntary surrender. It was open to D to enforce the claim under hypothecation as against the tenancy right of A and B in the property, even though that right had been surrendered by them to C. ——S. 108 (j) — Transfer or assignment and sub-letting—Distinction—Houses and Rents—East Punjab Urban Rent Restriction Act (3 of 1949), S. 13 (2) (ii) (a)—Scope.

The distinction between an assignment or transfer of a lease and sub-letting of the premises is that, in the former case the lessee conveys his entire term and in the latter case he retains for himself a reversionary interest, however, small. The test of a sub-lease is that there should remain a reversionary interest in the estate vesting in the sub-lessor. In the case of a tenancy which has already been terminated, or where the tenancy, being at-will, is determinable at any time, there can be no sub-letting by a tenant to a sub-tenant. In the absence of evidence the ingredients of a sub-lease cannot be presumed. Where, apart from sub-letting, the landlord did not allege transfer by his tenant of the entire lease-hold rights to the petitioner, the case did not warrant any inference that the provisions of S. 13 (2) (ii) (a) of the Punjab Urban Rent Restriction Act, 1949, had been infringed. (1958) 60 Punj L R 349.

——Ss. 108 (j) and 10 — Lease before T. P. Act — Applicability of S. 108 — Transferability of lease—Rule against—Validity of.

Whether a tenancy created prior to enactment of the Transfer of Property Act was transferable or not has to be decided quite apart from the provisions of S. 108, which are not applicable to such a tenancy. According to decided case, tenancy of homestead, before the T. P. Act was not transferable; if the original letting was for the purpose of building cutcha structure, it was transferable, according to some authorities, and not transferable according to some; and if the original letting was for building puccka structures, it was transferable. Hence, the tenancy of land created before the Transfer of Property Act with the express purpose of construction of pucca building for the purpose of residence was ordinarily transferable and the condition against alienation provided as one of the terms of the kabuliyat would be void, as infringing the rule against perpetuities. 12 W R 495, Foll. 28. Scope.

——S. 108 (l)—Agreement to pay Ursana — Nothing to show that landlord called upon tenant to vacate premises during period of Urs and he refused to do so—Liability of tenant to pay Ursana does not arise. A I R 1955 N U C (Ajmer) 4749.

——Ss. 108 (l) and 58 (d) — Usufructuary mortgage of a house — Mortgagor continuing to reside in it under a rent note executed simultaneously is a tenant and as such liable to pay rent — No relief can be claimed by mortgagor under U. P. Agriculturists Relief Act in respect of the rent.

Where a landlord after executing a usufructuary mortgage of his house continues to reside in it by simultaneously executing a rent note in favour of the mortgagee, he becomes the tenant of the mortgagee with liability to pay rent under the agreement. The money which the mortgagor pays is not interest on the loan but rent for use and occupation of the house. The relationship remains that of landlord and tenant even if the parties have stipulated that the mortgagee after receiving the suit shall not be entitled to any interest under the usufructuary mortgage because, firstly, interest is not essential for a usufructuary mortgage which can be free of interest and secondly, the mortgagor's right to occupy the property is based on the tenancy which also creates his liability to pay rent for use and occupation of the property to which he would not otherwise be entitled under the mortgage. In such a case, and as the sum claimed by the mortgagee is as rent and not as interest on the mortgage, no question of granting any relief to the mortgagor under the U. P. Agriculturists' Relief Act can arise. The Act did not exempt an agriculturist from payment of rent for a house occupied by him as tenant. 1964 All W R (H C) 47 : A I R 1964 All 370 (371) (Pt A) (Prs 3, 4, 5).

Arrears for anterior period — If can be claimed—Landlord, if entitled to interest on such arrears.

It is now undisputed that the right to have the rent assessed even in respect of agricultural lands is not limited to proceedings to be instituted under the Bengal Tenancy Act. In a suit for assessment of rent there may also be a claim for arrears for the anterior period provided the tenant is found to have been in possession during such period and was holding either as a tenant or otherwise. The amount of arrears is payable not as rent but as compensation for use and occupation, where until the Court determines the fair and equitable rent the amount cannot be reasonably ascertained by the tenant. The landlord is entitled to claim in the suit the arrears calculated on the basis of rents and cesses for the period anterior to the filing of the suit at the rate fixed by the Court, but he will not be entitled to any interest or compensation on the amount decreed. A I R 1951 Cal 448 (448) (Pt A) (Pr 3).

Where the unexpired portion of a lease is surrendered by the tenant but the landlord does not accept it, the tenant does not cease to be liable for the rent. The fact that the landlord gets a receiver appointed in a suit for recovery of rent does not absolve the tenant from his liability of paying the rent when the purpose for which the receiver is got appointed is to save the property from lying fallow and getting deteriorated in fertility and the possession of the receiver is not intended for the landlord's benefit. ● —S. 108 (1) — Several lessees — Inter se partition of mokarrari interest amongst mokarraridars — Effect.

An inter se partition of the mokarrari interest amongst the mokarraridars cannot affect their liability qua the lessor for the payment of the whole rent, as several tenants of a tenancy in law constitute but a single tenant, and qua the landlord they constitute one person, each constituent part of which possesses certain common rights in the whole and is liable to discharge common obligations in its entirety. Such partitions amongst several lessees inter se are usually made for convenience of enjoyment of the leasehold but they do not in any way affect the integrity of the tenancy or make each holder of an interest in it as a separate holder of a different tenancy.

Similarly the allegation of partition inter se among the several owners of a lakhraj holding subject to mokarrari interest cannot in any way affect the integrity of the lease in the absence of an allegation of a fresh contract between the split up owners of the holding and the different owners in the mokarrari interest. The lessor even if he had collected only a portion of the rent from the sub-tenants would not be entitled to claim the balance of rent from the lessee where he defaulted to collect a portion of rents from the sub-tenants and allowed the claims against the sub-tenants to get barred in spite of his undertaking to collect the rents from the sub tenants. 1960 Mad W N 618 : AIR 1961 Mad 28 (31) (Pt D) (Pr 11).

Mere transfer of possession by a lessee without a transfer also of his rights or interests as a lessee to another will not make the transferee liable to the landlord for rent; such a transfer does not create an estate in the transferee nor is possession necessary to fasten liability on the transferee if the lessee transfers his interests as lessee. To fasten liablility on the principle of privity of estate on the transferee, the transfer must be of the leasehold, whether or not it is accompanied by possession. This is the true rule in cases where the lessee has an estate to transfer. A tenant holding over after the expiry of his lease has only a tenancy on tenancy and such a tenancy is not one which can be transferred. But a tenant who continues in possession after the expiry of the term without the consent of the landlord is not even a tenant on sufferance but a trespasser, who has no transferable interest at all. Where the transfer is by the owner of the property who is in possession under a lease executed by him to his usufructuary mortgagee (he having taken the properties on lease from the mortgagee for a fixed term) of his rights of ownership of the properties possessed by the lessee antecedent to the lease, and is not a transfer of any tenancy interest in any manner, no question of liability based on the principle of privity of estate can arise at all and the transferee from the mortgagor-lessor cannot be made liable to the landlord for rent. But the party in possession, in the same way as the lessee from whom he has derived possession would be liable for damages for use and occupation, i. e.. for mesne profits. 1951 KLT 770 : ILR (1951) T C 522 : AIR 1952 T C 359 (361, 362) (Pt C) (Prs 8, 11).

Where a lessee is wrongfully dispossessed by the lessor from a portion of the premises leased, the lessee is liable to pay rent for the premises in his possession inspite of the rent being a lump sum.

The principles of the English Common Law doctrine 'suspension of payment of rent' have no application in India and is opposed to the principles of justice, equity and good conscience. There is no principle of justice, equity and good conscience which would permit a lessee to retain possession of a portion of the leased land without paying any rent on the plea that he had been wrongfully dispossessed from a portion of the land leased. The question in such a case is one of enforcement of the contract of lease. The lessee can treat the contract as at an end and give up possession of the demised property or sue the lessor for damages of breach of contract. If he retains possession of any portion of the property he cannot be heard to say that he has discharged his obligation to pay rent in respect of the premises in his possession. Where a portion of the accommodation was taken out of the possession of the tenant with his consent, the doctrine of suspension has no application.

A portion of the upper storey was felled by the landlord with the consent of the tenant. As it was not reconstructed or repaired, the tenant made an application under S. 7-E of the U. P. (Temporary) Control of Rent and Eviction Act. Upon the Court's order directing the landlord to construct and repair the demolished portion of the premises, that was done. Later on the landlord brought a suit for ejectment and recovery of arrears ot rent and the tenant stated in the written statement that as the landlord had felled down certain portion of the accommodation, the tenant was entitled to a proportionate reduction of rent. It was not, stated that he withheld the payment of rent because he was deprived of a portion of the demised premises :

Held that it: was a case in which neither the doctrine of suspension was pleaded in the written statement nor had it any application on the facts found. ——S. 108 (l)—Eviction by paramount title.

Eviction by title paramount destroys the effect of the grant and the corresponding liability for payment of rent. But eviction by a decree-holder of a tenant pending an appeal which is ultimately allowed during the period when execution of the decree was stayed cannot be described as eviction by paramount title. 1954 Andh L T (Civil) 95 : (1954) 2 Mad L J (Andhra) 67 : 67 Mad L W 1051 : AIR 1954 Andhra 43 (44) (Pr 5).

——S. 108 (1)—Eviction of tenant from part of holding—Effect—Suspension of rent.

The eviction of a tenant, from a part of the demised premises entails suspension of the entire rent so long as the eviction lasts, irrespective of the fact that the tenant may be in possession of the residue. It is not necessary for the Court in such cases to find out from how much land the tenant had been dispossessed. The test is whether there has been an actual physical expulsion with the intention of depriving the tenant of the enjoyment of the demised premises or from a part thereof.

Where as a result of the landlord's keeping the logs in one of the rooms of the house let out to the tenant, great inconvenience had been caused to the tenant who was unable to occupy the whole house freely:

Held, that the act of the landlord was a tortious one and there had been actual dispossession of the tenant. The rent payable being for the whole holding, the landlord was not entitled to any rent until the mischief was removed. It was the duty of the landlord and not of the tenant to remove it. AIR 1951 Cal 338, Rel. on. I L R (1958) 10 Assam 121 : AIR 1961 Assam 52 (52) (Pr 2).

——S. 108 (b) and (l)—Landlord and tenant — Suspension of rent — Landlord's failure to give possession of part of premises - Effect.

The doctrine of suspension of rent has no application in India in cases of failure of the landlord to give possession to the tenant of the part of the demised premises.

The restatement of the law in A I R 1943 P C 24; (1943) 1 Mad L J 514 regarding suspension of rent, made after a consideration of the dictum in AIR 1925 P C 97 is more suited to Indian conditions than the statement of the law in any of the decisions preceding it.

The observations in AIR 1943 P C 24 : (1943) 1 Mad L J 514, were never intended to apply only to agrarian tenancies. The purpose of referring the special difficulties of the application of the doctrine of suspension of rent was only to show that the observations should apply with greater force to agrarian tenancies. It was never intended to exclude urban or metropolitan non-agricultural tenancies from the scope of the law laid down in the aforesaid decision. The particular difficulties of agrarian tenancies were treated as merely matters which gave a special 'edge of unreason' to the application of the doctrine of suspension of rent to such tenancies. I L R (1951) 1 Cal 133 : AIR 1955 NUC (Cal) 1064 (DB).

——S. 108 (l)—Rent—Eviction from part of property by landlord—Abatement or suspension.

Where the rent was a lump rent for the whole land leased and the landlord has dispossessed the tenant in a high-handed manner from a portion of the land, the landlord is not entitled to claim any rent on the basis of the contract with the tenant, as the former has acted tortuously in not allowing the tenant to hold the land peacefully. The mere fact that the area dispossessed is a small one is not of an overriding importance so as to dissaude the Court from applying the principles of justice, equity and good conscience if the Court finds that the act of the landlord was definitely a tortuous one. If and when the landlord chooses to put the tenant again in possession of the portion from which the latter had been dispossessed, he will be entitled to the rent and not till then : 70 I A 18, Disting., 12 Suth W R 109, Rel. on. ——S. 108 (l) — Silting up of property leased — Tenant can claim abatement of rent from fair rent fixed or from contract rent it no fair rent is fixed.

The tenant's remedy by way of abatement is independent of his statutory right to have the fair rent fixed. If fair rent has already been fixed and if a portion of the property is silted up, the tenant is entitled to abatement even of the fair rent in proportion to the extent silted up to the extent included in the lease. Similarly, if there has been no fixation of fair rent and there is silting the tenant is entitled to abatement and he is entitled to claim such abatement from the contract rent. That right to claim abatement he does not lose by not pursuing his remedy under the Malabar Tenancy Act before the Rent Court by way of an application for fixation of fair rent. ——S. 108 (l)—Enhanced rent—Right to—Agreement —Necessity.

A tenancy connotes privity between the parties and unless there is an express agreement to pay enhanced rent or circumstances or conduct from which one could be inferred, a claim for enhanced rent cannot stand. AIR 1952 Madh B 56 (57) (Pt B) (Pr 6).

——S. 108 (e) — Remission of rent — Lessee if can claim apart from contract—Lease of shandy tope for a term of years at annual rent — No provision for remission on account of loss due to unexpected cause —Lessee not entitled to remission for loss suffered due to cyclones — Doctrine of frustration does not apply—Contract Act (1872), S. 56.

Where the lease of shandy tope fixing a certain amount as annual rent for a period of five years, did not provide for remission for loss due to unexpected causes beyond the control of the parties, the lessee cannot claim in law remission merely for the reason that the shandy was hit by two cyclones during the period of lease and that for some period on account of the effects of cyclone, the shandy did not form properly or regularly and the lessee did not get any income. In such cases the Court cannot constitute itself into an authority for granting remission on an ex gratia basis to him. The Court has to interpret the terms of the contract, and proceed to grant remission only if the terms provide for it. The Courts have a duty to enforce the contract between the parties, and in the absence of any provision for remission on account of losses, no such remission can be granted by the Courts.

On the facts of the case the doctrine of frustration as laid down in S. 56, Contract Act, did not apply since by reason of the cyclone there was no supervening circumstance making the contract impossible of performance or unlawful. A I R 1963 Mad 94 (95, 96) (Prs 5, 8) (DB).

——S. 108 — Landlord and tenant — Rent — Remission—Lessee undertaking to pay stipulated rent unconditionally 'despite act of State or God' — Unexpected circumstances introduced by passing of Mad. Act 14 of 1952 rendering contract more onerous — Relief from obligation on equitable grounds — Contract Act (1872), S. 56 — Applicability.

Where a lessee, who took on lease a large block of lands belonging to a devasthanam as a commercial or speculative venture and later sublet large portions of his holding to various tenants) undertook to pay the annual rent stipulated in the lease deed unconditionally 'despite act of State or God,' the Court has no power or jurisdierion to relieve the lessee from the obligations undertaken by him on what may be called equitable grounds. The lessee will, therefore, not be entitled to any remission by reason of the advent of unexpected circumstances introduced by the coming into the statute book of Madras Act 14 of 1952. The lessee cannot claim any relief under S. 56 of the Contract Act. The mere fact that a contract has been rendered more onerous does not by itself give rise to frustration. There is no frustration, where performance of contract is physically and legally possible though commercially unprofitable. ILR (1962) Mad 273 : 74 Mad L W 716 : AIR 1962 Mad 122 (124 to 126) (Prs 11, 11a, 15, 17, 18, 19).

——S. 108 (b), (c), (l) — Interruption of quiet enjoyment of possession — Suspension or abatement of rent.

When there is sufficient interruption—substantial interference—it need not be physical dispossession—lessee can plead that his obligation to pay rent or balance of rent due to the lessor be held under suspension or must be held to have abated by reason of the conduct of the lessor. 1960 Mad W N 618 : AIR 1961 Mad 28 (30) (Pt B) (Pr 8).

——S. 108 (b) (c) (1) — Partial eviction by lessor — Lessee not repudating lease — If liable to pay proportionate rent — Land sub-let — Effect.

A tenant may on partial eviction repudiate the whole lease; but if he does not and remains in possession of a portion,he is estopped from pleading nonliability for the rent of the portion in his occupation and he will be liable to pay rent but will be entitled to damages in respect of the eviction and he can set off the damages as against the rent in the landlord's action for rent. But if the annual rent is payable in in one lump sum at the end of the lease period the rent cannot be apportioned. So also where the land is sub-let and the lessor by starting collection of rent from snb-tenants effectively interrupted the lessee from collecting the rent from the entire area no allocation of rent is possible. The lessor should be made to bear the consequences brought about by his own unauthorised and high-handed action of collecting the rents from the sub-tenants and if he is not able to collect the entire rents from them, he cannot look to the lessee to make good the uncollected portion. 23 Mad L J 119 and 54 M L J 354 : AIR 1928 Mad 380, Rel. on. 1960 Mad W N 618 : AIR 1961 Mad 28 (30, 31) (Pt C) (Prs 8, 9, 10).

——S. 108 (c) — Unconditional leases excluding Rajikam and Deivikam — Equitable principles to grant remission — Court has no power.

The lessee is liable to pay in accordance with the contract and there is no power in the Court to relieve him against the obligations under it by invoking any equitable principles. The Court cannot grant remission on equitable principles in the case of unconditional leases excluding Rajikam and Deivikam. The proper forum for agitating this question of remission of rent is the local Conciliation Officer as the civil Court is barred from going into these matters by the tenancy laws. A tenure or holding is an entire thing and cannot carry two rentals. Though the co·sharer landlords in the case of an entire tenancy, may. by private arrangement between themselves, realise their shares of rent separately they are not entitled each separately to alter the rent of the tenure.

The right of several co-sharers to collect separately their shares of the entire rent of the undivided holding rests as an arrangement between them and the tenants as to the mode in which the entire rent shall be collected, but which preserves intact the original tenancy both as regards the area of holding and the rent paid. Where one or some co·sharer landlords accepted a reduced rent from their tenants for some years on the ground that the produce had dwindled down as crops were being damaged by insects, that can only be regarded as a temporary reduction or a temporary remission it being open to a co-sharer to remit a portion of the rent for some years. A purchaser from such co-sharers is not bound by that temporary reduction and is entitled to recover rent at the original rate. The tenant cannot plead as against transferee that the transferor landlord had accepted rent at a reduced rate and that the transferee also was only entitled to the reduced rent, when it is found that rent was being paid to the other co-sharer landlord at the original rate without any reduction at all, unless the tenant makes out a case for a permanent reduction of rent and that the rent was reduced permanently for justifiable reasons. ——S. 108 (o)—Lessee of residential premises cutting bamboos growing in compound — Offence — (Penal Code (1860), S. 378).

The tenant of leased premises, has no right to cut bamboos from the bamboo clumps growing in the compound. The cutting of bamboos does amount to felling timber within meaning of S. 108 (o), T. P. Act. Bamboos are used for building purposes. A lessee is not entitled to fell timber. If the bamboos be considered to be a product of the leased property in view of the fact that fresh bamboos sprout on the cutting of bamboos, the lessee can only use the products. The product of such bamboos cannot be said to be the product of the leased property. The word 'product' in Cl. (o) of S. 108 refers to such substance which can be appropriated without destroying the main object. Such products in the case of a bamboo would be several. The bamboo itself is not to be deemed as the product which can be used by the lessee by cutting it down and then disposing it of or using it himself. To constitute voluntary waste by destruction of the premises the destruction must be wilful or negligent; it is not waste if the premises are destroyed in the course of reasonable user and any user is reasonable if it is for a purpose for which the property was intended to be used, and if the mode and extent of the user is apparently proper, having regard to the nature of the property and what the tenant knows of it, and in the case of business premises, to what, as an ordinary business man, he ought to know of it. It is not every act of waste on the part of the tenant which will entitle the landlord to obtain an order of eviction and what should be the nature and extent of the waste will depend on the circumstances of each case. The principle is that a lessee is bound to take care of the demised premises as a man of ordinary prudence would under similar circumstances take of his own property.

44. Erection of permanent structures by lessee.

● ——S. 108 — Demised premises belonged to the Board which was a local authority and were outside the operation of S. 4, Bombay Rents, Hotels and Lodging Houses Rates Control Act (1947). The fact that the lessee incurred expenses in putting up the building was precisely the consideration for the lessor for granting him a lease for 999 years not only of the building but of the land as well at what may be a cheap rent which the lessor may not have otherwise agreed to do. By the agreement the building became part of the land and the property of the lessor and the lessee took a lease on that footing. The lessee or a person claiming title through him could not now be heard to say that the building did not belong to the lessor. On forfeiture he re-enters on what has all along his own property. The interest of the lessor in the demised premises could not possibly be described as a contingent interest which would become vested on the expiry or sooner determination of the lease. The City Civil Court had jurisdiction to entertain the suit. See Houses and Rents—Bombay Rents, Hotel and Lodging House Rates Control Act (57 of 1947), S. 4. AIR 1953 SC 16.

● ——S. 108 (p)—Permanent structure—Tests.

The question whether a particular construction is a permanent structure or not for the purpose of Cl. (p) of S. 108, T. P. Act, depends on the facts of each case and no hard and fast rule can be laid down with regard to this matter. In the absence of relevant materials, no answer can be given to the question whether a room with two inches thick brick built walls and a corrugated iron roof, is a permanent structure within the meaning of Cl. (p) of S. 108 of the Transfer of Property Act. Suraya Properties Private Ltd. v. Bimalendu Nath Sarkar. 67 Cal W N 977: ILR (1966) 1 Cal 111: AIR 1964 Cal 1 (4, 6, 13, 14, 21, 23) (Pt A) (Prs 10, 20, 33, 35, 71, 101, 102) (SB).

——S. 108 (p) — 'Permanent structure'—Meaning of —Mixed question of law and fact.

The word 'permanent' in clause (p) of S. 108 appears to have been used in contra-distinction to what is temporary. If the work of conversion or construction is substantial or brings about a substantial change in the character of the premises and it is not merely a small physical change of a temporary or unsubstantial nature, such work of construction falls within the mischief of the clause. The test of remo-vability or demolition is not an invariable test. It is a mixed question of fact and law in each case whether the extent or degree of construction or erection is such as to make it partake of the character of permanent structure or not. Where the tenant of a sweetmeat shop constructed a surface drain upon the floor of the verandah and made many holes in the walls to run water-pipe fittings through them, drove angles in the walls for supporting a 20 gallon water-reservoir which had been placed upon the said angles, and further constructed a pucca masonry wall over 31 feet in height upon the floor of the verandah by digging open a part of its floor and had practically converted a substantial part of the said open verandha into a closed room and also made a pucca construction of sufficient height to serve as a receptacle of refuse matters and all these had been done without the landlords' permission and even despite protest from the landlord;

Held, that the tenant contravened Cl. (p) of S. 108 T. P. Act inasmuch as the pucca constructions were permanent structures within the meaning of the said clause and that this contravention of Cl. (p) was sufficient to disentitle the tenant to the protection of the West Bengal Premises Rent Control (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1948. (vide S. 11, sub-s. (1), proviso (a) of the Act). —S. 108—Lease—Covenant by lessor to pay value of improvements to lessee after expiry of lease—Nature of—If binds assignee of part of reversion—Reversion sold free from encumbrances — Lessor's liability to pay lessee value of improvements.

A lease of land contained a covenant that the lessee would build structures on the land at his own cost and that on the expiry of the lease the lessor would pay to the lessee half the value of the building and one-third of the value of privy and water taps if so constructed by the lessee.

Held, that the covenant was not a personal one but ran with the land and bound the lessor's assignee, whether the assignment was of a part or of the whole of the reversion. But where the agreement of sale provided that the property was sold free from all encumbrances and that all claims affecting the said property would be paid out of the sale proceeds thereof, vendor was liable to pay the lessee the sums provided for in the lease. In the first place the covenant to pay a share of the expenses for the constructions by the lessee might be regarded as an encumbrance. Further the covenant in question involved a claim affecting the reversion. (1951) 55 C W N 656 : ILR (1953) 1 Cal 34.

—Ss. 108 (p) and (h), 51 —Construction of permanent structures for non-agricultural purposes by tenant—Right of landlord to removal during lease — Doctrine of estoppel by acquiescence—Applicability.

Where a tenant erects a permanent structure on the land for non-agricultural purposes, and during the continuance of the lease, the lessor objects to their erection and there is no waiver or acquiescence on the part of the lessor, then S. 108 (p) must operate and the landlord is entitled to ask for removal of the permanent structures. 27 Mad 211, Rel. on ; A I R 1935 All 1040, Disting.

The prohibition in Cl. (p) however, may not apply when according to the contract of the parties, the land is let for the erection of a dwelling house or shop thereon.

When a tenant raises the plea of equitable estoppel, it is incumbent upon him to show that the conduct of the owner, whether consisting in abstinence from interfering, or in active intervention, was sufficient to justify the legal inference that he had by plain implication, contracted that the right of tenancy under which. the lessee originally obtained possession of the land should be changed into a perpetual right of occupation : 21 All 496 (P C), Foll.

Where due to doubtful character of the structure it was difficult for the landlord to take prompt action for the removal of the structures, the mere erection by the tenant of permanent structures upon the land let to him in the knowledge of and without interference by the lessor will not suffice to raise the equitable right against the latter. 21 All 496 (PC), Foll. ; 40 C W N 52, Ref. SYNOPSIS

1. Scope.
2. "Transfers the property".
3. "Property leased or any part thereof".
4. "All the rights, and if the lessee so elects, be subject to all the liabilities of the lessor".
5. Election by lessee.
6. Notice.
7. Proviso—Arrears of rent.
8. Apportionment of rent.

1. Scope.

——S. 109 – Applicability — Lessor not having subsisting title on date of transfer.

S. 109 clearly and obviously deals with cases where a lessor while there is a subsisting lease in his favour transfers his interests in the land to a third party, and in that case the third party or the transferee takes it subject to certain liabilities if the lessor's tenants or lessees so elect. Where at the date of the so-called transfer the lessor had no interest, left in the property leased no question can arise of the lessor transferring the property to the transferee.

Open plots of land belonging to the Municipality were let out to one A who erected structures thereon and let out tenements in these structures to various tenants. The Municipality filed a suit against A for ejectment and a consent decree was arrived at whereby it was provided that A was to deliver up vacant possession of plots, clear of all structures standing thereon and in case of failure to do this before certain date A was to give up possession of the said plot together with structures thereon to the Municipality.

Held, that S. 109 did not apply as on the date of so-called transfer the lessor A had no interest in the property leased. AIR 1956 Bom 364 (365, 366) (Pt A) (Prs 3, 5) (DB).

——S. 109 — Principles of S. 109 — Applicability to joint family property — Suit for ejectment by the coparcener or coparceners to whom the property in possession of a tenant is allotted on partition alone can terminate the tenancy — Notice by such a coparcener or coparceners alone is valid. See Transfer of Property Act (1882), S. 5. AIR 1965 Madh Pra 1.

2. "Transfers the property".

——Ss. 109 and 5 — Transfer of property — If includes partition — Lease of part of joint property by plaintiff-co-sharer to defendant — Leased property falling to lot of others on partition—Relationship of landlord and tenant between plaintiff and defendant —If ceases to exist—Evidence Act, S. 116.

Partition being a mixture of surrender and a conveyance of rights in a property, is a transfer of property within the meaning of S. 5 and S. 109 of the Transfer of Property Act. Where part of a joint property was leased to the defendant by the plaintiff co-sharer but on partition such property fell to the lot of other co-sharers, on the date of partition the relationship of landlord and tenant ceased to exist between the plaintiff and the defendant. Thereafter the defendant is not debarred from pleading that he is not bound by any relationship of a landlord and tenant so far as he and the plaintiff are concerned. 10 J & K L R 176 : AIR 1952 J & K 18 (18, 19) (Prs 3, 4).

——Ss. 109 and 106 — Tenancy commencing from first of calendar month—Transfer of rights by lessor —Effect.

If the tenancy between the lessor and the lessee commenced on the first of the calendar month, a new tenancy in favour of the purchaser from the lessor could not be created on 4th July 1950, simply because the property was transferred to him on that date. S. 109 of the Transfer of Property Act clearly lays down that if the lessor transfers the property leased, or any part thereof, or any part of interest therein, the transferee in the absence of a contract to the contrary shall possess all the rights, and if the lessee so elects, be subject to all the liabilities of the lessor as to the property transferred. It further lays down that the lessor, shall not by reason only of such transfer, cease to be subject to any of the liabilities imposed upon him by the lease, unless the lessee elects to treat the transferee as the person liable to him. Therefore, if the plaintiff transferee wanted to terminate the tenancy, he should have given a notice expiring with the end of the month of the tenancy according to the contract between lessor on the one hand and the lessee on the other. 1959 Raj L W 81 : ILR (1959) 9 Raj 97.

P. Act applied; (2) that the right given to D to recover rent and the right to recover possession from B and C after expiry of their period constituted a transfer of limited interest of the landlord and by virtue of Ss. 5 and 109 such transfer was valid. ——S. 109—Transferee acquires rights of lessor only in absence of contract to contrary.

Under S. 109 it is only in the absence of a contract to the contrary that the transferee acquires all the rights of the lessor on the transfer of the property leased.

M who had let out his house to a tenant sold it to M D and executed a kirayanama in respect of entire house in his favour. M D then sold it to N. N obtained a decree for ejectment against M and in execution proceedings sought to dispossess M's tenants. The tenants objected on the ground that they had become tenants of M D and were not bound by the decree obtained by N against M alone.

Held, that the kirayanama executed by M in favour of the M:D was a contract to the contrary and therefore the tenants of M did not become the tenants of M D. They became only sub-tenants. As their title was derived from the tenant M, they were bound by the decree against M and could not resist possession in execution of the ejectment decree against M. 1955 MBLR (Civ) 629 : 1956 MBLJ 958.

——S. 109—Property owned by joint lessors—Assignee becomes the sole lessor and can validly terminate the lease.

Originally the house was taken on lease by the tenant from the plaintiff and his brothers. The family properties later were partitioned and the suit house fell to plaintiff's share. The defendant contended that the fact of partition and the house having been assigned to the plaintiff's share in that partition was not enough, in addition there should have been attornment by the tenant in favour of the plaintiff before he could sue.

Held, that under S. 109 of the Transfer of Property Act the transferee of a lessor was entitled to the same rights as the lessor had. In the instant case, all the brothers were lessors jointly and in the partition the property was assigned to one of them which amounted to a transfer of interest by one to the other. Under the circumstances, the plaintiff had acquired the rights of the lessors and could validly terminate the lease 1963 MPLJ (Notes) 129.

A suit for ejectment of a tenant from part of the demised premises is maintainable at the instance of the holder of a superior lease in respect of that part of the premises. It is, however, necessary that the lessor also is made a party to the suit so that the decision relating to apportionment of rent may be binding on the lessor also. ——S. 109—Statutory attornment under S. 109 of Transfer of Property Act pre-supposes clear and undisputed title in the transferor—Transfer held to be fictitious and lessee not accepting transferee as his landlord — No statutory attornment — Remedy of transferee is to file suit for declaration and possession making lessor and lessee party to it. 1964 M P L J (Notes) 132.

——S. 109— Attornment.

On the transfer by sale of a property which is subject to a lease, whatever shows the assent of the tenant to the alienation of the reversion and his recognition of the alienee as landlord is a valid attornment. A promise to pay rent to the alienee and a tenant's continued occupancy under the tenancy with notice of alienation amounts to a recognition of the purchaser as his landlord. 1960 Mad W N 705 : (1961) 2 M L J 176 : 73 Mad L W 692 : AIR 1961 Mad 200 (203) (Pt A) (Pr 13).

——S, 109, Proviso — Assignee's title — When complete—Payment to assignor—When protected.

Under the Indian Law a letter of attornment is not necessary to complete the title of the assignee of the reversion. Under S. 109 the title of the assignee is complete on the execution of the deed of assignment and is not postponed till the notice of assignment. But nevertheless under the proviso to S. 109, the lessee is under no obligation to pay rent to the assignee if he has paid it to the assignor without having reason to believe that there was an assignment. Thus where the tenant knows that in spite of the letter of attornment and in spite of the purported assignment, the assignor was holding himself out as his landlord in all the proceedings in Court to which the tenant was party, the tenant must be held to have no reason to believe that any transfer had been made in favour of the assignee and consequently under the proviso to S. 109, Transfer of Property Act, the tenant is not liable to pay rent to the transferee and is fully justified in depositing the rent in the name of the assignor. I L R (1957) 2 Cal 426 : AIR 1957 Cal 627 (629, 630) (Pt A) (Prs 6, 9) (DB).

——S. 109—'Arrears of rent.'

It is true that according to S. 109 the transferee is not entitled to arrears of rent due before the transfer but where the tenancy is for a fixed term of one year and the rent accrues due only at the end of the year and the lessor has given a clear notice to the lessee that the transferor from him alone would be entitled to the rent from the beginning of the tenancy, the transferee is entitled to sue for arrears of rents for a period even prior to the transfer. 1955 Raj L W 129 : AIR 1955 Raj 167 (172) (Pt G) (Pr 31).

8. Apportionment of rent.

——S. 109—Transfer of leased premises to different persons - Nature of tenant's possession — Division of obligation to pay rent—Form of suit for.

Under S. 109, where there is a single obligation to pay the rent to a particular landlord that obligation gets divided into several obligations where the initial landlord effects transfer of the leased premises in parts to different transferees. It is open for the initial landlord, the assignees and the lessee to amicably settle the proportion at which the rent is to be paid to different transferees in pursuance of this divided obligation. But where there is no such amicable settlement it can be done by means of a suit. The tenant is lawfully in possession of the premises and by the subsequent act of the initial landlord of selling the leased premises to different purchasers his possession does not become ipso facto wrongful. He continues to be in possession in his own right as a tenant. He would be liable for payment of rent the proportion of which would be determinable in a suit designed for the purpose in the absence of any amicable settlement amongst all the parties concerned. But a suit for the recovery of damages or mesne profits on the ground that the defendant is in wrongful possession of the property is improper. 1960 M P C 107 : 1960 M P L J 172 : 1960 Jab L J 264 : AIR 1960 Madh Pra 247 (1) (247) (Pr 4),

——S. 110 — Unregistered lease—It does not create a tenancy to which S. 110 would apply. See Transfer of Property Act (1882), S. 106. A I R 1955 N U C (Ajmer) 4791.

——S. 110—Lease not mentioning date of commencement of lease — Lease when commences — Lessee holding over—Effect.

Where in a lease deed no date of commencement is mentioned the tenancy must be held to commence on the day the lease is made. This legal position will not be affected even if the lessee holds over after expiry of the lease and the lessor accepts rent for the period. ('51) 1951 R D (HC) 34 : 1951 All W R (HC) 225 : AIR 1952 All 141 (142) (Pt A) (Pr 7).

——S. 110 — Applicability — Periodic lease under unregistered deed—Lease is from month to month — Notice to quit expiring with last date of subsequent month—Validity of—S. 106.

Section 110 of the Transfer of Property Act does not apply to a case, where the tenancy has been found to be a tenancy from month to month and where the tenancy cannot be deemed to have commenced under any valid periodic lease in which the tenant on the expiry of the term held over. Where a periodic lease was granted under unregistered deed, the deed cannot be looked into to ascertain the commencement of the lease. In such a case, the lease must be considered to be an oral one from month to month. Where the lease is unregistered, and inadmissible as such, even if it is periodic lease, it must be held to be a tenancy from month to month from its very inception; to such a lease S. 110 is not attracted. Section 110 applies only to leases for a term. Therefore, where a monthly tenancy commenced on the 1st day of a month it could be properly and validly determined by service of a notice expiring on the last day of the subsequent month. —S. 110, first paragraph—Date of commencement of lease—Agreement to grant lease—Effect of.

The provision in S. 110, T. P. Act that 'where no day of commencement is named, the time so limited begins from the making of the lease applies only when a lease has been made in the way required by law as provided in S. 107 of the Transfer of Property Act. The provision cannot possibly have the same effect when only an agreement to execute a lease in future is being considered as it has where the lease has been executed. In the latter case, namely, where the lease has been executed in accordance with law and no day of commencement is named, the day of commencement is, by operation of law as provided in this section, the day of the making of the lease. Where, however, the lease has not been made, the date of the making of the lease is not yet ascertained and so there can be no question of the time of the lease beginning, in fact, from the making of the lease. To say this is however, not to say that the provision of S. 110 cannot or should not be taken into consideration in reading the mind of the parties to an agreement for the lease. The knowledge of the provisions of S. 110 of the Transfer of Property Act as regards the commencement of the lease and the conduct of the parties as influenced thereby are important circumstances to be taken into consideration in deciding whether an agreement has been reached by the parties as regards the date of commencement of the lease. A I R 1919 Cal 837, Rel. on.

Held, that in view of the surrounding circumstances of the case and in view of the provisions of S. 110 of the Transfer of Property Act it was reasonably clear that the parties intended that the date of execution of the lease would be the date of commencement of the lease and that was why no necessity was felt of entering into any express agreement as to the date of the commencement of the lease. The absence of any express stipulation as to the date of the commencement of the lease did not prevent the agreement for lease from being a concluded agreement. —Ss. 110, 111 (h) and 116—Tenant holding over—Termination of tenancy.

The mere fact that rents are paid and received according to the English Calendar months is not sufficient to show that the month of the tenancy runs according to the English Calendar month. The manner or mode of payment of rents may be an important element or factor to be considered on the point, but it cannot be the sure indication of the month of the tenancy in all cases.

Held, on the facts and circumstances of the suit which was one for ejectment of a tenant holding over and which involved the question of the validity of issue of notice to quit that the month of tenancy even after the expiry of the original registered lease continued as before; that is, ending with the 7th of an English calendar month, and there was no change in that respect. 61 Cal W N 407 : A I R 1957 Cal 357, Rel. on. 61 Cal W N 528 : A I R 1957 Cal 649 (650, 651) (Pt A) (Prs 14, 15) (DB).

—S. 110—Applicability to monthly tenancy.

Provisions of S. 110 of Transfer of Property Act are not applicable to a monthly tenancy as it is not a case where any time has been limited by the lease. Hence, the date of expiry of a monthly tenancy commencing on the first day of the month would be the last date of the month and not the 1st of the next month. See T. P. Act (4 of 1882), S. 105. AIR 1965 Pat 39 (DB).

—S. 110 — Applicability to State where T. P. Act is not in force.

In a State where the Transfer of Property Act is not in force, a notice of ejectment served in time on the tenant in accordance with S. 106 of the Act will not be invalid simply on the ground that it did not strictly comply with the technical provisions of S. 110 omitting to include the first day of the following month as the end of the month of the tenancy. 57 Punj L R 473 : 1LR (1955) Punj 1274 : AIR 1955 Punj 238 (239) (Pr 6).

1. Scope.

● —S. 111 (g) — Principles embodied in S. 111 (g) are equally applicable to tenancies to which T. P. Act does not apply. A I R 1965 S C 1923 (1928) (Pt A) (Pr 11).

—S. 111 — Right to determine tenancy and eject tenant — Basis of right — Right to evict and right to bring suit for eviction — Distinction. See Houses and Rents—U. P. (Temporary) Control of Rent and Eviction Act (3 of 1947), S. 3. 1965 All W R (HC) 161 : 1965 All L J 249.

—S. 111 — Vacancy — Meaning of — Sub-letting amounts to vacancy—Abandonment of tenement also covered by the definition—Termination of a tenancy in any of the manners laid down in S. 111 is not enough to justify a District Magistrate's passing an allotment order in respect of it, the accommodation must be vacant. See Houses and Rents—U. P. (Temporary) Control of Rent and Eviction Act (3 of 1947), S. 2 (b). 1962 All L J 553.

—S. 111 — Determination of tenancy — Modes of indicated. See Houses and Rents—U. P. (Temporary) Control of Rent and Eviction Act (3 of 1947), S. 7. 1959 All L J 343.

—S. 111 — Applicability — Notice complying with S. 111—Lease governed by S. 106 can be determined by such notice. See Transfer of Property Act (1882), S. 106. A I R 1958 All 729 (DB).

—S. 111 — Determination of lease — Essentials for indicated. See Transfer of Property Act (1882), S. 106. A I R 1958 All 32.

—S. 111 — Termination of lease — What would amount to — Gift by Riyaya of houses—Right of the zamindar.

The mere execution of a deed of gift by itself does not amount to abandonment entitling the zamindar to recover possession. In such cases of prohibited transfers two questions will always arise between the zamindar on the one hand and the transferor and the transferee on the other. The first is whether the transfer as between the transferor and transferee is itself valid according to law transfer of property and if is valid then whether such a transfer is prohibited either by the general law or by any custom or contract as between the zamindar and the transferor. If the transfer itself is invalid it conveys no title and is no transfer in law. The zamindar would in such a case automatically fail to recover possession. But if the transfer is valid then it becomes inoperative against the zamindar and as the person having the title he can recover possession.

Where a Riyaya made a gift of houses and the donees were in possession it was held that the transferee had renounced his rights but that the transferee did not get any rights against the zamindar who was therefore entitled to possession. 1951 All W R (HC) 11.

—S. 111—Applicability — Suit for recovery of possession and arrears of rent—Plaintiff making averment relying upon provisions of S. 13 (1) (g) of Bombay Rents Act (57 of 1947)—Held the view that the suit fell under S. 111, T. P. Act was beyond the scope of plaint itself. See Houses and Rents—Bombay Rents, Hotel and Lodging House Rates Control Act (57 of 1947), S. 13 (1) (g). A I R 1957 Bom 201 (DB).

—S. 111—Tenancy can be determined in any of the modes laid down in S. 111 — Once tenancy is determined under S. 108 (q) the lessee is bound to put the lessor into possession of property. See Houses and Rents — Bombay Rents, Hotel and Lodging House Rates Control Act (57 of 1947), S. 28. AIR 1953 Bom 76 (DB).

—S. 111 — Decree — Executability — Declaratory decree — Not executable — Judgment-debtors, held, were not liable to ejectment without giving notice as required by S. 111 and execution of decree was barred by provisions of T. P. Act - Decision of single judge dated 4-6-1964, Reversed. See Civil P. C. (1908). S. 47. 1965 Kash L J 369 : AIR 1966 J and K 13 (DB).

—S. 111—Determination of lease by tenant—Duty of lessee.

A tenancy cannot be terminated by merely vacating the house or not paying the rent. It is necessary for the tenant to inform the landlord and deliver vacant house to him for surrendering the tenancy. 1960 M P L J (Notes) 116.

—S. 111 — Lease invalid — Lessee entering into possession under lease and paying rent — Presumption of monthly or yearly tenancy under S. 106 may arise — Lessee is neither tenant-at-will or tenant-at-sufferance — Lease has to be determined in one of the ways mentioned in S. 111. See T. P. Act (1882), S. 106. AIR 1955 Nag 306 (DB).

—S. 111 — Applicability — Houses and Rents — Bihar Buildings (Lease, Rent and Eviction) Control Act (3 of 1947), S. 11.

Section 111, T. P. Act, has no application to the proceeding for eviction under the Bihar Buildings (Lease, Rent and Eviction) Control Act. AIR 1949 Mad 780, Rel. on. ILR 30 Pat 366 : AIR 1951 Pat 529 (532) (Pt D) (Pr 11) (DB).

—Ss. 111 and 1 — Applicability — To State of Punjab.

Section 111 of the T. P. Act has no application to the Punjab. The provisions of this section have not been applied as a rule of equity, justice or good conscience by any of the High Court in the territories to which this provision is not made applicable under S. 1 of T. ——S. 111 — Notice to quit — Lease executed before the T. P. Act will be governed not by provisions of that Act but by local law — Hence technical requirements of notice under S. 106 are not applicable to notice to quit given in such a case. See T. P. Act (1882), S. 106. AIR 1955 NUC(Sau) 97i.

——S. 111 — Building lease — Right of tenant to carry out repairs on failure of landlord to do it— Extent of—Tenant entitled to maintain it in such condition as is fit to be used for the purpose for which it was let—Repairs necessitating renewal and replacements of parts — Incidents of lease will continue to attach to subject-matter of lease notwithstanding such alteration — Lessor cannot get premature termination of lease by failing to carry out repairs and allowing the building to be destroyed by natural causes. See T. P. Act (1882), S. 108 (f). ILR 1955 Trav-Co 1262.

——Ss. 111, 105—Ejectment suit—Tenant, not tenant-at-will — Onus — Tenant building house on land with landlord's permission — Effect — (Easements Act (1882), S. 60).

In suit for ejectment the burden of proof lies on the plaintiff to show that he has a right to eject the defendant before the onus shifts to the defendant to prove that he has right of permanant occupancy.

Where the defendants are not tenants-at-will, their rights are to be governed by the terms of the agreement. Where in such a case the landlord has allowed the defendants to build a house on the land, the defendants cannot be ejected so long as the house continues to exist on the site, where the licencor has not proved that he had specifically reserved the right to revoke the licence at any time he liked. Section 111, cl. (a) which deals with the termination of leases by efflux of time has to be read with S. 116. Where before the determination of the lease by efflux of time the lessee applies to the Custodian for the confirmation of the lease under S. 5-A, East Punjab Evacuee's (Administration of Property) Act, 1947, and the Custodian impliedly assents to his continuing in possession, the lessee does not become trespasser. 3. Renewal of lease.

——S. 111—Covenant for renewal runs with the land — Both the lessor and the lessee and their successors in title are bound by it — Lessee is not liable to be ejected, where he has exercised that option before expiry of term against assignee from lessor or lessee. See T. P. Act (1882), S. 40. AIR 1959 Assam 22 (DB).

——S. 111 — Renewal of lease — If the option in a lease does not state terms of renewal, the new lease will be for same period and on same terms as original lease in respect of essential conditions thereof except as to covenant for renewal. See T. P. Act (1882), S. 105. AIR 1955 NUC (Assam) 2804.

——S. 111—Renewal of lease.

Ordinarily, a lease will be determined after the expiration of the term of the first renewal. This does not, however, mean that there will be no renewal at all thereafter and the lease will be deemed to be exhausted after the first renewal. The lease may contain a covenant for perpetual renewal. Even if there is no such agreement, the lessor in his discretion may allow the lessee to remain in possession of the leasehold and may renew the lease with the consent of the lessor. There is no legal bar to such a renewal after the expiry of the first renewal. 1957 B L J R 662 : I L R 36 Pat 532.

4. Clause (b)—Term limited conditionally.

——S. 111 (b) or (g) — Distinction between Cls. (b) and (g) — Indicated — Lease to company — Clause determining lease on liquidation and also providing for re-entry—Liquidation of company—Applicability of Cls. (b) and (g) — Notice to determine lease by some of lessors — Lease whether determines — Right to possession—Companies Act (1913), S. 178.

In forfeiture "the term created by the instrument" is defeated on the happening of a particular event or the doing of a particular act — that is sub-cl. (g). In sub-cl. (b) on the other hand, the term does not come to an end on the doing of an act or the happening of an event. It applies where the time is limited conditionally on the happening of some event and that event happens.

In (b) the term is fixed conditionally and depends upon the happening of a future event. In (g) the term is brought to an end by a defeasance clause. This is the difference between (b) and (g).

A lease for a term of 99 years, granted to a company, contained, among others, the following clause: "In case the company goes to liquidation voluntarily or otherwise, this lease shall cease to be operative and the Company shall forthwith make over possession of the abad (the property in question) to the proprietors". The Company went into voluntary liquidation. Later a compulsory winding up order was also made.

Held (i) that sub-cl. (b) did not apply to the case under consideration. The term in the case was not fixed conditionally on the happening of some event within the meaning of sub-clause (b).

(ii) The lease contained an express condition on the breach of which forfeiture was incurred.

(iii) The notice to determine the lease was not a good notice. Therefore there was no determination of the lease by forfeiture. Therefore the liquidator under S. 178, Companies Act, was entitled to possession.

(iv) Queere: Whether 'insolvency' in Cl. (g) included 'liquidation' of a company. (1902) A C 187, Ref. A I R 1952 Cal 207 (208 to 210) (Prs 13, 16, 24, 30, 31, 32, 34).

——S. 111 (b)—Applicability.

A lease was for a fixed period of 40 years and the time for which the lease was granted was not limited conditionally. On the contrary, the condition was one of defeasance that if the lessees carry on any other business than manufacture of salt or its bye-products, the lease shall stand cancelled automatically.

Held, that the lease was not governed by Cl. (b) of S. 111. AIR 1957 Orissa 35 (37) (Pt C) (Pr 9) (DB).

——Ss. 111 (b) and (g) 3, (1) —Scope of — Kabuliat executed by lessee for 5 years — Condition of termination on hapening of an event — Binding character of—Ss. 106 and 107.

Cases in which the term itself is limited conditionally on the happening of some event and cases in which the term is defeated under a condition in the lease on the happening of an event would all fall under Cl. (b) if they do not fall under Cl. (g) (1). If the term is defeated on account of a default on the part of the lessee then alone the case can come under Cl. (g) (1). If however the term is defeated by the happening of a particular event then it is a case in which time is limited conditionally on the happening of some event within the meaning of cl. (d). 5. Clause (c)—Cessor of lessor's interest.

——S. 111 (c) — Effect of redemption on lease by mortgagee—On mere redemption of mortgage without the mortgagor exercising his option of putting an end to tenancy, the tenancy does not automatically and ipso facto lapse on date of redemption. See T. P. Act (1882), S. 76 (a). AIR 1954 All 16 (DB).

——S. 111 (c) — Monthly tenancy created by mortgagee in possession—Subsequent suit for redemption by mortgagor — Decree for redemption — Tenancy terminates and tenant is not entitled to protection from eviction. See T. P. Act (1882), S. 76 (a). AIR 1963 Bom 42 (DB).

——S. 111—Lease by mortgagee in possession—When interest of mortgagee comes to an end, the lease created by him also determines. See T. P. Act (4 of 1882), S. 76. AIR 1958 Bom 53.

——S. 111 (c) — Sub-tenancy lawfully created by tenant—Sub-tenant cultivating land — Sub-lease will be determined by expiry of period of the head lease. 59 Bom L R 101, Overruled. See Tenancy Laws — Bombay Tenancy and Agricultural Lands Act (47 of 1948), S. 4. AIR 1957 Bom 195 (FB).

——S. 111 — Suit for redemption — Tenant of mortgagee made party to suit but not party to compromise between mortgagor and mortgagee—Decree not binding on tenant — Lease in favour of tenant however came to an end on decree for redemption of mortgage and he could not continue in possession—Actual possession and not mere symbolical possession should be given to mortgagor — Remedy for mortgagor against order of trial Court ordering symbolical possession was by way of appeal and not suit. See Civil P. C. (1908), O. 21, R. 36. AIR 1963 Guj 328.

——S. 111 (c)—Lessor's interest in property ceasing —Termination of lease — Conflict between Evacuee Propeity Act and House Rent Control Act—Effect of.

The power given by Ss. 8 and 11 under the Hyderabad Administration of Evacuee Property Regulation to the Custodian as lessor of the evacuee property are inconsistent with the provisions of the Hyderabad Houses (Rent, Eviction and Lease) Control Act. Therefore, a tenant holding the premises under the Custodian cannot assert that during the period the property vested in the Custodian she got some statutory rights which continue even after the interest of the lessor (Custodian) has ceased. It follows that, in the absence of such statutory rights in favour of the tenant, the general rule of law, that the termination of the superior tenure affects all sub-tenures will apply. ILR (1955) Hyd 71 : AIR 1955 Hyd 98 (100) (Pt B) (Pr 8) (DB).

——S. 111 (c) — Lease by usufructuary mortgagee—Duration—Redemption by mortgagor—Effect.

The general rule is that a person cannot by transfer or otherwise, confer a better title on another than he himself has. A usufructuary mortgagee, therefore, cannot create an interest in the mortgaged property which will enure beyond the termination of his interest as mortgagee. It follows that he may grant leases not extending beyond the period of a mortgage; any lease granted by him must come to an end at redemption. AIR 1952 S C 205, Rel. on.

The interest of a tenant of a mortgaged house therefore comes to an end on redemption of the mortgage and the mortgagor is entitled to actual possession of the house in execution of his decree for redemption. ILR (1952) Hyd 1012 : AIR 1953 Hyd 129 (129) (Pt A) (Prs 4, 5).

Though no writing is ordinarily necessary for surrendering a tenancy, if the original lease is registered, the surrender of a portion of the tenancy with an abatement of rent can only be effected by a registered instrument as in such a case the surrender involves a variation of the original contract of tenancy. 7. Clause (d)—Merger.

——S. 111 (d)—Merger—Lessee acquiring share in leased property — Acquisition by Mokarraridar of portion of lakhraj interest — (Landlord and tenant—Lease, merger.)

If the lessor purchases the lessee's interest, the lease no doubt is extinguished as the same man cannot at the same time be both a landlord and a tenant, but there is no extinction of the lease if one of the several lessees purchases only a part of the lessor's interest. In such a case the leasehold and the reversion cannot be said to coincide. Hence, in the case of an estate which is subject to lakhraj and mokarrari interests, mere purchase by one of the several joint holders of the mokararri interest, of portions of the lakhraj interest cannot bring about an extinction of the lease or break its integrity. There is no coalescence of the interest of the lessor and the lessee in the whole of the estate and that being so, the mokarrari interest of the purchaser does not merge in his lakhraj interest. 1951 All L J (SC) 20 : 1951 S C J 252 : 1951 S C R 153 : 64 Mad L W 531 : (1952) S C A 429 : I L R 30 Pat 664 : AIR 1951 S C 186 (188, 189) (Pt A) (Prs 9, 10).

——S. 111 (d)—Sale of demised property to tenant determines lease even though sale is one with a condition for repurchase — Tenant's possession after reconveyance of property in the absence of fresh agreement of tenancy is wrongful — Tenant remains full owner of property from date of his purchase until resale by him in the absence of provision for keeping tenancy right alive either in sale deed or the agreement to reconvey — Hence execution of agreement to reconvey makes no difference to applicability of section to the case. See T. P. Act (1882), S. 108. 1963 M P L J (Notes) 136.

The general principle of merger is that a derivative right automatically merges into the parent right, if the holder of the former happens at any subsequent period to acquire the latter and it will also merge if a person holding the residue of the parent right (or reversion to the derivative right) acquires the latter. The most important requirement is that there should be a derivative relationship and the rights should belong to the same genus.

The lessee's right and the mortgagee's right are not mutuallay inter-related, but derived by independent routes from the right of proprietorship. Certainly neither of them can co-exist with the proprietor's right, and merge into it if either of them rests in a person who has already got the reversion. But they do not swallow each other because they are not mutually derivative.

While the tenancy right will merge into the right of the proprietor if it is acquired by the tenant, it will not so merge if the tenant acquires only the mortgagee's right. There can be no merger of the tenancy right into the right of the mortgagee. AIR 1953 Trav-Co 384; (1956) 2 Mad L J 235 : A I R 1957 Mad 212, Diss.; I L R 24 All 487; 12 Ind Cas 734, Rel. on. 1960 Jab L J 934 : 1961 M P L J 66.

——Ss. 111 (d) and 58—Tenant becoming mortgagee —No merger of right—Mortgage redeemed — Tenant reverts to former position.

Where a tenant takes a mortgage from his landlord of any property then the effect of the mortgage is merely to render the tenant's right dormant and the parties on redemption revert to their former position. 7 Nag L R 154, Foll. In order that there may be a merger so as to destroy the tenancy, the two estates which are supposed to coalesce must be vested in the same person at the same time and in the same right. The two estates must wholly coalesce. A mortgagee is no doubt a transfer of interest, but it is not a transfer of all the rights, of the owner. In a mortgage some rights are transferred to the mortgagee and some remain vested in the mortgagor. Therefore, when the lessor mortgages with the tenant the property occupied by him as a tenant, there is no transfer to the tenant of the whole property. Clause (d) of S. 111 of the Transfer of Property Act has, therefore, no applicability in such a case. 1960 M P L J (Notes) 173.

——S. 111 (d) — Determination of lease by merger of interest.

Where the lease-hold right and the reversion coincide there is a merger of the lesser estate in the greater, i. e., leasehold rights are merged in the reversion. There cannot, however, be any merger unless the lessee acquires the reversion by a valid transaction. ILR (1954) Nag 634 : 1954 Nag L J 573 : AIR 1954 Nag 328 (330) (Pt B) (Pr 8) (DB).

Where merger is pleaded apart from provisions of S. 111 it will have to be determined in each case as to what was the intention of the owner of the bigger estate, whether he intended to keep the smaller estate alive or whether he intended at the time he acquires the bigger estate that the smaller estate should merge and be wiped out. ILR (1963) 2 Punj 1 : 1963 Cur L J 377 : AIR 1964 Punj 210 (211) (Pt B) (Pr 5) (DB).

——S. 111 (f)—Surrender—Essentials of—Requisition order — Possession of Government under, does not operate as surrender.

Surrender consists in the yielding up of the term by tenant to landlord. There must be delivery of possession by the tenant to the landlord and the acceptance of possession by the landlord. It is a mutual act between the landlord and the tenant. Where the Government takes possession of the property under a requisition order under S. 75 (a) of Defence of India Rules, 1939, there is no mutuality in it because they take possession both from the landlord and from the tenant. It cannot therefore operate as surrender so as to terminate the tenancy. 51 Bom L R 797: AIR 1950 Bom 89 (91) (Pt C) (Prs 9, 10).

9. Express surrender — Clause (e).

——S. 111 (e) — Lease of reversion — Surrender — Validity.

In England it has been held that where the subject-matter of the lease is a reversion, it is "a matter lying in grant, and not in livery, and of which therefore, there could be valid surrender in fact otherwise than by deed." Under S. 111 (e) of the Transfer of Property Act, if a lessee yields up his interest under the lease the lessor by mutual agreement between them, there is an express surrender or surrender in fact. In India, a surrender may be oral and may be inferred from the acts and conduct of the parties, there being no statutory provision like S. 3 of the English Statute of Frauds that a surrender should be evidenced by a document in writing or, like S. 3 of 8 and 9 Vic., C. 106, requiring deed for the purpose. ——S. 111 (f)—Doctrine of implied surrender—Law in India.

Implied surrender is recognised and provided for by S. 111, Cl. (f) of the Transfer of Property Act and the illustration thereto, which refers to a lessee accepting from his lessor a new lease of the property leased, to take effect during the continuance of an existing lease. The illustration is obviously not exhaustive of cases of implied surrender. A surrender by operation of law determines the lease and involves an extinction of the rights of the lessee in respect of the properties surrendered as from the date of the surrender and the estate vests immediately in the lessor. If a lessee for years accepts a new lease by indenture of part of the lands it is a surrender for that part only and not for the whole and though a contract for years cannot be so divided, as to be avoided for part of the years and to subsist for the residue, either by act of the party or act in law, yet the land itself may be divided, and the tenant may surrender one or two acres either expressly or by act of law, and the lease for the residue will stand good and untouched. (1956) Andh W R 1093 : AIR 1957 Andh Pra 619 (624 to 626) (Pt E) (Prs 12, 14, 15, 17, 18) (DB).

——S. 111 — Implied surrender does not depend on intention.

Implied surrender or surrender by operation of law occurs (1) by creation of new relationship or (2) by relinquishment of possession. It does not depend on the intention of the parties like express surrender. It has to be implied from the conduct of the parties or such facts as relinquishment of possession by the lessee and taking over possession by the lessor. AIR 1952 Cal 455 (464) (Pt F) (Pr 19).

——S. 111 (f)—Acceptance of new lease—Effect.

If a lessee accepts a new contract of tenancy, it operates as a surrender of the old tenancy, for a new lease cannot be granted unless the old is surrendered. Such a surrender takes place by operation of law and the intention of the parties is immaterial : (1852) 7 Exch 319, Ref. ('51) 55 C W N 518 : 87 Cal L J 345 : ILR (1952) 2 Cal 167: AIR 1952 Cal 196 (197) (Pt C) (Pr 11) (DB).

——S. 111 (f) — Implied surrender — Lessee also acquiring rights of mortgagee in possession—Effect.

Implied surrender by operation of law only happens, in the case of a lease, where the lessee acquires a right or begins to occupy a new status fundamentally incompatible with that of the lessee. But there is no impossibility in a person being a mortgagee in possession and the lessee at the same time. There can be no surrender by operation of law. 1960 Jab L J 934 : 1961 M P L J 66.

——S. 111 (f) — Possessory mortgage in favour of lessee—Implied surrender of lease.

Where a possessory mortgage is executed in favour of a lessee under a verumpattam lease, the lessee's interest gets merged in the mortgage rights at its acquisition as a large and superior interest and on accepting the possessory mortgage there is an implied surrender of the lease hold. 1953 Trav-Co 584. Where the lessor grants the lease of his property in favour of a lessee and while that lease was subsisting grants a second lease in favour of another, it operates as an assignment of the reversion and this entitles the second lessee to recover the rent from the earlier lessee and also to possession of the properties on the termination of the earlier lease. 1951 Mad W N 485: (1951) 1 Mad L J 165 : AIR 1951 Mad 718 (719) (Pr 8).

A surrender of lease can be implied by the conduct of the parties evidencing the giving of consent to a new relationship. A new lease operates as a surrender of the old lease and similarly the creation of relationship of licensor and licensee in substitution of the relationship of landlord and tenant amounts to the surrender of the former lease. When a surrender takes place by operation of law, the rule of estoppel bars a party from disputing what he has surrendered. (1844) 13 M & W 285 and (1900) 1 Q B 426, Rel. on.

Plaintiff acquired the suit premises in exchange for his own property situated at a place now in Pakistan. The exchange had been registered prior to partition of the country and the defendant who was in occupation of a portion of the premises started paying rent to plaintiff thereafter. The premises were, however, declared to be evacuee property and the defendant executed an agreement with the Custodian stating that he was in occupation of the premises as a licensee of the Custodian. As result of litigation between the plaintiff and the Custodian the property was declared to be non-evacuee property. Thereafter plaintiff, by a notice required the defendant to vacate the premises and on latter's failure filed a suit for a mandatory injunction.

Held, that after the defendant executed the agreement with the Custodian the old lease came to an end and as the lease and the licence with respect to the same premises could not contemporaneously co-exist, the previous lease was deemed to have been surrendered with the Custodian who had the power not only to amend the terms of any lease under which any evacuee property was held or occupied by a person but even to terminate any lease, regardless of the fact whether it had been amended before or after the commencement of the statute, vide, S. 9-A of East Punjab Act 14 of 1947 and S. 12 of the Administration of Evacuee's Property Act, 1950. ——S. 111, Cl. (f)—Principle underlying clause.

The principle underlying Cl. (f) of S. 111 is that whenever a certain relationship exists between two parties in respect of a subject matter and a new relationship arises as regards the identical subject-matter if the two sets of relationships cannot co-exist as being inconsistent and incompatible that is to say, if the latter can come into effect only on termination of the earlier that would be deemed to have been terminated in order to enable the latter to operate. ——S. 111, Cl. (f)—Implied surrender.

The acceptace by the lessee, who takes possessory mortgage of his lease-hold from the lessor, of the obligation to surrender the property on redemption by payment of the price of redemption, namely, all the mortgage money and value of improvements necessarily implies the non-existence of his rights to possession of the property as lessee. There is, therefore, an implied surrender of the lease, with the execution and acceptance of the possessory mortgage. ——S. 111 (g) — Applicability to eviction under S. 13 of the Andhra Tenancy Act—(Tenancy Laws—Andhra Tenancy Act (18 of 1956), S. 13).

The conditions which occasion forfeiture in accordance with Clause (g) of S. 111 of the Transfer of Property Act can in no sense be made applicable to eviction under S. 13 of the Andhra Tenancy Act. The ejectment of the lessee on the ground of forfeiture mentioned in the second proviso to S. 112 of the Transfer of Property Act itself is not the same as the eviction provided for on the termination of the tenancy in S. 13 of the Andhra Tenancy Act, 1956. There is also another additional reason; while the lease under the Transfer of Property Act is in its nature contractual, the tenancy created under Act 18 of 1956 creates a statutory relationship between the landlord and tenant, regulation of which has been provided for in that Act itself. As a result of amendment of S. 111 (g) in the year 1929 in the case of disclaimer of the lessor's title by the lessee it is incumbent on the lessor to give notice in writing to the lessee of his intention to determine the lease before a suit could be filed by him against the lessee for eviction. This rule embodied in the amended S. 111 (g) applies to agricultural leases as a principle of justice, equity and good conscience. 52 Bom L R 909 : I L R (1951) Bom 293 : A I R 1951 Bom 283 (284) (Pr 7) (DB).

——S. 111—Lease — Condition against alienation—Forfeiture—Partial transfer—Effect of.

In the absence of a specific provision to the contrary a part transfer or part assignment of a lease does not amount to a breach of condition of covenant against alienation or assignment and does not entail a forfeiture on that ground. To entail a forfeiture transfer of the whole would be necessary, and such transfer of the whole, again, must be without the lessor's consent. ——Ss. 111 (g) and 114-A — Notice under S. 111 (g) cannot be waived—Distinction between notice under S. 114-A and one under S. 111 (g).

Since S. 111 (g) does not contain any clause like 'in the absence of a contract to the contrary' the statutory requirement of notice specified in S. 111 (g) of the Transfer of Property Act cannot be waived by contract and must prevail. The notice mentioned in S. 114-A of the Transfer of Property Act is an altogether different notice which has to be given in order to give an opportunity to the lessee to avoid forfeiture in cases where a breach of condition is capable of remedy and such a notice is not required in a case of alienation ; but the notice under S. 111 (g) of the Transfer of Property Act is a different notice and it cannot be said that that notice is also not required in case of alienation.

It may appear to be anomalous that even in a case of complete alienation by the lessee such notice under S. 111 (g) of the Transfer of Property Act should be required and the landlord should not be able to obtain possession as against the alienee whom he has never recognised as a lessee, but has all along treated him as a trespasser, but such appears to be the law and the law has to be applied strictly. A I R 1960 Cal 40 (43, 44) (Pt C) (Prs 18, 19).

——S. 111 (g)—Forfeiture—Basic requirements of—Time when forfeiture takes effect.

Forfeiture of a lease requires the operation of two factors, one is a breach by the lessee of an express condition of the lease which provides for re-entry on such breach and the other is a notice by the lessor expressing his intention to determine the lease. These are the two basic requirements of forfeiture. The moment a breach of such an express condition providing for re-entry is committed by the lessee the lease becomes voidable by the lessor but the forfeiture is not complete unless and until the lessor elects to avail of the breach by giving notice of his intention to determine the lease.

The actual date of the forfeiture is the date of the notice of the forfeiture. Where a forfeiture has been incurred for breach of any condition the lessor must do some act evidencing his intention to avail of the forfeiture and that act under the Transfer of Property Act is to give notice to determine the lease and the lease will be avoided from that time only. ——S. 111 (g)—Applicability — Lease prior to coming into force of T. P. Act.

The provision of S. 111 (g) as to notice in writing as the preliminary to a suit for ejectment based on forfeiture of a lease is not based upon any principle of justice, equity or good conscience and cannot govern leases made prior to the coming into force of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, or to leases executed prior to 1st April, 1930. The rights and obligations under those leases have to be determined according to the rules of law prevailing at the time and the only rule applicable seems to be that a tenant cannot by his unilateral act and by his own wrong determine the lease unless the lessor gives an indication by some unequivocal expression of intention on his part of taking advantage of the breach. 1953 S C J 306 : (1953) 1 Mad L J 715 : A I R 1953 S C 228, Foll. ('58) 24 Cut L T 433.

A lease executed in the former Nawanagar State before the T. P. Act was made applicable to the territory comprised in that State will not be governed by the provisions of T. P. Act in view of S. 2 (c) but will be governed by the Common Law principles which were usually held applicable by all Courts in India. In such a case it is not necessary for the landlord to do any overt act showing an intention to determine the lease nor is any notice to determine the lease necessary. The mere institution of a suit for ejectment on the allegation that tenant has transferred his interest in the lease and has failed to pay the arrears of rent is a sufficient indication of landlord's intention to determine the lease and no separate notice is necessary to determine it.

Even if the lease does not reserve to the landlord a right to re-enter in the event of the tenant committing breach of any of the conditions of lease, the landlord will be entitled to recover possession by reason of S. 13 (e) of the Bombay Rent Act which is applicable to the suit if he succeeds in showing that the tenant has transferred his interest in the premises. ——Ss. 111 (g), 112 and 113 — Unauthorised alterations by tenant — Forfeiture — Suit for damages and injunction—Decree—Effect—Waiver—S. 108.

Where the tenants substantially and materially damage the leased building and caused material alterations in it without the consent of the lessors, this amounts to a breach of the implied covenants mentioned in clauses (m), (o) and (p) of S. 108 of the Transfer of Property Act. The breach of the conditions only makes the lease voidable and the forfeiture would not be complete unless and until the lessors give notice that they have exercised their option to determine the lease under S. 111, clause (g) of the Act. The forfeiture under S. 111, clause (g) would be deemed to have been waived not only by acceptance of rent which becomes due since the forfeiture but by the act on the part of the lessors in filing a suit for damages for alterations done and for injunction restraining the tenants from making further alterations. The act of the plaintiffs in compromising the suit and accepting an amount for the alterations in the building amounts to an act on the part of the lessors showing an intention to treat the lease as subsisting. In these circumstances and in view of S. 113 of the Transfer of Property Act the notice given under S. 111, clause (h) must be deemed to have been waived with the express or implied consent of the persons to whom it was given by an act of the persons giving it, showing an intention to treat the lease as subsisting and the suit for ejectment instituted after the notice and having waived the breach by compromise in the previous suit cannot be maintained. 1958 All W R (HC) 679 : 1958 All L J 574 : A I R 1959 All 33 (36) (Pt D) (Pr 15) (DB).

The right to institute a suit for ejectment accrues only after requirements of S. 114-A have been complied with. Broadly speaking, a permanent lease is liable, like any other lease to be forfeited on breach of a condition which provides that on breach thereof the lessor may re-enter. A condition against non-transferability in the perpetual leases is not illegal or void and is binding on the parties. ——S. 111 (g)—Forfeiture on breach of condition — No clause as to re-entry—Effect.

A lease deed may contain a clause that the lessee's title will be existinguished on the breach of a condition mentioned in the deed. But this is not sufficient for the purpose of enforcing forfeiture as contemplated under S. 111, Cl. (g). It is definitely to be provided that the lessor will re-enter or resume possession. There is no particular form for the clause of re-entry. But the clause or clauses in the lease-deed must sufficiently show that on the breach of the conditions the landlord reserves to himself the right of taking over possession. AIR 1957 Orissa 35 (36) (Pt A) (Pr 5) (DB).

——S. 111 (g)—Forfeiture by breach of condition—Prohibition 'to do any other business'—Strict proof.

In order to incur the liability of forfeiture of tenancy, it must be held that the tenant has violated the condition embodied in the lease. Where one of the terms of a lease deed is that the lease will stand cancelled automatically in case the lessee does any other business on the property leased, then in such a context doing a business always connotes a course of conduct where some element of habitually and systematically doing a particular thing is indicated. Mere stray, occasional and spasmodic acts on the part of the lessee, even if proved, cannot be taken to mean that the lessee was carrying on a business. In order that the lessor may be allowed the right of re-entry on the cancellation of the lease on account of a forfeiture clause, very strict proof is necessary. ——S. 111 (g) — Forfeiture of tenancy — Denial of title — Principles — Putting landlord to proof of his title — Does not amount to denial of his title.

The principles that govern the forfeiture of tenancy are firstly that the denial of the landlord's title must be unequivocal. Secondly, when the landlord's title is denied in writing, the writing should be construed as a whole without giving undue emphasis to one or the other part of it. Thirdly, the onus of proving forfeiture of tenancy rights lies on the landlord plaintiff and lastly, the lessee may in good faith and for his own protection put the transferee of his lessor to strict proof of his title to the demised property before making payment to him.

Held, on a consideration of written statement by the lessee in the previous rent suit that it could not be said that there was any unambiguous repudiation of the title so as to invite forfeiture of tenancy, but the tenant had only put the landlord to proof of his title. ——S. 111 (g) (2) — Setting up title in third person — What constitutes — Alleging landlord to be only a co-sharer with another person — Effect — Section 105.

The expression 'setting up a title in a third person' in S. 111 (g) (2) does not mean setting up full title in a third person or asserting that the landlord had no title to the property at all. The definition of lease in S. 105 clearly shows that the terms 'lease,' 'lessor' and 'lessee' go together and in connection with a particular transaction would have reference only to the particular property covered by the lease, the particular person who transfers the right to enjoy that property and the person who accepts the transfer from such a transferor. In view of these definitions, a lessee would be said to renounce his character as such when he denies either that he holds that property as a lessee or states that he though a lessee of that particular property is not a lessee from the person who let it out to him. Where therefore the lessee alleges in his written statement that the person from whom he has taken the lease holds only a partial proprietary right in the leased property and another person is also a co-sharer therein he states, in effect that the person is not his lessor and the lease in his favour is determined by forfeiture on account of his renouncing his character as lessees of that person by setting up a title in a third person. AIR 1958 All 847 (848, 849) (Pt A) (Prs 9, 10. 17) (DB).

—S. 111 (g) (2) — Disclaimer — Tenant questioning the extent of the landlord's title.

Courts always lean against forfeiture.

To constitute a disclaimer as contemplated by S. 111 (g) (2) of the T. P, Act there must be a distinct and unequivocal renunciation of the tenancy. Where the tenant does not set up a title to the whole of the property in himself or a title to the whole in others but merely questions the extent of the landlord's title admitting that a part of the title vested in the landlord, there is no disclaimer as contemplated by law and hence there can be no forfeiture in such a case. 1951 A W R (HC) 24.

——S. 111 (g) — Denial of title of lessor by lessee—Forfeiture and determination of lease.

The renouncing of his character as a lessee by setting up a title in a third person or by claiming a title in himself makes the lease voidable but does not ipso facto put an end to the lease. The lessee is thereby exposed to the risk of forfeiting his lease and the lessor is given the right if he so elects to determine the lease. There is, therefore, no determination of lease by forfeiture unless and until the lessor gives notice that he has exercised the option to determine the lease. ——S. 111 (g)—Forfeiture for denial of title.

To entitle the plaintiff to a decree for ejectment on the ground of determination of the tenancy by forfeiture, there must be both disclaimer and manifestation of intention to determine the lease and these must be prior to the institution of the suit. Further, the case of forfeiture cannot be considered unless it was set up in the plaint.

If the defendant does not set up a title in a third person or claims a title in himself but simply denies the title of the plaintiff who is not the lessor but claims as heir to the lessor, there is no disclaimer. 1953 Nag L J 497 : ILR (1953) Nag 932 : AIR 1953 Nag 353 (355) (Pt A) (Prs 6, 7, 9) (DB).

It is well settled that the interest of an under-raiyat (dar raiyati interest) with occupancy status is not heritable under the law though it may be heritable by custom. Where in a suit for eviction the defence was that the defendants had acquired permanent occupancy rights in the disputed lands from their father who had acquired those rights by prescription, and both the Courts below concurrently held that the custom of heritability was not established, the status of the defendants was nothing more than that of a trespasser and they were liable to be ejected. ● ——S. 111 (g) — Notice of intention to determine lease on forfeiture.

The provision in S. 111 (g) as to notice in writing as a preliminary to a suit for ejectment based on forfeiture of a lease is not based on any principle of justice, equity or good conscience and cannot govern leases made prior to the coming into force of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, or to leases executed prior to 1st April, 1930. The rights and obligations under those leases have to be determined according to the rules of law prevailing at the time and the only rule applicable seems to be that a tenant cannot by his unilateral act and by his own wrong determine the lease unless the lessor gives an indication by some unequivocal expression of intention on his part of taking advantage of the breach.

The statement in A I R 1948 Mad 275 (F.B) that Ss. 105 to 116 of the Transfer of Property Act are founded upon principles of reason and equity cannot be accepted either as correct or precise. Of course, to the extent that those sections of the Act give statutory recognition to principles of justice, equity and good conscience they are applicable also to cases not governed by the Act. ——S. 111 (g)—Determination of lease by forfeiture —Notice—S. 106.

Where the lease deed clearly stipulated that in case of default for three consecutive months in payment of rent, the lessee would be liable to vacate the premises and the lessor would be entitled to terminate the lease and exercise the right of re-entry and the notice served on the lessee stated that as tenant-defendant had neglected to pay rent from October, 1950, that is for more than three consecutive months, the landlord 'hereby forfeits and terminates the lease' and that the tenant was 'to quit, vacate and deliver peaceful possession' of the premises to the landlord on the expiry of June, 1951.

Held, that the notice was one under S. 111 (g) and not under S 106, T. P. Act, and it fully satisfied the requirements of S. 111 (g). There was therefore a valid determination of the lease. 62 Cal W N 753 : (1958) 1 Cal L J 110 : ILR (1958) 1 Cal 671 : A I R 1958 Cal 428 (429) (Pt A) (Pr 5) (DB).

——Ss. 111 (g) and 114 - Forfeiture—Notice—Necessity — Provision for automatic forfeiture on non-payment of rent—Legality.

The provision as to notice by the lessor has been inserted in S. 111 (g) for the benefit of the lessee and is a protective stipulation which cannot be set at nought by the contract entered into between the parties; and construing the provisions of S. 111 (g) in the context of the English principle of equity embodied in S. 114 of the Act that a forfeiture clause for non-payment of rent is merely security for the rent, the provision as to notice contained in the section cannot be waived by the act of parties. There is, therefore, no forfeiture of lease where the finding of fact is that a notice has not been given by the lessor to the lessee of the forfeiture of the tenancy for non-payment of rent even though an express term in the registered lease provides for an automatic forfeiture on non-payment of rent. 1960 Pat L R 116 : 1960 B L J R 560 : ILR 39 Pat 603 : A I R 1960 Pat 525 (526) (Pr 3) (DB).

——S. 111 (g) — Applicability — Wasidari Rules, R. 25—On failure to observe 'condition' of lease, land to be 'liable to resumption' by lessor—Lessor's right to re-enter.

It is well settled that a lessor while enforcing his right of forfeiture has every right to take possession of the premises without his having to resort to Court to obtain an order for possession provided it is done peaceably and without actual resistance. The general law permits the ejectment of a tenant after giving him 15 days notice terminable with the month of the tenancy. But the special law, namely the U. P. (Temporary) Control of Rent and Eviction Act, .1947, has imposed certain conditions upon the exercise of that right one amongst them being that the tenant should make a wilful default in the payment of rent within one month of the service of notice of demand. Where, however, the tenant makes such default the parties would be relegated to the general law and according to the general law the landlord would be entitled to evict the tenant after giving the requisite notice. Each case must be taken by itself and one decision on the meaning of a notice to quit in one context does not afford much guidance for interpretation of a notice in different words in a different context. It is necessary to look at the intention of the landlord, and when language is used which leaves the effect of the notice open to doubt, the rule of construction is to make it sensible and not insensible. Where instead of addressing the quit notice to a limited company which was the tenant it was addressed to a person who was the managing director himself and the name of the company was written after the name of the managing director with a "Limited" appended after the name, and the notice was treated by the addressee and the company as a notice to the company itself.

Thus where a monthly tenancy commenced from the 1st of the month and ended with 30th or 31st of each month as the case may be, and the tenant was asked by 15 days notice to vacate on 1st February.

Held, that the notice terminated the tenancy by giving 15 days notice ending with the calendar month of the tenancy. Since the tenant was entitled to remain in possession till the midnight of the 31st January, he was naturally asked to vacate the premises on the following day. Ordinarily when a tenant unlawfully withholds possession of the holding from the landlord after the tenancy is determined, the landlord can be allowed to recover mesne profits instead of the rent he was till then entitled to receive. But as by virtue of the provisions of the Travancore Holdings (Stay of Eviction Proceedings) Act, 1124, M. E., as amended by Act 8 of 1950, if even after a decree for surrender the landlord cannot recover possession unless the tenant entails forfeiture in terms of proviso (a) to S. 4 of Act 8 of 1950, then in a suit for eviction it will be illogical and unsound to make the tenant liable for mesne profits. ——S. 111—(Jammu and Kashmir) — Ejectment of tenant on ground that plaintiff requires land bona fide for personal cultivation—Facts to be proved.

In a suit for ejectment of a tenant on the ground that the plaintiff requires the land bona fide for personal cultivation, it is necessary for the trial Court to find out whether the plaintiff is in cultivating possession of any land and if so, to what extent. If it is found that the plaintiff has already 17 Kanals of Abi or 33 Kanals of Khushki, then he is out of Court and cannot seek ejectment of the tenant on the ground that he needs the land for cultivating it personally but in case it is found that the plaintiff is not in possession of any land then enquiry has to be made whether he bona fide requires the land for cultivating it personally. It will further be necessary to give a clear finding in regard to compensation claimed by the defendant.

The mere fact that a person is advanced in age and has retired from service should not be considered to be a disqualification for cultivating the land personally. A person may not be able to attend to all the details of cultivation personally. What is required is that he should engage himself personally in the cultivation of land and for that purpose he may get the assistance of his other relations and friends and with their help discharge the various details of work connected with the cultivation of land.

The mere fact that the plaintiff is residing at some distance from the land would not be sufficient circumstance to hold that he is not prepared to till the land personally. He may shift to the land during the time when it is to be cultivated and then return to his house, which is a few miles away, when his presence is no more required on the land. AIR 1954 J & K 53 (54) (Prs 2 to 4).

18. Tenancy-at-will.

——S. 111—Tenancy for a fixed term — Tenancy at will—Lease for an indefinite period—Termination—Heritability.

A tenancy for a fixed term determines only by efflux of time, the death of the tenant during the term has absolutely no effect and his legal representatives continue to be tenants for the remainder of the term. A tenancy for a fixed term is an interest in land which is heritable.

But the interest of a tenant at will is not heritable and this is one of the features which distinguish a tenancy at will from a tenancy from year to year.

A lease for an indefinite period is also said to be determined by the death of the lessee. 1951 A L J 179 : ILR (1952) 1 All 85 : AIR 1950 All 583 (587) (Pr 12) (DB).

——S. 111 — Agricultural lease — Tenancy-at-will—Agricultural lease.

Where a document purporting to be an agricultural lease provided that the lease was determinable when the lessor required the land.

Held, the termination of the lease could not take effect forthwith but only from the month of Ani in a year. Agricultural lease cannot normally be at will as it would be highly inconsistent with the requirements of agricultural operation, and as such it would not also come to an end by the death of a lessor. 1961 Mad WN 644 : (1962) 1 Mad L J 128.

——Ss. 111 and 105, 117—Determination of agricultural tenancy — Tenant-at-will.

After the determination of the tenancy, any act of the landlord showing an intention to take possession is sufficient to revest the possession to him. But if the landlord fails to prove that the tenancy was determined in accordance with the local custom, the mere claim of the landlord to have let out the land to other tenants will not affect the rights of the original tenants .

Held, further that a lessee cannot be deemed to be a mere tenant-at-will, if he is found to be in possession of the land for a considerably long time and such a tenant cannot be ejected except in accordance with local custom. AIR 1956 Manipur 42 (44) (Pt C) (Pr 9).

A landlord suing to eject a tenant on the ground of his being a tenant-at-will, has the onus heavily on him to prove the nature of the tenancy of the defendant; and he cannot be allowed to make out his title by reason of the failure of the defendant to prove affirmatively that he has been paying rent at a uniform rate without variation, though that would undoubtedly be a material element in ascertaining the nature of the tenancy, when he sets up permanent rights. The plaintiff has to prove his title to eject. 18 Cut L T 117 : AIR 1951 Orissa 262 (264) (Pt C) (Pr 7).

——S. 111—Joint lessors — Termination of lease by notice to determine lease by both lessors—Possession after determination of lease — Right of one of co-sharers to eject trespasser even though other co-sharer does not join.

A suit for ejectment and arrears of rent was brought by A and B, two joint owners of a shop after the tenancy was determined by notice by both the owners. The suit was decreed by the trial Court which also awarded damages from date of suit till date of ejectment. In appeal by the tenant a compromise was arrived at between the tenant and 'A' one on the lessors. According to the compromise, 'A' agreed to give up the arrears of rent and claim for damages.

Held, since the tenancy of the appellant (tenant) was determined by notice by both owners of the shop, it came to an end. The possession of the appellant was no better than that of a trespasser and this fact was confirmed by the decree of the trial Court. The compromise could not and did not change the status of the appellant which was no other than that of a trespasser. One of the co-sharers is quite competent to eject a trespasser even though the other co-sharer does not join. In this view, 'B' could validly continue the appeal and seek ejectment of the appellant. ——Ss. 111 and 116 — Tenancy for fixed period — Premises in occupation of sub-tenants after expiry of period—Tenant holding over—Tenancy when determined—Tenant liable to pay rent.

On 4th July 1957, a landlord let out the premises to the tenant for 3 months and the tenant was allowed to sublet the premises. The actual possession of the premises was not with the tenant but with sub-tenants. In a suit by the landlord for arrears of rent from 1st January 1950 to 31st December 1952, it was contended by the tenant that as he was not in actual possession of the premises no decree could be passed against him.

Held, that though the tenancy was for three months the tenant had been holding over because his sub-tenants were in possession of the premises. Ordinarily where a tenancy was for a fixed term, it is for the tenant to give notice to the landlord saying that he has vacated the premises. Where the tenant has inducted sub-tenants on the premises then until he gives notice to the landlord terminating his tenancy or gives vacant possession to him the tenancy must be deemed to subsist. The tenant was therefore liable to pay rent. 1958 Nag L J (Notes) 85.

SYNOPSIS

(Transfer of Property Act (1882), S. 112.)

1. Scope.
2. Acceptance of rent.
3. Effect of waiver.
4. Second proviso.

1. Scope.

●——Ss. 112, 114 and 114-A — Contract — Specific performance—Sale of portion of hypotheca to mortgagee in satisfaction of mortgage debt and lease back to mortgagor for fixed period — Stipulation for payment of rent regularly with forfeiture clause—Separate agreement executed on same day giving lessee option to repurchase during period of lease — Agreement to stand cancelled in case of default in payment of rent — Default in payment — Notice determining lease and cancelling agreement—Suit for specific performance of agreement to repurchase — Agreement held in nature of privilege of concession and not penalty — Conditions not having been strictly complied with forfeiture could not be relieved against—Subsequent acceptance of payment held did not amount to waiver — Specific performance cannot be granted—Specific Relief Act (1877), S. 24. 1949 F C R 537 : 1950 S C J 1 : (1950) 1 Mad L J 683 : A I R 1950 F C 38 (41, 42, 43, 50, 51, 54, 57, 58) (Pt A) (Prs 10, 12, 16, 17, 36, 37, 49, 56, 57).

——S. 112—'Any other act'.

Waiver of one's rights cannot be inferred when a clear intention not to waive a right already acquired is ascertainable. A I R 1955 All 680 (683) (Pt B) (Pr 10) (DB).

——Ss. 112, 116—Waiver of forfeiture — Principle—Determination of tenancy under S. 6 (8) of Bengal Act 6 of 1933 by landlord by notice — Waiver of (Bengal Suppression of Immoral Traffic Act 6 of 1933), S. 6 (8)).

The principle is that a forfeiture can be waived only in the sense that the right to forfeit can be waived, that is to say, before the forfeiture has been actually effected or incurred.

Thus, where a landlord, purporting to act under S. 6 (8) of the Bengal Act 6 of 1933, served a notice on the tenant determining his tenancy and calling upon him to quit, vacate and make over possession of the premises to him and subsequently he sued the tenant for possession, the forfeiture takes place by the service of the notice and there can be no waiver of the forfeiture by any act on the part of the landlord, viz., by his demanding rent for a period subsequent to the date of the service of the notice.

Further S. 116 cannot be said to apply, because there was no act which could be said to amount to an assent by the landlord to the tenant continuing in possession. A I R 1955 N U C (Cal) 1100.

——S. 112—Applicability to suit for ejectment under S. 6 (8) of Bengal Act 6 of 1933 — (Bengal Suppression of Immoral Traffic Act (6 of 1933), S. 6 (8)).

Section 112 deals only with a forfeiture under S. 111, Cl. (g) of the Transfer of Property Act. Obviously the determination of the lease intended by the notice based on S. 6 (8) of the Bengal Act 6 of 1933 is not a determination on any of the grounds mentioned in Cl. (g) of S. 111, T. P. Act and hence S. 112 does not apply to the case. A I R 1955 N U C (Cal) 1100.

——S. 112—Forfeiture—Waiver of — Knowledge of forfeiture as foundation of waiver.

Waiver is an intentional relinquishment of a known right. The foundation of waiver is knowledge of the person who is said to waive his rights, and there cannot be waiver in ignorance. This principle is recognised in the first proviso of S. 112. Unless, therefore, the lessor is aware that forfeiture has been incurred there cannot be any question of waiver of forfeiture. The governing principle in a case of waiver is whether the lessor has shown an intention to treat the lease as subsisting after forfeiture. The words "the lessor showing an intention to treat the lease as subsisting" in the first paragraph of S. 112 illustrate this principle of waiver. The word "Other" in the expression "by any other act" shows that the two other acts mentioned previously in that section, viz. (1) acceptance of rent which becomes due since the forfeiture and (2) distress for such rent are regarded by the Statute as two typical acts which show the intention of the lessor to treat the lease as subsisting. 83 Cal L J 327, Foll. A I R 1952 Cal 47 (50) (Pt B) (Pr 17).

——S. 112 — Concept of waiver is based on agreement.

In the ultimate analysis on juristic foundation the concept of waiver is in essence based on agreement. In other words the landlord must agree to waive the forfeiture or more accurately the breach of the express condition which leads to forfeiture. Such agreement may be imported from any provision contained in the statute or may be by express conduct of the lessor from which an agreement will be implied as a necessary corollary to the act or conduct of the lessor. It is neither desirable nor possible to lay down any hard and fast rule which can be said to exhaust the categories of acts which can be regarded as showing an intention of the lessor to treat the lease as subsisting. Each case must be decided on its own merits. A I R 1952 Cal 47 (51) (Pt D) (Pr 18).

● ——Ss. 112, 105, 108 (b), 106—Possession of lessee under void lease—Lessee paying rent—Effect—Duration of tenancy has to be determined on basis of S. 106 — Acquisition of permanent tenancy by prescription—I L R 30 Pat 964 : A I R 1952 Pat 46, Overruled. See T. P. Act (4 of 1882), S. 105. A I R 1960 Pat 344 (FB).

——S. 112—Waiver of forfeiture.

Where a lease makes a perversion of the user of the demised premises in breach of covenant in the lease and the landlord being fully aware of the continuing breach acquiesces in it for a long period by accepting rent even though he had served notice to quit on the tenant on that ground, it will be presumed that the landlord has either released the covenant or waived the forfeiture and he will not be entitled to eject the tenant on that ground. A I R 1954 Punj 41 (42) (Pt A) (Pr 7).

——S. 112—Rent suit for subsequent period—It does not amount to waiver of forfeiture allowed by decree for previous period. A I R 1965 Tripura 35 (36) (Pt B) (Pr 6).

2. Acceptance of rent.

——S. 112 — Forfeiture of lease for denial of title—Waiver — Notice before suit for ejectment is not necessary — Lessor does not waive forfeiture by accepting rent due for the period prior to denial. See T. P. Act (1882), S. 111 (g). A I R 1955 N U C (Ajmer) 4418.

——S. 112 — "Rent due since forfeiture"—Right of lessor to demand rent due prior to date of forfeiture —Demand of such rent whether amounts waiver of forfeiture.

A lessor is entitled to payment of rent which accrued due prior to the date of forfeiture. Section 112 provides that a forfeiture is waived among other things "by acceptance of rent which has become due since the forfeiture." The words "due since the forfeiture" are words which qualify the word "rent" in that section. Therefore, demand and acceptance of rent which became due before the forfeiture does not constitute waiver. (1959) 157 E R 941, Rel. on. AIR 1952 Cal 47 (50, 51) (Pt A) (Prs 14, 16, 23).

——S. 112—Mere acceptance of rent after notice of ejectment would not amount waiver of right of landlord to eject tenant — There ought to be expressed intention to waive his right to eject a tenant — See Hyderabad T. P. Act, S. 130. A I R 1953 Hyd 97.

——S. 112 — Forfeiture — Waiver—Breach of covenant by tenant — Landlord continuing to accept rent with full knowledge—Effect of.

If a landlord who is aware of the breach of the terms of a covenant by the tenant continues to receive rent without raising any objection for a period of at least six years, he must be held to have waived the breach and is not entitled to eject the tenant. Such acceptance of rent is not only condonation of breach in the past but is a licence for breaches in the future. 53 P L R 136 : A I R 1952 Punj 82 (87, 88) (Pt B) (Prs 21, 25, 26) (DB).

——Ss. 112 and 111 (g) — Waiver of forfeiture — Determination of tenancy by denial of title of landlord—Notice indicating positive intention of landlord to exercise right of ejectment — Acceptance of rent till termination of tenancy does not amount to waiver. 1961 Raj L W 623 : I L R (1962) 12 Raj 172.

——S. 112—Acceptance of rent deposited, without prejudice to landlord's right to pursue remedy of eviction — Right to forfeit tenancy is not waived. AIR 1955 N U C (Sau) 974 (DB).

3. Effect of waiver.

——S. 112 — Unauthorised alterations by tenant—Forfeiture incurred—Suit for damages and injunction —Damages allowed and injunction granted—Forfeiture is waived — Subsequent notice to quit and suit for ejectment is not maintainable. See T. P. Act (4 of 1882), S. 111 (b). AIR 1959 All 33 (DB).

——Ss. 112, 113 and 116 — Second notice to quit— Waiver of forfeiture — Effect of—Tenancy running after waiver is not a fresh tenancy—See T. P. Act (4 of 1882), S. 113. AIR 1951 All 478.

——S. 112—Forfeiture — Waiver of—Waiver of past or particular breach whether is waiver for ever.

Waiver of past breaches does not preclude the lessor from enforcing a forfeiture when the same or any other condition is subsequently broken, it being understood that the condition is such that the breach thereof provides for re-entry. Thus, where a lease deed provides a covenant against sub-letting with the permission of the landlord, the fact that the landlord had given his consent in writing for subletting a portion of the premises to a person does not mean that the lessee can go on subletting the premises to other persons or parties in breach of the covenant. For, waiver of a particular breach does not mean waiver for ever. AIR 1940 Pat 140, Foll. AIR 1952 Cal 47 (51) (Pt E) (Pr 19).

——S. 112—Forfeiture—Breach of condition of continuing nature—Waiver in respect of.

The argument that subletting is an act of a continuing nature and that where the breach is of a continuing nature waiver of a particular breach is a waiver for ever is not acceptable. Where the breach is of a continuing nature the continuance of the breach after the waiver will justify a forfeiture and it will not be open to the lessee to say that because past breaches of the same condition have been waived its future breaches or continuing breaches after waiver are also to be deemed to have been waived and condoned. The only limitation on this principle is that in the case of the breach of a condition not to sublet, the waiver operates during the continuance of the entire period of the interest which the particular subletting created. But when the entire period of the offending sublease is over the past waiver will not protect fresh breach of the same covenant not to sublet. Thus, a waiver of the benefit of a covenant or condition in a lease only extends to the particular breach of the covenant or condition to which it relates and is not a general waiver of the benefit of that covenant or condition. Dumpor's case, 4 Co. Rep. 119a held not followed in India. AIR 1952 Cal 47 (51) (Pt F) (Pr 20).

——S. 112 — Covenant not to erect structure — Breach of — Continuing breach — Waiver of forfeiture.

The breach of a covenant in a lease not to erect any structure on the land is not a continuing but a single breach. If it is waived by subsequent acceptance of rent, it cannot be availed of thereafter. AIR 1950 Cal 256 (258) (Pt A) (Pr 17).

——S. 112 — Lease money payable in instalments — Waiver of breach—Effect.

It is well settled that a mere waiver of past breaches does not preclude the lessor from enforcing a forfeiture when the same or another condition is subsequently breached. When the breach is of a continuing nature, the same rule applies, and continuation of the breach after the waiver will certainly justify a forfeiture :

Held, on facts that the mere fact that the lessor did not enforce the terms of forfeiture as provided in the contract when the lessee made default in delaying payment of the instalments of the lease money, did not preclude the lessor from enforcing its right under the contract when the lessee failed to comply even after issue of notice to him calling upon him for due performance. ILR (1959) Cut 56 : 25 Cut L T 376.

4. Second proviso.

——S. 112—Rent sale—Landlord purchasing holding —Sale confirmed but no delivery of possession obtained—Same holding put to sale by landlord for arrears of rent for subsequent period—Sales not taking place as tenant had deposited decretal dues—Effect—Right of landlord to make settlement.

In execution of a rent decree the landlord purchased the holding. Though the sale was confirmed the landlord did not take out a sale certificate nor obtained delivery of possession of the holding. In execution of a rent decree in respect of subsequent period the landlord again brought the holding to sale and purchased it himself but before the sale was confirmed it was set aside by the tenant depositing the decretal dues. The plaintiff who had taken a settlement of the holding from the landlord during the second execution brought a suit for declaration of his title and possession.

Held, that as the landlord had not evicted the tenant in spite of his purchase in the first rent sale and had brought the same holding to sale in the subsequent execution, the tenant continued to remain as tenant under the landlord and therefore the landlord had no right to make a settlement with the plaintiff. The plaintiff therefore had no right to bring the suit. ILR (1958) 10 Assam 39.

——S. 112 — Decree for eviction and arrears of rent —Acceptance of rent after decree does not operate as waiver of forfeiture — There being a decree, no private arrangement or acceptance of money can extend lease — If the decree-holder has done any act which signifies the renewal of the lease, then it can be recorded as an adjustment of the decree by the Court under O. 21, R 2, C. ——S. 112 — Scope—Acceptance of rent—Waiver—Exception.

S. 112 is intended only for the benefit of the landlord and whether or not there was a waiver of forfeiture depends upon the action of only one party, namely, the landlord independent of the tenant. Further acceptance of rent which has become due since the forfeiture constitutes waiver. But if a suit for ejectment of the lessee on the ground of forfeiture, has, in the meantime, been instituted, the acceptance of rent after the institution of the suit will not amount to waiver. ——S. 113—Scope—Notice determining lease given —Suit by landlord for ejectment brought — There can be no waiver after such suit.

A waiver under S. 113 can be brought about by the action of the landlord if after determining the tenancy by notice the landlord chooses to accept rent again from the tenant. In such an event under S. 113 a notice for determination of the lease already given by the landlord to the tenant will be deemed to have been waived. No question of waiver arises after the landlord has brought a suit on the basis of a valid notice given for determination of the lease. After such a suit has been brought, there can be no waiver though it is always open to a landlord to renew the lease at any time he pleases. AIR 1956 All 175 (176, 177) (Pt B) (Pr 10).

A waiver to be effective and binding must be made by the entire body of joint owners and it is not open to one of the joint owners to waive notice. After a tenancy is determined by the two joint owners, the possession of the tenant is that of a trespasser. If the tenant wants back his tenancy rights, it could be done only by grant of a fresh lease by the two joint owners. One of the joint owners cannot create or restore back the lease. —Ss. 113 and 116 — Applicability and scope — S. 116 has no application to cases of termination of tenancies by notice to quit—S. 113 excludes S. 116—Both sections cannot apply to particular case. AIR 1955 NUC (Cal) 5909.

—S. 113—Applicability — Claim of rent for period subsequent to notice.

It is now well settled that in order to make S. 113, T. P. Act, applicable, it is not enough to have an unilateral act on the part of the landlord, but there must be agreement.

A mere mistake of the draftsman of the plaint in a suit for ejectment in claiming rent for a period subsequent to the notice determining the tenancy is not evidence that the landlord had agreed to a new tenancy, particularly when he is at the same time also asking for possession and mesne profits. AIR 1955 NUC (Cal) 1100.

—S. 113—New plea — Waiver of notice—Question whether notice given by landlord was or was not waived by him subsequently is a question of fact and has to be specifically pleaded—Cannot be allowed for first time in second appeal. See Civil P. C. (1908), S. 100. AIR 1955 NUC (Madh B) 3016.

—S. 113 — Applicability to agricultural leases — Though S. 113 is inapplicable to agricultural lease, it is based on general principles applicable to leases — Hence will have to be applied to agricultural leases. See T. P. Act (1882), S. 117. AIR 1954 Madh B 37.

—Ss. 113, 106 — Agricultural lease — Waiver of notice to quit.

In the case of agricultural leases only reasonable notice to quit is essential and question of conforming to provisions of S. 106, T. P. Act does not arise. But this reasonable notice to quit will be waived only where there is in effect an agreement to restore the old tenancy.

Section 113 makes it clear that in order that there should be waiver of notice to quit there must be consent express or implied of the person to whom notice is given and there must be some act on the part of the person giving notice showing the intention to treat the lease as subsisting, so that after the notice to quit is given parties must be ad idem as regards continuance of old relation. I L R (1953) M B 193 : AIR 1954 Madh B 37 (38) (Pt B) (Pr 9).

—Ss. 113, 116 and 111—Applicability of S. 116 — Conditions for—Determination of lease by notice to quit — Waiver of such notice—Section 116 will not apply. See T. P. Act (4 of 1882), S. 116. AIR 1960 Madh Pra 192 (DB).

—S. 113—Waiver of notice to quit — Acceptance of rent — Intention — (Houses and Rents — Mysore House Rent and Accommodation Control Act (30 of 1951), Ss 2 (9) and 8 (3)).

Under S. 113, T. P. Act there can be a waiver only if both the parties, the party who has given the notice and the party who has received the same intentionally agree to waive the notice. The payment of the rent by the tenant for a period subsequent to the termination of the tenancy and acceptance of the same has been laid down as a statutory proof of the intention of both the parties to treat the lease as subsisting. Undoubtedly it is one of the modes of proof of the agreement to treat the lease as subsisting. It is a conclusive proof. Where the landlord claims possession under S. 8 (3) of the Mysore House Rent and Accommodation Control Act after serving a notice to quit thereby terminating the contractual tenancy the tenant immediately becomes a statutory tennant as defined in S. 2 (9) and does not become a trespasser. He is still liable to pay the rent. Hence, merely because he pays the rent there can be no inference that he intended to continue the tenancy. Again the landlord cannot take possession merely on the basis of the termination of the tenancy. He must satisfy the Controller that he comes within S. 8 of the Mysore House Rent and Accommodation Control Act. Before he could occupy the house an order of the Controller is necessary. He is entitled to rent as such till the tenant vacates the house. Hence, the receipt of the rent cannot show that he intended the tenancy to continue. Illustation (a) to S. 113, T. P. Act is not applicable to leases which are subject to control laws. —S. 113—Determination of lease by forfeiture and by waiver of notice to quit — Distinction.

There is a distinction between determination of a lease by forfeiture and determination of a lease by waiver of a notice to quit. In the latter lease the tenancy is determined and the subsequent notice is of no effect unless other circumstances form the basis for inferring creation of a new tenancy after the expiry of the first notice. The mere fact that the tenant continues in possession and a suit is not instituted are insufficient. Where forfeiture of a lease is incurred, the lease is voidable and can be waived by the lessor without the assent of the lessee. But the waiver of a notice to quit depends upon the consent of both. In illustration (b) to S. 113 the consent of the lessee is implied by his remaining in possession. 1955 Nag L J 755 : ILR (1956) Nag 13 : AIR 1956 Nag 125 (127, 128) (Pt E) (Pr 10).

——S. 113 — Waiver of notice to quit — Consent of parties — Necessity of — Repudiation of tenancy and disclaimer of landlord's title — Mere demand of rent — Effect.

The most important thing to notice is that waiver of notice to quit does not, like waiver of forfeiture depend upon the will of one party namely the landlord but upon the consent of both the landlord and the tenant. There cannot be waiver of notice to quit under S. 113 without the express or implied consent of the persons to whom the notice is given. Where there is a repudiation of the tenancy and disclaimer of the title of the landlord by the tenant a mere demand of rent for the period subsequent to the expiration of the notice cannot constitute waiver of notice to quit for the simple reason that in such a case there can be no question of consent of the tenants either express or implied to the waiving of the determination of the tenancy. Further, the question whether or not there was waiver of notice to quit is purely a question of intention of the parties. In order, therefore, to determine whether or not in a particular case there was waiver of notice to quit one has to see whether from the conduct of the landlord and tenant, by demand and acceptance of rent or by demand followed by express promise to pay, or otherwise an intention to treat the lease as subsisting can be inferred, and this would certainly depend upon the facts and circumstances of each case. When it is a question of intention it is plain that not even the payment and acceptance of rent by the landlord after the notice to quit much less a mere demand of rent necessarily waives the notice. ——S. 113—Tenancy determined by notice to quit—Suit instituted for eviction — Combination of claim for rent and damages—Effect.

When the tenancy has been legally determined by a notice to quit and a suit also is instituted by the landlord for the eviction of the tenants a mere combination of the claim for both rent and damages for the period subsequent to the expiration of the notice does not operate as waiver of the notice. ——S. 113—Distillery licence containing condition for determining licence by Excise authorities on notice — Notice issued under S. 21 (b) Punjab Excise Act (1914), and under licence condition—Notice kept in abeyance for some years—Its subsequent revival with shorter notice period is illegal—Principle of Ss. 111 (h) and 113 of T. P. Act is applicable. See Punjab Excise Act (1 of 1914), S. 21 (b). AIR 1965 Punj 217 (DB).

——S. 113 — Applicability — Tenant continuing in possession after notice to quit by virtue of protection under Rent Control Legislation — Section not applicable.

Section 113 does not apply in the case of a statutory tenant, that is a person who is entitled to remain in possession of the premises by virtue of the provisions of Rent Control Act. It is not open to a landlord to evict such a tenant unless he is able to bring his case within the four walls of the Rent Control Act, and the tenant remains in possession on account of the protection afforded to him by the Act. Again, a mere offer or acceptance of rent after the notice to quit had been given does not and cannot bring about a waiver of the notice.

The correct legal position in such a case is that the tenant offers the rent not because he gives his consent to the creation of a new contractual tenancy or the subsistence of the old contractual tenancy but because he offers rent to fulfil his obligations under the provisions of the Rent Act, and similarly, the landlord accepts rent not because he shows thereby an intention to create a new tenancy or to treat the old contractual tenancy as subsisting but because prima facie he is entitled to accept the rent so long as the tenant remains in possession. ——S. 113 — Waiver of notice to quit — Lessee remaining in possession after notice—Effect.

Where the first notice to quit is bad in law, a second notice to quit can be served without any express waiver of the first notice and a suit based on the second notice is maintainable.

Section 113 of the T. P. Act permits the waiver of the notice by the express or implied consent of the person upon whom it is served. When the tenant on the receipt of the first notice continues to remain in possession of the disputed property he thereby gives his implied consent to the waiver of the notice. The giving of a second notice to quit is a waiver of the first notice so far as the person giving notice is concerned. Further, if the first notice is bad in law it is hardly a notice which should call for any waiver. I L R (1960) 10 Raj 1568 : 1961 Raj L W 576 : A I R 1961 Raj 136 (138) (Pt B) (Pr 11).

——S. 113 — Permission under S. 3 (a) U. P. Temporary Rent Control and Eviction Act—Long interval between default in payment of rent and filing suit caused by intervening notice under S. 106 — It does not show intention to continue lease.

There should be some inherent conflict between the conduct of the landlord in bringing a suit for his tenant's ejectment and his previous conduct or attitude towards that tenant necessarily suggesting an intention to continue the tenancy. A mere permission obtained by the landlord under S. 3 (a) of the U. P. Temporary Rent Control and Eviction Act does not entitle him to file a suit for ejectment straightway. He has still to serve a notice on the tenant under S. 106 of the Transfer of Property Act. The notice given to the tenant under S. 106 of the Transfer of Property Act therefore would not only account for part of the interval of time between the default and the suit but serve as strong evidence of the landlord's intention to terminate the lease and negative all idea of a waiver on his part. ——S. 113 — Notice to quit — Waiver—Consent of tenant—Continuance in possession.

Where a tenant refuses to comply with the notice of the landlord to pay an enhanced rent or to quit the premises and continues in possession, he must be deemed to have accepted the enhanced rent and thus consented to the waiver of notice on the part of the landlord within the meaning of S. 113, T. ——S. 113, Illus. (b)—Act showing intention to treat lease as subsisting — Question depends upon facts and circumstances of each case — Second notice to quit — Not sufficient by itself to infer waiver — Illus. (b) must be read subject to parent provision in the section itself.

It is quite manifest from the provisions of S. 113 that in order to constitute waiver there must be an intention not only on the part of the lessor but also on the part of the lessee to treat the lease as subsisting. In order, therefore, to determine whether or not in a particular case there was waiver of notice to quit, the Court has to see whether from the conduct of the landlord and tenant, by demand and acceptance of rent or by demand followed by express promise to pay or otherwise an intention to treat the lease as subsisting can be inferred and this would certainly depend upon the facts and circumstances of each case. The question under S. 113 is whether the act of the landlord is such as necessarily leads to the inference that there was an intention of creating a renewal of the tenancy or as treating the tenant as still subsisting. It is a question of fact to be determined in each case : (1947) 1 All E R 116 and Woodfall on 'Landlord and Tenant' (26th Edition), p. 1004, Rel. on. The phrase "showing an intention to treat the lease as subsisting" in S. 113 is clear to indicate that to amount to waiver there must be evidence of such intention. The parent provision of S 113 containing the said phrase requires that there must be evidence showing an intention to treat the lease as subsisting. The illustrations must be read subject to this parent provision in the section itself. Thus viewed illus. (b) to S. 113 is subject to the governing provision of the section itself, namely that there must be evidence "showing an intention to treat the lease as subsisting." I L R (1964) Cut 374 : A I R 1965 Orissa 11 (13) (Pt B) (Pr 8).

After a landlord has served a notice on his tenant asking him to leave the premises within a certain time, if within that time rent already due from the tenant for a period falling prior to the date on which the tenant has to vacate is accepted by the landlord, such acceptance cannot entail a deprivation of his right to follow up his notice by a suit for ejectment. ——Ss. 113, Illustration (a) and 106 — Scope of — Landlord accepting rents after notice to quit — 'Waiver' of notice to quit — Tenant setting up permanent tenancy or a lease for particular period —Failure to prove—Effect.

Section 113, Illustration (a) of the Transfer of Property Act is analogous to the provision in English Law but with this difference that while in the English Law the consequence of waiver would be that the whole tenancy would be terminated and a new tenancy created, such is not the case under the Indian Law. It only purports to continue the sold tenancy. Practically it amounts to the landlord withdrawing the notice to quit.

In a case even where the tenant sets up the permanent tenancy or a lease for a particular period in contradistinction to a tenancy from month to month or from year to year and is not able to establish that, he would not be debarred from putting forward the plea of waiver if he can establish that the landlord accepted rents subsequent to the expiration of the period of tenancy. The acceptance of rent by the landlord for the period of 7 months amounts to an intention to continue the old tenancy and as such the tenant could not be evicted on the termination of the period fixed in the notice to quit. A I R 1927 Pat 305, Disting. (1959) 1 Andh W R 143 : ILR (1959) Andh Pra 868 : A I R 1959 Andh Pra 346 (348, 349) (Prs 9, 10, 11) (DB).

——S. 113—Act of the party—Acceptance of rent.

When any act on the part of the landlord is relied upon that act must be of the landlord or some person authorised by him or who is authorised even without his knowledge or consent to continue or restore the old tenancy. Illustration (a) to S. 113 is quite clear and when it is proved that the landlord accepts rent for the period subsequent to the expiration of notice, the notice is waived as from the fact of payment by the tenant his consent is implied;

Held, on facts that the payment of rent in the case was not to the landlord but to his servant who was not authorised to accept it and hence there being no act on the part of the landlord, the notice was not waived. I L R (1953) Madh Bha 193 : A I R 1954 Madh Bha 37 (38, 39) (Pt C) (Prs 10, 16).

——Ss. 113 and 111 (h)—Acceptance of rent—When amounts to waiver — Intention to treat lease as subsisting is essential.

Ordinarily acceptance of rent is a strong circumstance from which an inference can be drawn that the notice to quit has been waived. But that by itself is not sufficient to show waiver. Under S. 113, T. P. Act in order to constitute waiver there must be an intention not only on the part of the lessor but also on the part of the lessee to treat the lease as subsisting. Thus where the evidence did not show any circumstance in which the landlord accepted rent after notice to quit but there was evidence to show that the tenant told the landlord that he (the tenant) himself was going to vacate the house as he found it too small for his requirements, it was manifest that there was no agreement to treat the tenancy as continuing and that the notice was not waived on account of the acceptance of rent by the landlord. ——Ss. 113 and 111 (h)—Notice to quit — Waiver of —Acceptance of rent when amounts to waiver — Act showing landlord's intention to treat lease as subsisting is necessary—(Evidence Act (1872), S. 115).

In order to constitute waiver under S. 113, T. P. Act, there must be an intention not only on the part of the lessor but also on the part of the lessee to treat the lease as subsisting. Therefore, mere payment and acceptance of rent by the landlord after the notice to quit cannot by itself necessarily constitute waiver. The assent of a landlord for the continuance of a tenancy must be founded on the acceptance of rent as such and in clear recognition of the tenancy rights asserted by the person who pays it. AIR 1949 F C 124, Rel. on. Further, the payment and acceptance of rent for a period after the expiry of the notice terminating the contractual tenancy so long as the Accommodation Control Act is in force cannot necessarily be taken as a waiver of notice terminating the contractual tenancy and showing an intention on the part of the landlord to treat the contractual tenancy as subsisting. 1960 Jab L J 417 : 1960 M P L J 705 : 1959 M P C 548 : A I R 1960 Madh Pra 16 (17) (Prs. 3, 4, 5).

——S. 113—Intention to treat the lease as subsisting —Landlord accepting rent during pendency of suit and continuing suit — This does not indicate intention to continue tenancy.

If during the pendency of a suit, rent or an amount equivalent to rent is accepted and the suit is continued, then it must be said that the landlord has no intention to withdraw the notice to quit. Mere acceptance of rent, to which a landlord is entitled even on eviction, does not ipso facto indicate that he wants the tenant to continue. 1960 Jab L J 427 : 1960 M P L J 631 : 1960 M P C 376.

——S. 113 — Notice to quit — Ejectment suit pending — Acceptance of rent — Suit continued — No waiver of notice.

The mere acceptance of rent by the landlord after a notice to quit without more, at a time when his suit for eviction is pending in a law Court does not amount to waiver. It is the intention of the parties which must be determined. In order that an act may constitute waiver it must signify the landlord's intention to forego his right of ejectment. What is required is a consensus ad idem between the parties to renew the lease or to treat it as subsisting. Such an intention cannot be implied where a landlord pursues his pending suit for eviction. Merely by acceptance of rent, it cannot possibly be said that the lessor intends to treat the lease as subsisting unless he withdraws the suit. 1960 M P C 329 : 1960 M P L J 861 : 1960 Jab L J 882.

——S. 113 — Notice to quit—Waiver—Mere acceptance of rent—Effect.

The mere acceptance of rent by the landlord would not by itself be conclusive to show any waiver of the notice to quit served by the landlord. 1960 M P L J (Notes) 36.

——S. 113—Suit for ejectment — Payment by defendant.

Where not only had the landlord served the notice to quit but he had actually instituted the suit for ejectment and for damages for use and occupation, if without insisting upon the plaintiff withdrawing his suit for ejectment and for damages for use and occupation the defendant made certain payments those payments cannot be taken to be inconsistent with the plaintiff's right which he sought to enforce by the suit. In those circumstances, it could not be held that the plaintiff had waived the rights asserted by him. AIR 1917 Pat 469, Rel. on. 1953 Nag L J 147 : ILR (1954) Nag 147 : AIR 1953 Nag 219 (220) (Pt D) (Pr 12).

——Ss. 113 and 111 (h) — Act showing an intention to treat the lease as subsisting — Waiver of notice to quit — Acceptance of rent as such for period subsequent to notice — There is creation of new tenancy. AIR 1955 N U C (Orissa) 1853.

——Ss. 113 and 116—Acceptance of rent after notice to quit — Effect.

The onus is on the tenant to prove that the landlord agreed to the holding over of the tenancy, or to a new tenancy coming into existence after the expiry of the previous tenancy. In the absence of such an evidence the mere claim of rent after the notice to quit for the period after the expiry of the term of the lease, though the tenant may be continuing in possession, would not necessarily establish the requisite consensus an idem between the parties to renew the lease or treat the lease as subsisting, or create a new tenancy coming into existence; and would not thus operate, either as waiver of the notice to quit under S. 113, or S. 116, T. P. Act. AIR 1917 Pat 469 and AIR 1954 Cal 460, Rel. on. 1956 BLJR 658 : ILR 35 Pat 894 : AIR 1957 Pat 206 (209) (Pt C) (Pr 25) (DB).

——S. 113—Notice to quit—Waiver—Acceptance of rent after expiration of notice.

The question of waiver is one of intention and acceptance of rent by the landlord after the expiration of a notice is not in itself a waiver on his part of the notice so given. It is merely a circumst nce which must be considered along with other circumstances of the case and from which an intention to waive may or may not be drawn. (1775) 98 E R 1066, Rel. on.

Held, in the circumstances of the case that an intention to waive, on the part of the landlord could not be drawn. ILR (1957) Punj 86 : 58 Pun L R 328 : AIR 1956 Punj 246 (246, 247) (Prs 6, 8) (DB).

——Ss. 113 and 111 (h)—Notice to quit—Waiver of, by giving second notice—Nature of tenancy.

Although first notice can be said to have been waived by the giving of the second notice, the tenancy that runs after the waiver is not a fresh tenancy but is the same old tenancy that existed before. If the old tenancy continues, then the giving of a second notice to quit, when the first notice is found to be defective or is waived, cannot in any way affect the permission granted to the landlord by the Rent Controller to serve on a tenant a notice to quit. 1960 Jab L J 277 : 1960 M P L J 375 : 1960 M P C 229 : AIR 1960 Madh Pra 192 (193) (Pt B) (Pr 4).

——Ss. 113, 111 (h) — Fresh notice to determine tenancy—Effect of—Fresh permission of Rent Controller—Necessity—(Houses and Rents—C. P. and Berar House Rent Control Order (1947), Cl. (7).

Under S. 113 giving a second notice to quit does not mean that a new lease has come into existence. All that it means is that by giving a second notice, the lessor expressed an intention to treat the previous lease as subsisting provided the lessee agreed to the waiver.

Where, therefore, the landlord after obtaining the permission of a Rent Controller issued a notice to determine the lease and on its expiry sent another notice and it being invalid sent a third notice, on contention that the first notice was waived by the subsequent notices giving rise to a fresh tenancy which could be determined by a fresh notice after obtaining afresh the permission of the Rent Controller.

Held, that the waiver of a notice to quit did not depend upon the election of any party but upon the consent of both. If the first notice was waived, the third notice, which was valid, did determine the tenancy. (1947) 1 All E R 116, Rel. on. 1955 Nag L J 755 : ILR (1956) Nag 13 : AIR 1956 Nag 125 (127) (Pt D) (Pr 9).

——S. 113 — Effect of second notice to quit—It does not amount to waiver of first notice in absence of any proof thereof. See T. P. Act (1882), S. 106. AIR 1953 Punj 243 (DB).

——S. 113, Illus (b) — Waiver of notice to quit — Intention of parties — Notice asking tenant to execute fresh rent note sent during routine administration of trust property—Earlier notices not waived.

The question of waiver is one of fact dependent on the intention of the party or parties concerned. Where in respect of certain trust property notices were given to the tenant specifically asking him to quit the premises, a subsequent notice in which the tenant was asked to execute a fresh rent note in favour of the trustees could not have the effect of waiving the earlier notices, in view of the intention of the trustees in sending the subsequent notice. As the properties under the trust were let out before the trustees were appointed and as it was thought that fresh rent notes should be executed in the name of the trustees after they assumed office, routine notices were issued to all the tenants including the tenant in question and there was no intention on the part of trustees to waive the earlier notices. 1963 Raj L W 27 : ILR (1963) 13 Raj 370 : AIR 1963 Raj 113 (115) (Pt A) (Pr 5).

3 (C). Acts not amounting to waiver.

——S. 113, Illus. (a) — Notice to quit — Waiver — Conditions for — Deposit of rent in Court by tenant under Rent Control Act — Withdrawal of, by landlord does not constitute waiver.

Under S. 113, the notice is deemed to be waived only if the landlord by express words or by implication or by his conduct intends to treat the lease as subsisting. The acceptance of rent under the circumstances mentioned in illus. (a) to S. 113 will no doubt amount to the tacit consent of the landlord to continue the tenancy. But where the amount is deposited in Court under the provisions of Rent Control Act there cannot be tender of the rent by the lessee to the landlord and acceptance by him. Mere withdrawal of the amount by the landlord under the Rent Control Act does not therefore constitute waiver, in the absence of any evidence to show thal the landlord intended to keep the lease subsisting. AIR 1965 Assam 55 (58) (Pt C) (Pr 11) (DB).

——S. 113—Waiver of notice terminating tenancy — Suit for ejectment—Use of word 'rent in connection with period after termination of tenancy in para relating to reliefs—Mere use of word 'rent' in absence of intention to continue tenancy cannot amount to waiver of notice — Civil P. C. (1908), O. 7, R. 7—AIR 1964 All 374, Rel. on. 1964 All L J 1143.

——S. 113 — Waiver of notice to quit—What constitutes—Notice to quit followed by notice demanding possession — No waiver. AIR 1953 Cal 349 (352) (Pt D) (Prs 15, 16).

——Ss. 113, 111 (h) — Waiver of notice to quit — What constitutes — Suit for ejectment — Landlord receiving rent after institution of suit — Suit not withdrawn — Action on part of landlord does not amount to waiver of notice under S. 111 (h).

Under the Rent Control Act after a contractual tenancy is determined, the tenant does not become a trespasser but a statutory tenant. A statutory tenant in order to protect himself from being ejected on the ground of non-payment of rent may pay a sum of money intending it to be rent of the permises to the landlord which the landlord may receive not as rent but as compensation for use and occupation of the permises. Once a suit for ejectment has been instituted it cannot be said that by mere receipt of rent the lessor indicates his intention to treat the lease as subsisting unless he withdraws the suit. Where the landlord had instituted the suit for ejectment and the tenant during the pendency of the suit without any indication whatsoever that he was paying rent for the period after the expiry of the lease in respect of the suit property sent a sum by M. O. to the landlord which the landlord received, it cannot be said that that act on the part of the landlord constituted waiver of the notice to quit. AIR 1954 Cal 460 and AIR 1956 All 175, Rel. on. AIR 1962 J and K 2 (3) (Pr 2) (DB).

——Ss. 113 and 111 (h) — Waiver of notice—It is a matter of bilateral agreement between landlord and tenant—If landlord has not agreed to revive tenancy there is no waiver of notice — Mere acceptance of money remitted by tenant does not amount to waiver. See T. P. Act (1882), S. 111 (h). 1961 M P L J (Notes) 224.

——S. 113—Notice—Waiver—Landlord acknowledging payment of portion of arrears of rent and stating that in spite of such payment the tenant was still in arrears of rent — This cannot amount to waiver of notice. 1960 M P L J 449 : 1960 Jab L J 506 : AIR 1960 Madh Pra 167 (169) (Pt B) (Pr 10).

——S. 113—Waiver of notice—What constitutes — Determination of contractual tenancy by notice to quit — Tenant remaining in possession as statutory tenant—Subsequent acceptance of rent by landlord does not necessarily constitute waiver of notice to quit.

Held that in view of the fact that in Alwar where the property in dispute was situated, Rajasthan Premises (Control of Rent and Eviction) Act, 1950 was in force and the tenant was bound to pay the rent regularly so that he might not become a defaulter liable to ejectment on that ground; and the fact of the filing of the appeal, it could not be held that the landlord had waived the notice requiring the tenant to quit. SECTION 114

(Transfer of Property Act, (1882), S. 114.)

1. Scope.
2. "Pays or tenders".
3. "Rent in arrear".
4. "The Court may pass an order".
5. Consent decree providing for forfeiture.
6. Relief against forfeiture for breaches of other conditions.

1. Scope.

——S. 114—Relief against forfeiture — When can be claimed—Determination of monthly tenancy by valid notice — Determination is not in exercise of right of forfeiture — S. 114 is not attracted — U. P. (Temporary) Control of Rent and Eviction Act (1947), S. 3 (1) (a) — Section does not create any right to forfeit but merely imposes three months' bar on right to eject tenant. 1965 All W R (HC) 229 : 1965 All L J 607 : AIR 1966 All 165 (166) (Pt B) (Pr 4).

——Ss. 114 and 111—Applicability of S. 114—Ejectment sought on basis of notice to quit—S. 114 does not apply.

The provisions of S. 114 will be attracted only when a forfeiture occurs. Where in a suit for ejectment is sought on the basis of a notice to quit and under S. 111, T. P. Act one of the modes of determining a lease being by serving upon a lessee a notice to quit and that has been done by the plaintiff in the suit, no question arises of the applicability of the provisions of S. 114. Moreover before S. 114, could be applied, it has to be shown that one of the terms of the lease was that the landlord will have a right to re-enter if the rent for any particular period remained unpaid. AIR 1952 All 584, Foll. 1965 All W R (HC) 161 : 1965 All L J 249.

——S. 114—Applicability—Lease not determined by forfeiture—Section not attracted—Relief under section is discretionary. ILR (1964) 16 Assam 1 : AIR 1964 Assam 102 (104, 105) (Pt B) (Prs 8, 9, 10) (DB).

——Ss. 114 and 111 (g) — Scope of S. 114—Forfeiture — Meaning of—Plea under S. 114 first time in second appeal.

Section 114, T. P. Act gives jurisdiction to the Court to grant relief to the tenant against forfeiture for non-payment of rent and there can be no doubt that this power can be exercised even by the appellate Court. But the word 'forfeiture' used in S. 114 has a technical meaning which must be ascertained by reference to S. 111 (g) of the said Act. Forfeiture in this technical sense is incurred in case the lessee breaks an express condition which provides that on breach thereof the lessor may re-enter, and even in such a case the lessor has to give notice in writing to the lessee of his intention to determine the lease. In proceedings against the sub-tenant where the lessee was not on record and the plea under S. 114 was not made in the Courts below the High Court will not entertain the plea for the first time in second appeal though the plea raises a mixed question of the fact and law. 54 Bom L R 833 : I L R (1953) Bom 98 : AIR 1953 Bom 129 (133) (Pt D) (Pr 11) (DB).

——Ss. 114, 106—W. B. Premises Tenancy Act (1956), Ss. 13, 17 — Relief against forfeiture — Tenant's defence against delivery of possession struck out under S. 17 (3) for failure to deposit and payment as required under S. 17 (1) and (2) — Tenant can still challenge service, validity and sufficiency of notice to quit and claim and qualify for relief under S. 114 of T. P. Act (1882). See Houses and Rents — West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act (1956), S. 13. A I R 1965 Cal 398.

——S. 114 — Applicability — Tenant unable to get benefit of Ss. 12 and 14 of W. B. Act (17 of 1950) — Claim to benefit under S. 114, T. P. Act — (Houses and Rents — West Bengal Premises Rent Control (Temporary Provisions) Act (17 of 1950), Ss. 12 (1) and 14).

Even if the tenant is unable to get the protection of S. 12 or S. 14 of the West Bengal Premises Rent Control (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1950, it may still be possible for him to get the special relief under S. 114 of the Transfer of Property Act. There is no doubt that S. 12 gives considerable protection to the tenant. Section 14 gives further protection even where a landlord would be otherwise entitled to a decree for ejectment on the ground of default within the meaning of S. 12 (1) (i) of the West Bengal Premises Rent Control (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1950. But these two sections should not be considered to exhaust all the protection under the law. There is no express or implied repeal of S. 114, T. P. Act. 62 Cal W N 753 : (1958) 1 Cal L J 110 : I L R (1959) 1 Cal 671 : A I R 1958 Cal 428 (430) (Pt B) (Pr 7) (DB).

——S. 114—Scope—Relief against forfeiture - Default in payment of rent — Suit for ejectment and recovery of rents — On payment of all arrears of rent with interest and full costs of suit, Court passed the order that lessee is relieved against forfeiture and he shall hold property — Property leased as if forfeiture had not occurred — Held that the result of the order was that effects of forfeiture were wiped out and lease continued to be operative. See Specific Relief Act (1877), S. 22. AIR 1955 N U C (Cal) 2934 (DB).

——S. 114 — Tenant liable to be evicted may claim protection of S. 114. See Houses and Rents—Bombay Rents, Hotel and Lodging House Rates Control Act (57 of 1947), S. 12. (1962) 3 Guj L R 182.

——S. 114 — Section 114, T. P. Act is not applicable to agricultural leases unless made so applicable by contract — Matter in such cases to be governed by specific provision of special Act. See Tenancy Laws — Vindhya Pradesh Land Revenue and Tenancy Act (1953), S. 194 (1). 1962 M P L J (Notes) 304.

——S. 114 — Scope—Section cannot be deemed to be abrogated by the M P. Accommodation Control Act — Barrier under S. 4 of M. P. Accommodation Control Act lifted by tenant's failure to pay arrears of rent within one month of service of notice — Rights and liabilities of parties are to be determined under T. P. Act. 1960 M P L J 1199 : 1960 Jab L J 1098 : ILR (1963) Madh Pra 117 : A I R 1961 Madh Pra 56 (57) (Pt A) (Prs 2, 6).

——S. 114—Applicability—Notice to quit—No term regarding re-entry—Effect.

Where the tenancy is terminated by means of a notice to quit and not as a result of forfeiture and in the rent-note there is no term regarding re-entry, the principle underlying S. 114 of the Transfer of Property Act does not apply. A provision of re-entry cannot be read in the statutory provision in S. 4 (a) of the Madhya Bharat Sthan Niyantran Vidhan, or S. 4 (a) of the Madhya Bharat Accommodation Control Act. ——S. 114—Applicability—Suit for evicting monthly tenant after service of notice to quit.

Section 114, provides for relief against forfeiture, that is to say, when a lease determines by forfeiture under Cl. (g) of S 111 of the Act and not for a simple suit for evicting a monthly tenant after service of notice to quit in accordance with S. 106 of the Act. (1957) 23 Cut L T 316.

——Ss. 114 and 111 (g) — Forfeiture — Notice of intention to determine lease — Waiver of notice — There can be no forfeiture of lease if notice is not given by lessor to lessee of forfeiture of tenancy for non-payment of rent even though the registered lease provides for automatic forfeiture on non-payment of rent. See Transfer of Property Act (4 of 1882), S. 111 (g). AIR 1960 Pat 525 (DB).

——S. 114 — Suit for ejectment of lessee expressly based upon expiry of term of lease and not on determination by forfeiture — Relief under S. 114 could not be granted. See T. P. Act (1882), S. 111. 1960 B L J R 403.

——S. 114 — Proceedings under United State of Rajasthan Building (Lease and Rent Control) Ordinance, 1922 for ejectment on ground of non-payment of rent — Arrears of rent not deposited on first day of hearing—Protection to tenant — Deposit of rent—Protection can be claimed under S. 114, T. P. Act and under Rajasthan Act 17 of 1950 which has in meanwhile come into force. See Houses and Rents—Rajasthan Premises (Control of Rent and Eviction) Act (17 of 1950), S. 13 (a) (i), Proviso. A I R 1955 N U C (Raj) 1248.

——S. 114—Applicability—Execution proceedings.

The section is clearly confined to the stage of the proceedings before the passing of a decree. After a decree has been passed, the executing Court has no power to lessen the rigour of the decree so far as it relates to eviction because the judgment-debtor expresses his willingness and readiness to pay the rent decreed. AIR 1951 Raj 148 (149) (Pt C) (Pr 3).

——S. 114—Scope—Agricultural lease.

Obiter. — No doubt S. 114 does not apply to agricultural leases but there are decisions in which it has been held that where a lease does not come within the purview of the Transfer of Property Act, the Court exercising the power which it possessed even previous to that Act, will relieve against forfeiture of non-payment of rent on such conditions as may appear equitable on the facts of each particular case. AIR 1927 Mad 239 and AIR 1916 Mad 680 (2): 29 M L J 381 and AIR 1944 Nag 229, Rel. on. 9 Sau L R 126 : AIR 1956 Sau 44 (46) (Pt E) (Pr 5) (DB).

——S. 114 — Agricultural lease — Relief against forfeiture.

Though the Court may have the jurisdiction to relieve against forfeiture of agricultural leases, the essential requirement is that the agricultural lease is determined by forfeiture as contemplated by S. 111 (g) of the Act. 9 Sau L R 126 : AIR 1956 Sau 44 (46) (Pt F) (Pr 5) (DB).

——Ss. 114, 111 (g) and (h)—S. 12 (3), Rent Control Act, is not inconsistent with S. 114 — Meaning of forfeiture may be ascertained by reference to S. 111 (g)—Rent note not proving for forfeiture — Notice under S. 111 (g)—S. 114 has no application—(Houses and Rents — Saurashtra Rent Control Act (XXII of 1951), S. 12 (3)). 3. "Rent in arrear."

——S. 114 — Relief against forfeiture — Equitable relief—'Lessee pays the rent in arrear'—Reasonable construction—Rent should include amount to date of tender and not only to date of termination of tenancy by notice — Delay in making tender of amount—Court refused to relieve tenant.

Section 114 T. P. Act, is designed to provide a relief against forfeiture.

The relief against forfeiture provided in S. 114 is based on equitable principles. The purpose of this section appears to be to extend a special indulgence in favour of a tenant who is prepared to purge himself of his conduct as a persistent defaulter by making an honest offer to clear off his entire liability. A more reasonable construction of this section will be to interpret the word 'rent' in such a manner as to include in it the entire amount which the tenant is liable to pay to the landlord by way of rent upto the date of tender. AIR 1931 Cal 457, Rel. on.

4. "The Court may pass an order."

● —S. 114—The Court may pass an order.

The granting of relief against forfeiture under S. 114 is no doubt in the discretion of the Court but in exercising the discretion, each case must be judged by itself, the delay, the conduct of the parties and the difficulties to which the landlord has been put should be weighed against the tenant. AIR 1916 Mad 680 (2), Approved.

It is a maxim of equity that a person who comes in equity must do equity and must come with clean hands and if the conduct of the tenant is such that it disentitles him to relief in equity, then the Court's hands are not tied to exercise it in his favour.

Hence the contention that though S. 114 confers a discretion on the Court, that discretion except in cases where third party interests intervene must always be exercised in favour of the tenant irrespective of the conduct of the tenant cannot be accepted. The Court has discretion under S. 114, T. P. Act, to grant the relief against forfeiture or to refuse the same. ——S. 114—Relief against forfeiture— Discretion of Court—Interference in appeal.

In a suit for arrears of rent and ejectment on ground of forfeiture of lease the defendant raised the false defences that there was no default and there was no determination of lease. The defendant did not pray for relief under S. 114, T. P. Act but in appeal the time of hearing arguments he put in an additional ground for the first time that the trial Court had wrongly refused him relief under S. 114 and made a conditional offer to pay the arrears of rent with interest and full costs of suit if it was held that the tenancy was determined under S. 114. The Court refused to grant the relief in the exercise of its discretion.

Held, that in the circumstances of the case it could not be said that the appellate Court had not exercised the discretion properly or judicially and therefore the High Court would not interfere with that discretion and grant relief against forfeiture especially when the defendant Company had gone into liquidation. 62 Cal W N 753 : (1958) 1 Cal L J 110 : ILR (1958) 1 Cal 671 : A I R 1958 Cal 428 (431) (Pt C) (Pr 12) (DB).

——S. 114—Scope—Power of Court to give relief in cases not covered by the section — (Justice, equity and good conscience).

The Court has power to give relief against forfeiture independently of the provisions S. 114, if justice equity and good conscience requires it. Therefore though an agricultural lease does not come within the purview of the section a Court exercising the powers which it had possessed even prior to the Act, will relieve against forfeiture for non-payment of

The removal of a bar from the way of the plaintiff-landlord's instituting a suit for ejectment mentioned in S. 3 (1)(a) of the U. P. Control of Rent and Eviction Act is not in any sense a forfeiture of any rights under the lease or under the terms of the tenancy which the defendant held.

—S. 114-A—Breach of covenant to keep free seats in cinema house—Forfeiture—Relief— (West Bengal Amusement Tax (Amendment) Act (11 of 1949), Ss. 3, 4).

The covenant in a lease of cinema houses ran as follows:

"The company shall at all times during the period of the lease keep one box containing not less than 4 seats in each of the said Cornwallis Theatre and Crown Cinema at the disposal of the lessor for the use of herself or of person or persons authorised by her or on her behalf in writing and if the lessor so desires in writing the company shall instead of four seats in the box permit 6 persons in the stall and 8 persons in the gallery or in the pit to view the performance which will be held in the aforesaid two demised premises". By another clause it was provided that the company shall pay both the Owner's and Occupier's shares of rates and taxes and other outgoings and imposition payable in respect thereof during the said term of the lease.

Held, (i) that these seats mentioned in the covenant were free in the sense that no price was charged or paid in respect thereof, by the lessor.

(ii) The words of sub-section (3) (b) of S. 3 of the Amended Act were such that the person who was admitted on free ticket was liable to pay the entertainment tax. But the covenant required the lessee to discharge for and on behalf of the lessor such liability for tax on free and complimentary tickets or passes. The lessee did infringe its liability under the covenant to provide free seats to the lessor if it attempted to realise the tax from the lessor.

(iii) There being the breach of the covenant and as the lessor having given the necessary notice of forfeiture, forfeiture must follow as a matter of legal consequence. As one of the clause of the lessee's covenant in the lease provided clearly that the breach of any condition mentioned in the lease will entitle the lessor to re-enter and the breach in this case was capable of remedy and the lessor failed to remedy, therefore, under S. 114-A of the Transfer of Property Act the Court had no power, when the conditions mentioned in that section were satisfied to grant any relief against forfeiture. 90 Cal L J 263 : A I R 1953 Cal 536 (537, 538 to 542) (Prs 15, 21, 30, 31, 37, 40, 43).

—S. 114-A—Technical defects.

The object of S. 114-A is that the lessor should have clear information as regards the breaches complained of and he should have an opportunity of remedying them if possible. Once the purpose of this provision is substantially complied with mere technical defects should not prevent the lessor from availing herself of the right of forfeiture if she was otherwise entitled to it. The commonsense view of the matter should be taken in construing S. 114-A. (1952) 2 M L J 758 : 1952 Mad W N 871 : 66 Mad L W 1079 : ILR (1953) Mad 615 : AIR 1953 Mad 313 (315) (Pt B) (Pr 8) (DB).

—S. 114-A — Scope — Mandatory —Notice before suit.

The provisions of S. 114-A regarding further notice requiring the lessee to remedy his breach is mandatory, provided the breach is capable of being remedied. If the breach is irreparable or irremediable, no notice under S. 114-A is necessary and the landlord is entitled to evict the lessee if the conditions of forfeiture are fulfilled. But if any other remedy is available or the injury is reparable, a notice under S. 114-A is compulsory. AIR 1957 Orissa 35 (39) (Pt E) (Pr 14) (DB).

—S. 114-A—Forfeiture for non-payment of rent—Necessity for notice.

In case of forfeiture only one notice is required and not one under S. 111 (g) and another under S. 114-A. But the argument that no notice of ejectment is necessary at all in cases relating to forfeiture for non payment of rent is not correct. AIR 1955 Tripura 26 (26) (Pt A) (Pr 6).

SECTION 115

—S. 115—Surrender by lessee—Effect on rights of under-lessee.

——S. 115 — Landlord and tenant — Tenant closing original business because of old age and carrying on another business in partnership with apother person — Use of premises by partnership is permissive — This does not amount to sub-letting.

Held, on facts that the burden was entirely on the landlord to establish sub-letting. The mere fact that a tenant permits the tenancy premises to be utilised by a partnership in which he is a partner, does not mean that the relationship of a landlord and tenant is created between the tenant and the partnership. It is open to a partner to permit the use of his property by the partnership. Such permissive user is only by way of licence and will not create in the partnership the rights of a sub-tenant or a tenant. Ordinarily, the tenancy pre-supposes user by the tenant to the exclusion of the landlord. The use by the partnership being only permissive, the tenant cannot be deemed to have sub-let the premises to the partnership. The relation between the tenant and the partnership cannot be deemed to be that of a landlord and tenant in the circumstances of the case. 1954 N L J 100, Diss. 1964 Mah L J (Notes) 86.

——S. 115 — Surrender of lease — Effect on sub-lease.

Section 115, T. P. Act, provides that a surrender, express or implied, of a lease does not prejudice an under-lease of the property. The section proceeds on the principle that a man is not permitted to derogate from his own grant. As between the parties to the transaction a surrender by the lessee puts an end to his interest but it does not affect third persons who have acquired an interest from him. Such a surrender operates as an assignment to the lessor of the lessee's interest and thus brings the under-lessee into immediate relations with the lessor. 55 C W N 518 : 87 Cal L J 345 : ILR (1952) 2 Cal 167 : AIR 1952 Cal 196 (197) (Pt B) (Pr 15) (DB).

(Transfer of Property Act (1882), S. 116.)

1. Scope.
2. Holding over—What amounts to.
3. Lessee holding over after expiration of lease — General.
4. Effect lessee's legal representative remaining in possession.
5. "Accepts rent or otherwise assents to his continuing in possession."
6. Clause for renewal.
7. "In the absence of an agreement to the contrary."
8. Possession under invalid lease.
9. Holding over—Liability for damages.
10. Suit for possession—Limitation.

1. Scope.

——Ss. 116, 106 — Holding over — Determination of lease.

If there was holding over, notice under S. 106 of the Transfer of Property Act was necessary. If the notice did not end with the end of the month of tenancy, it was an invalid notice. On account of that invalidity the tenant could not have been ejected, and continued to be a tenant of the land. During the continuance of that tenancy the plaintiff by obtaining a lease could not eject the defendant. 1958 All L J 427 : 1958 All W R (HC) 546 : AIR 1958 All 879 (880) (Pt A) (Pr 6) (DB).

——S. 116 — Initial date in the case of holding over — Rent note not mentioning any date as to commencement of tenancy. See T. P. Act (4 of 1882), S. 110. AIR 1952 All 141.

——S. 116—Scope and applicability.

Section 116 of the T. P. Act deals with the effect of holding over and the question of holding over arises only when the lease has been determined. There cannot possibly arise any question of holding over when the lease has not been determined and the possession continues in accordance with the terms of the lease.

A tenant holding over after the determination of his lease is presumed to have become a tenant from year to year or month to month as the case may be, only when the landlord accepts rent from him or otherwise assents to his continuing in possession. The acceptance or rent or the assenting to the continuing in possession must obviously take place after the determination or the lease. ILR (1952) 1 All 85 : 1951 A L J 179 : AIR 1950 All 583 (585) (Pr 6).

——S. 116—Applicability—Lease for fixed period — Defendant not vacating — Plaintiff giving notice to vacate and claiming damages for occupation at enhanced rate — Defendant not paying and plaintiff not accepting any rent—Effect.

Defendant occupied plaintiff's premises on lease for a fixed period which expired on 17-10-1944. As defendant did not vacate plaintiff gave him notice to vacate and demanded damages at enhanced rate of Rs. 1,300 per year for occupation after 17-10-1944. As defendant still did not vacate plaintiff sued for ejectment. It was not defendant's case that plaintiff had accepted rent for period subsequent to 17-10-1944 or that he assented to continuance in possession of defendant and that any new tenancy came into existence as a result of acceptance of the plaintiff's offer of enhanced rent. Defendant did not accept plaintiffs offer; on the other hand in the written statement repudiated liability to pay at the enhanced rate of Rs. 1,300.

Held, that S. 116 of the Transfer of Property Act was not attracted. 1960 Nag L J (Notes) 60.

——S. 116 — Manufacturing unregistered lease — Notice to terminate. In S. 116 statute itself indicates by necessary implication, that S. 106 will apply to all leases covered by statute, whether under registered instruments or not. See T. P. Act (1882), S. 106. AIR 1959 Cal 181 (DB).

Held, on the facts of this case that the purchasers did neither abandon nor waive their rights to enforce the eviction order by entering into a new contract, express or implied; that fresh application for eviction filed by the purchasers could not amount to a waiver of their pre-existing right to enforce the previous eviction order and that there was no scope for applying the doctrine of election in this case. The renewal of a tenancy by application of S. 116, T. P. Act takes place only when there is no agreement to the contrary. If there is an agreement, the acceptance of rent after determination of the lease will not give rise to a renewal of tenancy. In the case of leases to which the Bihar Building (Lease, Rent and Eviction) Act applies there is a statutory bar to the automatic renewal even if there is no agreement to the contrary in the lease itself. Under that Act the tenant can extend the lease only by serving a notice upon the landlord as required by S. 12 of that Act. That being so the mere acceptance of the rent in the absence of such notice will not bring about a renewal. In that respect the provisions of S. 116, T. P. Act. must be deemed to be cut down by the special provisions of the Tenancy Act. Digambar Narain Chaudhary v. 2. Holding over—What amounts to.

——S. 116 — Holding over — What amounts to— Tenancy Laws — Calcutta Thika Tenancy Act (2 of 1949), Ss. 3, 31.

Before a tenant could be said to be holding over, two conditions must be satisfied: firstly that the tenant must remain in possession after the expiration of the period of the lease and secondly the landlord or his representative must accept rent or otherwise assent to the assessee continuing in possession.

Where there was no allegation in terms of these conditions and only thing alleged in favour of the contention of holding over was that there was a delay of two years and 7 months before the filing of an application under S. 3 (vi) of the Calcutta Thikka Tenancy Act, for ejectment.

Held, that when a tenant continues in possession after the terms of the lease has come to an end, he is a tenant at sufferance until the landlord either accepts rent or otherwise shows his assent to the tenant continuing to be on the land, when he becomes a tenant by holding over. In the absence of proof about acceptance of rent or consent by a landlord, mere long delay could not be said to indicate consent. 53 Cal W N 73 (FC), Foll. ; 60 Cal W N 39, Dist. ——S. 116 — Tenancy by 'holding over' is new tenancy—Protection under S. 9 (1) (b) (iii), West Bengal Non-agricultural Tenancy Act — (Tenancy Laws — West Bengal Non-agricultural Tenancy Act (20 of 1949), S. 9 (1) (b) (iii)).

The tenancy by holding over is a 'new tenancy in law', although, practically speaking, the terms of this new tenancy may be the same as of the old or the determined or expired tenancy. The tenant 'holds over' not under the expired kabuliyat or registered lease or 'lease in writing' but really 'in spite of it'.

Even apart from S. 116, T. P. Act or the general law of 'holding over' as between landlord and tenant, a tenancy by 'holding over' would appropriately come within the expression 'without a (any) lease in writing' as used in the West Bengal Non-agricultural Tenancy Act, 1949. The provisions of S. 7 (4), West Bengal Non-agricultural Act do not warrant or compel a different construction.

Where the period of the tenancy by 'holding over' is more than one year but less than twelve years 'even when taken along with the period of the 'expired' lease in writing' which preceded it, it will have the lesser protection of S. 9 (1) (b). If the period of the tenancy by 'holding over is by itself not less than twelve years' it will have the greater protection of S. 7 (2). If, however, this period be less than twelve years but it is 'twelve years or more' when taken along with the period of the 'expired lease in writing' in the wake of which it followed, it will still have the higher protection of S. 7, as contained in S. 7 (4).

Therefore a tenant of non-agricultural land holding over without lease in writing, after the expiry of registered lease for five years is entitled to the protection of S. 9 (1) (b) (iii) of the Act of 1949. ILR (1956) 2 Cal 370 : 58 Cal W N 651 : A I R 1954 Cal 539 (540) (Pt B) (Prs 5 to 10).

The expression "holding over" means that the relationship of landlord and tenant was allowed to continue with the consent of both parties, and it is for the tenant to prove the overt acts by which the relation was allowed to continue. These overt acts may be either the receipt of the rent by the landlord or his assenting to the cotinuance of the tenancy by other acts.

Simply because the landlord waited for so many years for instituting the suit after the formal delivery of possession in execution of a decree for arrears of rent against the tenant, the tenant cannot be deemed to have held over. A I R 1955 Pat 158 (160) (Pt A) (Pr 6) (DB).

——S. 116—Nature of possession of tenant holding over without consent — (Specific Relief Act (1877), S. 9).

Under the Indian law the possession of a tenant who has ceased to be a tenant is protected by law. Although he may not have a right to continue in possession after termination of the tenancy, his possession is juridical and that possession is protected by statute. Under S. 9 of the Specific Relief Act a tenant who has ceased to be a tenant may sue for possession against his landlord if the landlord deprives him of possession otherwise than in due course of law, but a trespasser who has been thrown out of possession cannot go to Court under S. 9 and claim possession against the true owner. Therefore, the law makes a clear and sharp distinction between a trespasser and an erstwhile tenant. Whereas the trespasser's possession is never juridical and never protected by law, the possession of an erstwhile tenant is juridical and is protected by law. Therefore, as far as the Indian law is concerned, an erstwhile tenant can never become a trespasser. It may or may not be that in English law in certain circumstances he can become a trespasser and it does seem that the landlord can enter the premises and deprive the erstwhile tenant of his possession, but in India a landlord can only eject his erstwhile tenant by recourse to law and by obtaining a decree for ejectment. 56 Bom L R 308 : ILR (1954) Bom 950 : AIR 1954 Bom 358 (360) (Pt B) (Pr 4) (DB).

Where after the expiry of the term of the lease, the tenant continued in possession without executing a fresh lease and the landlord obtained a decree for recovery of municipal taxes in respect of the period subsequent to the expiry of the lease.

Held, that the consolidated rate of municipal taxes which could be legally recovered from the tenant was not part of rent and since the municipal taxes for the period subsequent to the expiry of the lease were claimed on the basis of statutory liability and not under any liability accruing from the lease deed, it could not be said that there was any waiver on the part of the landlord or any recognition of the tenancy by holding over under the provisions of S. 116 of the T. 5. "Accepts rent or otherwise assents to his continuing in possession."

■ ——S. 116 — Acceptance of rent for period subsequent to determination of lease, long before expiry —Landlord's consent to continuing in possession, if can be inferred.

For the application of S. 116 two things are necessary: (1) the lessee should be in possession after the termination of the lease; and (2) the lessor or his representative should accept rent or otherwise assent to his continuing in possession. The use of the word 'otherwise' suggests that acceptance of rent by the landlord has been treated as a form of his giving assent to the tenant's continuance of possession. There can be no question of the lessee "continuing in possession" until the lease has expired and the context in which the provision for acceptance of rent find a place clearly shows that what is contemplated is that the payment of rent and its acceptance should be made at such a time and in such a manner as to be equivalent to the landlord assenting to the lessee continuing in possession. Where the landlord had accepted rent for a period subsequent to the determination of the lease by efflux of time nearly a year before the expiry of the lease, the consent of the landlord to the tenants' continuing in possession cannot be inferred: AIR (36) 1949 Cal 47, Affirmed.

The fact that the payment was made at a time when there was no question of the lessor assenting to the lessee's continuing in possession and neither party treated the payment as importing such assent, is sufficient to take the case out of the mischief of S. 116. ——S. 116—Tenant holding over—Assent of landlord —Creation of new tenancy — Demand for rent—Repudiation of tenancy — Suit on title—Limitation [Limitation Act (1908), Arts. 139 and 144].

The assent of the landlord to the continuance in possession of the tenant, after the determination of the tenancy, would create a new tenancy and make the tenant a tenant holding over in accordance with the provisions of S. 116 of the Transfer of Property Act. In order to create a tenancy at sufferance the tenant should have lawfully entered into possession in recognition of the landlord's superior title and should have con inued to remain in possession in the same right after the termination of the tenancy without asserting any title hostile to that of the landlord and without his assent or dissent. The continuance in possession should be due to the laches of the owner in not asking for payment of the rent or vacation of the premises or taking over possession of the property.

Where the tenant had remained in possession after the determination of the tenancy the requirements of S. 116 are satisfied by giving the notice demanding rent for the period after the termination of the tenancy and the landlord must be deemed to have assented to his continuing in possession and the tenant at sufferance becomes a tenant from month to month.

Where the defendants being the legal representatives of the tenant holding over are not tenants on sufferance but hold the property under an independent title of their own then Art. 139 would not apply at all. If, on the other hand, they hold the property in the same right as the deceased tenant being his legal representatives, there is no reason why the position should be different and the landlord should not be able to give his assent to their continuing in possession as he could have done if the deceased was alive. 31 Mad 163, commented and dissented from.

The Courts in England seem to have taken a slightly different view and no fresh tenancy after the termination of tenancy seems to arise in England unless both parties agree. ——S. 116 — Conditions for applicability—Holding over—Offer of rent must be on express ground that lessee intended to continue in possession and its acceptance must be with full knowledge of nature of such offer — It is question of fact — Assam Non-Agricultural Urban Areas Tenancy Act (12 of 1955), S. 5 — Tenancy created under S. 116, T. P. Act can be regarded as contractual tenancy for purposes of S. 5.

Before S. 116, T. P. Act can be attracted it is first necessary that the lessee after the determination of the lease remains in possession and secondly, that the lessor or his legal representative either accepts rent or otherwise assents to his continuing in possession. In order that the acceptance of rent should amount to an assent of the lessor to retain the lessee in possession of the property, it has to be established that the offer of rent was made on the express ground that the lessee intended to continue his lease and when the acceptance was made it was done with full knowledge of the nature of the offer. This is a question of fact which will have to be determined from the circumstances of each case. AIR 1949 F C 124 and AIR 1961 S C 1067, Dist.

A tenancy created under S. 116, T. P. Act itself is based on an offer and acceptance and thus it can be regarded as a contractual tenancy and if the terms of the old tenancy can be looked into as part of the terms of the new tenancy, there is no bar to the applicability of S. 5 of Assam Act (12 of 1955), to the tenancies created under S. 116. I L R (1963) 15 Assam 120 : A I R 1963 Assam 137 (139, 141): (Pt B) (Prs 10, 14) (DB).

——Ss. 116 and 126 — Landlord filing suit for ejectment after notice— Tenant remitting amount of rent by money-order — Landlord accepting — Effect on suit.

The landlord served a quit notice on the tenant and sued him on 10th October, 1956 for ejectment. He claimed arrears of rent from 1st January 1956 to 31st July, 1956 and damages from :1st August, 1956 to 9th October, 1956. The defendant sent Rs. 360 on 18th October, 1956 and Rs. 144 on 8th December, 1956 by money-order which were accepted by the landlord. At the trial the defendant pleaded that as the plaintiff had received the amount of rent, his ejectment suit should be dismissed.

Held, that the defendant having made the payments to the landlord, without insisting on him to withdraw the suit, the landlord cannot be deemed to have waived his rights asserted by him in the suit. The mere fact of receipt of the money-orders cannot have the effect of waiver of the notice to terminate the tenancy and the plaintiff's claim for ejectment is not affected. 1958 NLJ 250 and AIR 1926 Cal 763, Dist.; 1953 NLJ 147; AIR 1953 Nag 219; ILR (1954) Nag 147, Rel. on. 1960 Nag L J (Notes) 52.

By Section 116 of the Transfer of Property Act a new tenancy is implied from the continuing possession of the demised property by the lessee after the determination of the lease and the assent of the lessor to the continuing occupation by acceptance of rent or otherwise. ——S. 116—Assent of landlord—Necessity.

Mere continuance of possession after the expiry or determination of his lease would not entitle the tenant to claim a tenancy by holding over. There must also be the landlord's assent to such possession by acceptance of rent or otherwise. In the absence of an agreement to the contrary, the tenant's continuance of possession after the termination of the lease, coupled with the landlord's assent, would constitute a tenancy by holding over and the lease would be renewed from year to year or from month to month, according to the purpose of the tenancy under S. 106 of the Transfer of Property Act. The landlord's assent again may be express or implied and, it may be inferred from circumstances. Mere absence of dissent would not be enough but if it continues for a sufficiently long period, it may, with the aid of other circumstances, and in the absence of any contrary indication, reasonably give rise to an inference of assent. 60 Cal W N 39 : ILR (1957) 2 Cal 214 : AIR 1957 Cal 173 (175) (Pt A)(Pr 10).

——Ss. 116 and 117—Terms of renewed lease.

Section 116, T. P. Act does not apply to an agricultural lease in view of S. 117. Even if the principle behind S. 116 is allowed to operate a strict adherance to its requirements would not be necessary.

The defendant executed a kabuliyat by which he agreed to take settlement of the land for agricultural and residential purposes for a term of one year from 1st Baisakh 1351, B. S. to Chaitra, 1351 B. S., as a non-occupancy tenant on Rs. 10 as its annual paikast rent which was payable on the first Pous of the said year against a receipt. He further agreed in express terms that he shall vacate the land without any notice on the expiry of the term of settlement and would be liable to punishment as a trespasser if he failed to comply. The defendant continued in possession after the expiry of the first year by paying rent to the landlord plaintiff. After the expiry of the second year the plaintiff gave a 15 days' notice to quit and on failure to comply sued for ejectment.

Held, that as the contract was renewed by conduct of the parties without any kind of qualification, there was no justification for importing into it the principle or the theory of renewal from year to year. Hence the lease for the second year was in terms of the original lease and the condition that the tenant shall vacate at the expiry of the second year was part of it. Notice of ejectment to the defendant was not, therefore, necessary. ILR (1954) 6 Assam 95 : AIR 1954 Assam 102 (104, 105) (Pt D) (Prs 10, 11, 12) (DB).

——S. 116—Calcutta Thika Tenancy Act (2 of 1949) —Distinction between tenancy by "holding over" and tenancy under renewal clause — Tenant remaining in possession under renewal clause in lease for more than twelve years — Tenant not entitled to protection under S. 2 (5) of Calcutta Thika Tenancy Act —Tenancy Laws — Calcutta Thika Tenancy Act (2 of 1949), S. 2 (5).

There is a fundamental distinction between a tenancy by "holding over" under S. 116 of the Transfer of Property Act by mere assent of the landlord (including acceptance of rent as a form of such assent) and a tenancy or right under a renewal clause. In the first case, the tenancy, though it may continue the old possession under the old terms, would in law, be a new tenancy de hors the lease and in spite of its determination. In the other case, the tenancy or the rights in question arise under the lease itself though under its renewal clause, by reason of the exercise of the lessee's option thereunder. In the latter case, the holding over and continuance of possession is under the original lease, which has not expired or determined but survives in or by reason of its renewal clause, which sustains the said holding over or continuance of possession, the same being under and referable to the said clause, or, for the matter of that, the original lease itself, while, in the former case, the holding over and continuance of possession is referable to the statute (S. 116 of the Transfer of Property Act) and is under it and cannot stand upon the original lease, which has determined and cannot support or sustain the same. The lease for the optional or further period under the renewal clause would not have been an independent lease but would have been a part and an integral part of the original lease, which, in essence, was for a fixed or firm period of twenty years and an optional or further period of six years, the latter to come into effect on exercise of the option by the tenant. In the case of holding over under S. 116 of the Transfer of Property Act, however, it would have been under the 'renewal' or the new or statutory lease under the said section, distinct from and independent of the original lease, which stood determined, though, normally the terms of these two serve, of course, the period, would in the absence of an agreement to the contrary, be practically the same. The holding under the above statutory "holding over", therefore, would not be a holding under the said orignal lease.

Where lessee remained in possession after expiry of lease for more than twelve years and paid rent at an enhanced rate as per terms of a renewal clause contained in the original lease deed and the lessor accepted the rent.

Held, that the lessee must be deemed to have remained in possession, under the renewal clause of the lease as person who had exercised the option given to him by the renewal clause and whose right so to do had been acknowledged by the lessor and acted on by both parties. Hence the lessee was not entitled to the protection under S. 2 (5) of the Calcutta Thika Tenancy Act : AIR 1952 S C 23 and AIR 1951 S C 285, Disting. ——S. 116—Term of lease expired—Tenant holding over—Lease is renewed with all conditions.

Where the lessee after the expiry of the period fixed by the document of lease holds over, under S. 116 of the Transfer of Property Act it is the lease that is renewed with all the terms and conditions contained in the document of the lease which are not inconsistent with an annual tenancy. It is not correct to say that by holding over the same contract does not continue and only a new tenancy is created. (1927) 1 K B 130, Rel. on. ● ——S. 116 — Stipulation in expired lease creating charge for outstanding rent in term of lease—Landlord can enforce it even in respect of arrears accruing after expiry of original term.

In the case of a tenant holding over, all the stipulations contained in the expired lease deed will be deemed to be imported into an implied lease by holding over unless they are altogether unconnected with the transaction of lease, e. g., a covenant to purchase the reversion, or are inconsistent or incompatible with a yearly or monthly lease, e. g., a covenant fixing a period of over a year or month as the duration.

The stipulation contained in an expired lease, providing a security or creating a charge for the outstanding rent is a term of the lease within the meaning of S. 116, Transfer of Property Act and the landlord would be entitled to enforce the security or charge even in respect of arrears accruing after the expiry of the original term of the lease and during the currency of a lease by implication created by holding over : 1946 Trav L R 152 and 1948 Trav L R 362, Overruled. ——S. 116 — Thika lessee holding over—He cannot build permanent structures—S. 108.

Section 116 has nothing to do with the question whether the tenant is entitled to put a permanent structure or not and the expression 'in the absence of an ageeement to the contrary' which occurs in that section cannot be read as being of general application, apart from the terms of that section, in deciding what the rights of the tenant are as regards the erection of structures. As a matter of fact, S. 108 (p) clearly provides that the lessee must not, without the lessor's consent, erect on the property any permanent structure, except for agricultural purposes. Consequently, where a thika tenant for three years holds over after the expiry of the lease, the lessee has no right to erect a permanent structure without the lessor's consent. (1959) 63 Cal W N 565.

The principle that if originally the holding was agricultural a subsequent lease for non-agricultural purpose will not take it out of the operation of the Orissa Tenancy Act and the lease cannot be governed by the provisions of the Transfer of Property Act, can have an application where there was a termination of the ryoti interest and cessation of the ryoti holding by the surrender by the original ryot of the entire ryoti holding in favour of the lamborder-Gountia and a subsequent leasing by the lamborder-Gountia of the entire lands which were formerly the subject-matter of the entire holding for non-agricultural purposes. The subsequent tenancy, will be governed by the provisions of the Transfer of Property Act as between the Gountia and the lessee. S. T. ● ——S. 117 and S. 105 — Applicability—Main lease for agricultural purposes and sub-lease for non-agricultural purposes—Bihar Tenancy Act — Applicability.

From the provision in S. 117 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, it is manifest that where a lease, which includes a sub-lease, is for a purpose other than agricultural purpose, the Transfer of Property Act will apply and that a sub-lease granted for an agricultural purpose will not be governed by the Transfer of Property Act even though the person who has granted the sub-lease held the land as a lessee under the Act. Conversely, where a sub-lease is created for a purpose other than agricultural purpose it will be governed by the Transfer of Property Act and not by the Bihar Tenancy Act even though the original tenancy is governed by the Bihar Tenancy Act. ——S. 117—Scope—Lease for agricultural purposes.

Where at the time of executing the Kabuliat both the parties understood that the area was being settled for agricultural purposes there is no necessity to execute a document in accordance with the provisions of S. 107. The settlement in favour of the lessee would confer a valid title on him to maintain a suit for ejecting a trespasser although he might have subsequently intended to build a house on the area. AIR 1957 Pat 692 (693) (Pt A) (Pr 9) (DB).

——S. 117—Registration Act (1908), Ss. 17 (1) (d) and 49—S. 17 and S. 117, T. P. Act—Distinction — Lease falling under S. 117 — Necessity of registration — Effect of S. 49 and S. 91, Evidence Act — (Evidence Act (1872), S. 91). See Registration Act (1908), S. 17 (1) (d). AIR 1960 J and K 63.

——S. 117 — Agricultural leases by unregistered deeds — Provisions of Transfer of Property Act inapplicable — Lease can be proved by other evidence.

Plaintiffs took agricultural land on lease from the lambardar under an unregistered patta and paid consideration of Rs. 300 as nazrana. They filed a suit for declaration of their title as occupancy tenants of that land. The question arose whether the lease could be created only by a registered instrument and whether all oral evidence in support of that lease was, therefore, inadmissible.

Held, that S. 117 of the Transfer of Property Act excluded agricultural leases from the operation of its own provisions. That being so, such leases could be made orally. It was a case where, though a registered document was not necessary to effectuate the transaction, a deed was in fact executed and not registered. In such a case, the transaction was not rendered nugatory by the unregistered deed. The Patta could not be used as evidence for creation of the lease. The unregistered lease deed could not be submitted in evidence to prove its terms. However the other evidence of cretation of the lease was admissible. AIR 1949 Nag 218 : 1949 N L J 575, Foll. (1961) M P L J (Notes) 260.

——S. 117—Agricultural lease—Unregistered patta—Possession delivered to lessee and rent accepted —Lease can be proved by possession and acceptance of rent—Suit by lessee against trespasser for ejectment—Terms of lease need not be proved. See Registration Act (1908), S. 17 (1) (d). A I R 1964 Orissa 16.

——S. 117—Agricultural lease — Creation of registered lease—Necessity.

A lease for agricultural purpose can be created orally and by delivery of possession. A registered document is not essential. ('60) 26 Cut L T 147.

● ——S. 117—Agricultural lease for a term exceeding one year—Must be registered—Unregistered lease not admissible in evidence—No other evidence of its terms can be given under S. 91, Evidence Act. See Registration Act (1908), S. 17. AIR 1964 Pat 1 (FB).

——S. 117 — Lease for agricultural purposes—Non-registration—Onus to prove the lease to be for agricultural purpose lies on lessee.

Under the general law a lease for a period of more than one year has to be effected by a registered document; and if it is a case governed by the Bihar Tenancy Act, the onus is on the plaintiff to establish that the lease taken by him was for agricultural purpose and, therefore, it did not require any registration. 1962 B L J R 811.

——S. 117—Kabuliat granting right to pluck mango fruit and mahua flower for three years—Absence of registration — Deed not admissible in suit for rent — Oral evidence not admissible. See Registration Act (1908), S. 17 (1) (d). AIR 1961 Pat 308 (DB).

——S. 117 — Oral lease for agricultural purposes — Validity—Bihar Tenancy Act.

There is no provision in the Bihar Tenancy Act, which defines lease or prescribes the mode for the creation of an agricultural lease. The long standing practice to treat a kabuliyat, executed by the lessee and accepted by the lessor, as the instrument creating a tenancy has not in any way been affected by the Transfer of Property Act. An agricultural lease may be made orally and if the subsequent acts and conduct of the parties disclose that the lease so created was acted upon the lease is a valid lease in law. 1956 B L J R 108 : AIR 1957 Pat 92 (93, 94) (Pt B) (Pr 10).

——Ss. 117 and 106 — Agricultural lease—Alteration of rent—Proof—Verbal declaration is sufficient.

A lease in respect of agricultural lands comes under the operation of S. 117, and for such a lease a registered instrument cannot be necessary under the law. A verbal settlement is sufficient, and hence in such a case, to prove alteration of rent, a verbal declaration would be sufficient. ILR 28 Pat 844 : AIR 1950 Pat 22 (23) (Pt A) (Pr 6) (DB).

——S. 119 (Before amendment in 1929) — Scope of —Bona fide purchaser — Warranty of title.

Section 119, before the amendment in 1929, would not entitle a party to the exchange to recover the property exchanged from an alienee of the parties because the warranty of title in exchange to which it gives the statutory recognition was never extended to such alienees. As that was the case of an ordinary assignee a bona fide purchaser could not be in a worse position. Section 119 before amendment related only to the rights of the parties to the exchange inter se and their heirs. (1940) 1 M L J 248 : A I R 1940 Mad 426, Diss. 2. "Voluntarily".

——S. 122 —.Construction — 'Voluntarily' — Meaning of.

A gift when accepted can be said to have been 'voluntarily' made within the meaning of that word in S. 122 even though the deed evidencing it is, after due execution, registered against the wishes of the donor. 3. "Without consideratson."

——Ss. 122, 54—Consideration and motive.

Per Sapru J. — Consideration cannot be confused with motive behind an act.

The legal conception of consideration is not the same as the dictionary meaning of the term.

Where the motive behind the deed of gift was an unequivocal intention on the part of the transferor to give to the transferee a title which would act as a safeguard against any claim for the pre-emption in respect of other property intended to be sold, the transaction for that reason cannot be called sale. ——S. 122—Gift to after born persons—Validity.

Where the donees under a settlement deed do not constitute a tarwad they are entitled to take the gift only as co-tenants. In that case the gift to the after-born persons would be invalid. A I R 1958 Ker 301 (303) (Pt B) (Pr 7) (DB).

——S. 122— 'Gift'— Gift Tax— Hindu Law — Joint family of grand-father, father and sons — Partition— Son in the womb—Right of after born son—Transfer by grand father of his share to after grandson—If a taxable gift. See Gift Tax Act (18 of 1958), S. 2 (xii), (1964) 2 I T J 361 : (1964) 54 I T R 425 (Mys).

——S. 122 — Gift in favour of minor — Validity— Mode of acceptance.

(Obiter.) A gift can be made in favour of a minor and it would be valid if accepted by or on behalf of the donee. The possession of the father or guardian of the minor is practically the only mode in which the minor can accept or exercise possession; there is nothing in S. 122 of the Transfer of Property Act to limit acceptance of a gift to an express acceptance. The acceptance of a gift may be express or implied; in the case of a gift, actual or constructive possession by the decree is undoutedly proof of acceptance. (1961) 3 Orissa J D 201.

——S. 122—Minor—Competency to accept.

So long as the acceptance of a gift does not impose any obligation on the minor, a minor can accept a gift. ILR 20 Mad 147; 39 I C 46 and 19 Mad L J 752, Rel. on; 5 P L T 305, Disting. 1956 Pat L R 558 : 1957 B L J R 62.

Gift is not complete unless it is accepted by the donee. 1954 All W R (HC) 108 : AIR 1954 All 595 (597) (Pt A) (Pr 5).

——Ss. 122, 123—Acceptance by donee — Necessity.

Acceptance of gift by the donee being necessary a gift which is not accepted, even though a registered document has been executed, will not operate to transfer the property to the donee. 1951 All W R (H C) 11.

——S. 122—Acceptance of gift may be antecedent to deed of gift.

Acceptance of a gift is not something which has necessarily to take place only after the transfer is completed or effected. The law does not require that there should be proof that there was acceptance only after the deed was executed. There can be cases where it may be possible to draw an inference as to the acceptance of a gift even from acts anterior to the execution of a deed of gift. (1958) 2 Andh W R 343 : AIR 1958 Andh Pra 213 (215) (Pt B) (Pr 8).

——Ss. 122 and 123 — Accepted by or on behalf of donee.

Section 122 requires that a gift to be valid must be accepted by or on behalf of a donee and such acceptance must be made during the life time of the donor and while the latter is still capable of giving. If the donee dies before acceptance, the gift is void.

Delivery of possession which is essential under the Hindu Law to complete a gift is now rendered unnecessary. What is now required is that the transfer must be effected by a registered document satisfying the conditions laid down in S. 123.

Whether a gift is known or unknown to the donee, there is no presumption in favour of acceptance of a gift in India. The provisions contained in S. 122 negative such a presumption. 41 I C 389, Not foll.

The acceptance of a gift may be either express or may be implied. Whether there has been an acceptance or not must depend on the facts of each particular case. ILR (1951) 1 Cal 295.

——Ss. 122, 123 — Gift of property in possession of tenant — Acceptance of gift by donee.

The recitals in a deed of gift clearly showed that the property was then outstanding with tenants and what remained with the donor was only the right to collect rent from them; and that right to collect rent was transferred to and accepted by the donee under the terms of the gift.

Held, that there was acceptance of the gift by the donee. AIR 1963 Ker 344 (346) (Pt B) (Pr 7).

——Ss. 122, 123 and 126—Acceptance by donee—Need for.

If there is acceptance of the gift after execution of the deed; even though the registration was postponed to a later date, the gift would become irrevocable. What the law requires is acceptance of the gift after its execution though the deed may not be registered. Anterior negotiations or talks about the transfer of property by way of gift would not amount to acceptance. Acceptance may be implied but the facts relied on must be acts of positive conduct and not merely passive acquiescence. (1954) 1 M L J 194 : 66 Mad L W 841 : AIR 1954 Mad 215 (217) (Pt A) (Pr 7).

——Ss. 122 and 123—Acceptance by donee — There must be acceptance before donor's death—Donee not present at execution or registration — Document and property all along with donor till death—No title passes—Gift is void. 1952 Nag L J (Notes) 72.

——Ss. 122, 123—Gift by husband to wife—Requirements, for validity of gift—Registered gift deed handed over to wife—Sufficient indication of handing over of possession—Wife enjoying usufruct of property—Gift held validly completed — Non-mutation of property in wife's name not decisive of non-acceptance — Suit for setting aside a gift as being induced by undue influence is governed by Art. 91 of Limitation Act (1908). AIR 1964 Orissa 212 (Prs 6 to 11).

——S. 122—Gift in favour of wife and daughters—Acceptance by wife — Donees getting their names mutated in pursuance of deed of gift which came from their custody — Held that there was acceptance of gift by all. See Hindu Law — Gift. AIR 1963 Orissa 50.

——Ss. 122, 123 — Gift of money in form of fixed deposit and cash certificates—Acceptance and delivery of possession—What amounts to.

Held on facts that there was no evidence of acceptance by the donees in this case. On the contrary notices were sent to the Bank demanding payment of interest to him which was contrary to the terms of the gift and therefore amounted to repudiation of the gift itself. (2) that in view of the Bank's position — that it did not and could not act as agent for the donees, there was no delivery as required by law. Accordingly

In the absence of acceptatce and delivery of the goods gifted, the said transaction did not constitute a valid gift in law. ILR (1962) Cut 625 : AIR 1962 Orissa 74 (77) (Pt A) (Pr 8) (DB).

——S. 122 — Gift — Formalities — Acceptance. See Hindu Law. AIR 1955 N U C (Tra-Co) 1046 (DB).

——S. 122—Acceptance of gift — Evidence of.

The question whether the gift was accepted by the donee depends upon the evidence and circumstances of the case. One such circumstance is the fact that the original gift deed was produced in court by him. Further the fact that the denee paid the tax for the property from that year is sufficient to show acceptance. ——S. 122—Acceptance of gift—Indications for.

The donee's receiving the document from the donor after due execution thereof, and presenting it for registration and getting it registered as sufficient indications of the acceptance of the gift. AIR 1953 Trav-Co 336 (337) (Pt B) (Pr 5) (DB).

8. Donor dying before acceptance.

——S. 122—Donor dying before acceptance—Effect.

Even if the mutation application by the donee may by implication suggest that the gift was accepted by the donee yet it cannot avail the donee to prove the gift where it had been made after the death of the donor. 1956 Pat L R 558 : (1957) B L J R 62.

——S. 122—Will and gift—Distinction. See Succession Act (1925), S. 2 (h). A I R 1956 Trav-Co 127 (DB).

——S. 122—Will or gift.

In construing a deed, the entire document should be considered and not merely particular words, terms or even clauses and this has to be done in the light of the surrounding circumstances.

Nomenclature of the document is not conclusive. But in ascertaining the true intention of the maker the name by which he called the instrument has to be borne in mind and must not be lightly brushed aside.

The fact that a deed is registered as a deed of gift is also not conclusive though it is undoubtedly one of the several tests to ascertain whether the document in question is a gift or a will.

Reading the document in question as a whole it was held that rights over the properties comprised therein vested in the executees from the date of the document subject to the life estate in favour of executant and that the document was therefore a gift and not a will. A I R 1953 Trav-Co 336 (337) (Pt A) (Pr 3) (DB).

SYNOPSIS

(Transfer of Property Act (1882), S. 123.)

1. Scope.
2. Hindu law.
3. Mahomedan law.
4. Gifts of immovable property.
5. Registration and operation of gift.
6. Delivery of property.
7. "Attested by at least two witnesses."
8. Law in places to which T. P. Act is not extended.

1. Scope.

——Ss. 123, 122 and 5—Dedication to Hindu deity—It is not gift—It would be endowment if owner divests himself of his rights of ownership therein—S. 123 not applicable—Deity is not 'living person'. See T. P. Act (4 of 1882) S. 122. (1965) 58 I T R 721 : AIR 1966 All 100 (DB).

——Ss. 123, 122—Acceptance by donee—There must be acceptance before donor's death—Donee not present at execution or registration—Document and property all along with donor till death—No title passes. See T. P. Act (1882), S. 122. 1952 Nag L J (Notes) 72.

——Ss. 123 and 8—Gift or will—Construction—Tests for determination indicated. AIR 1955 N U C (Trav-Co) 2562 (DB).

2. Hindu law.

● ——S. 123—Hindu — Widow — Gift of reasonable portion of property to daughter on marriage — Deed executed after two years of marriage—Effect stated. See Hindu law—Widow. AIR 1957 S C 434.

——S. 123—Ancestral house—Gift by father in favour of his wife and son without consent of son—Validity. See Hindu law—Joint family. AIR 1956 Bhopal 66.

——S. 123—Gift of immovable property by Hindu—Delivery of possession — If essential under Hindu Law.

Section 123 is applicable to gifts under Hindu law. The emphasis so far as the transfer of immoveable property under S. 123 is on the execution of an instrument properly executed and not so much on the actual delivery of the property. AIR 1960 Mys 97 (99) (Pt B) (Pr 7) (DB).

——S. 123—Hindu law—Stridhan—Gift by P to J on condition of giving maintenance or allowing possession for life time of self and wife B—P in possession dying—J disturbing possession—B suing—In compromise B given portion by way of maintenance—Property does not become stridhan of B—Deed—Construction. 1951 Nag L J (Notes) 192.

3. Mahomedan law.

——Ss. 123 and 129 — Gift by a Mahomedan — Property subject to usufructuary mortgage — Gift of equity of redemption can be made -Donor should deliver possession as he himself has over property—As donor has no tangible possession over property unequivocal declaration will be enough—Conduct of donor before and after may be taken into account—Conduct seven years after gift cannot be taken into consideration—Failure to change name in Municipal Registers is not circumstance to hold that donor had not done all that he could possibly do to transfer possession—Gift by deed—Validity. 23 Bom 682; 6 Bom 650, Diss. from. AIR 1955 All 255 (255, 256) (Prs 2, 4).

● ——S. 123—Oral gift by Muslim lady—Subsequent document evidencing transaction executed as ekarar-nama—Test to decide whether amounts to deed of gift—Document held a gift deed liable to stamp duty and registration. See Registration Act (1908), S. 17. AIR 1962 Andh Pra 199 (FB).

——Ss. 123 and 129 — Gift by Mahomedan—S. 123 does not apply—Registration necessary if reduced to writing—(Registration Act (1908), S. 17 (1) (a).)

In order to create a valid gift of movable or immovable property, writing is not essential under Mahomedan law. The provisions of S. 123 read with S. 129 do not apply to Mahomedan gifts. But if a gift is reduced to writing, it requires to be registered under S. 17 (1) (a) of the Registration Act. AIR 1955 N U C (Andhra) 3607.

——S. 123—Applicability—Gift by Hindu at Maxwell Bazar, Imphal in 1935 — Transfer not effected by registered instrument — Validity. See Hindu Law — Gift. AIR 1954 Manipur 22.

By Notification No. 183 St. dated the 27th April 1935, under S. 1 of the Transfer of Property Act, S. 123 was extended to all Municipal Committees of the Punjab and thereafter in order to make a valid gift it was necessary that there was a written instrument signed by or on behalf of the donor and attested by two witnesses and registered. 55 Punj L R 381 : AIR 1953 Punj 304 (304) (Pt A) (Pr 4) (DB).

——S. 123 — Registered instrument — Evidence of transfer of possession—Hindu Law—Gift.

Where the Transfer of Property Act is not in force and a gift is made by a registered instrument, and there is nothing to show that the donor, in any way, repudiated the gift in his lifetime, the evidence required to show that there was such transfer of possession as would make the gift complete under the Hindu Law would not be much. SYNOPSIS

1. Scope.
2. Agreement for revocation.
3. Paragraph 2 — General.
4. "Save as aforesaid a gift cannot be revoked — Paragraph 3.

1. Scope.

● ——S. 126 — Person transferring assets to woman in consideration of their forthcoming marriage — S. 16 (3) (a) (iii), Income-tax Act held not attracted. See Income-tax Act (1922), S. 16 (3) (a) (iii). AIR 1964 S C 587.

——S. 126—Gift with a condition—Person accepting gift with condition—Condition not fulfilled — Donor is entitled to refund of amount of gift. ILR (1960) 2 Andh Pra 560 : (1960) 1 Andh W R 326 : AIR 1960 Andh Pra 605 (610) (Pt C) (Pr 13) (DB).

——S. 126 — Registration and operation of gift — Acceptance of the gift after execution of deed even though registration was postponed would make the gift irrevocable. See T. P. Act (1882), S. 123. AIR 1954 Mad 215.

——S. 126 — Condition against alienation in gift is void — Case does not fall under S. 126. See T. P. Act (1882), S. 10. AIR 1956 Punj 255

——S. 126 — Absolute gift with a defeasance clause —Effect of — Not repugnant to S. 126. See T. P. Act (1882), S. 28. AIR 1957 Trav-Co 167 (DB).

——S. 126—Gift — Enjoyment of profits postponed till after death of donor — No right to revoke gift unless there was express reservation in that behalf in the deed itself. 1951 Ker L T 479 : AIR 1952 Trav-Co 47 (50) (Pt C) (Pr 10) (DB).

2. Agreement for revocation.

——Ss. 126, 31 and 123—Deed of gift and condition of revocation in separate documents — Effect. See T. P. Act (4 of 1882), S. 31. AIR 1951 All 599.

——S. 126 — Donee agreeing to maintain donor till death — Donee failing to maintain as per agreement —Donor can revoke the gift. 1965 M P L J (Notes) 59.

——S. 126—Gift—Donor reserving right of revocation — Such a clause is permissible. See Hindu Law — Religious Endowments—Alienation. AIR 1965 Orissa 201 (DB).

——S. 126—Revocability of Gift—Mistake of law.

Under S. 126 T. P. Act, a mistake of law is not a ground justifying the revocation of a gift. ILR (1950) Cut 374 : AIR 1951 Orissa 132 (136) (Pt G) (Pr 10) (DB).

——Ss. 126 and 11—Agreement for revocation.

Where under a gift-deed the doing unequivocally and unconditionally transfers all his rights over certain property to the donee with absolute powers to deal with the same from the date of gift, a subsequent clause in the deed to the effect that on the death of the donee the property shall not devolve on any of her heirs but will revert to the donor will be repugnant to the absolute estate created in favour of the donee and to the legal incidents of such estate and as such the provision will be ineffective and wholly void. Such a provision cannot be said to be an agreement for the suspension or revocation of the gift within the meaning of S. 126. 1952 Ker L T 686 : AIR 1953 Trav-Co 115 (116) (Prs 2, 3).

3. Paragraph 2 — General.

——S. 126 — Contract Act (1872), Ss. 16 (1), (3) and 19-A — Gift under mental distress — Cancellation of gift is valid. (1964) 2 Andh L T 405 : AIR 1966 Andh Pra 104 (105 to 107) (Prs 2, 5, 8).

——S. 126 — Gift deed by old illiterate widow in favour of her only relation — Sufficient to raise presumption as to undue influence—Burden of proof is on donee to prove that donor exercised independent will — Contract Act (1872), Ss. 16 and 19A. AIR 1951 Him Pra 54 (54, 55) (Pt A) (Prs 5, 6).

——S. 126 — Voluntary gift by child to parent — Presumption of undue influence arises — Onus lies on donee not only to prove that donor was emancipated but also that he had acted independently. See Contract Act (1872), S. 16. AIR 1961 Mad 190 (DB).

——S. 126 — Mere mistake of law —:No ground for revocation of gift. ILR (1950) Cut 374 : AIR 1951 Orissa 132 (136) (Pt G) (Pr 10) (DB).

——S. 126 — Setting aside gift deed on ground of undue influence—(Contract Act (1872), S. 19-A).

Where a gift is challenged on the ground of undue influence, it is necessary for the donee to prove that the gift was the result of the free exercise of independent will. The most obvious way to prove this is by establishing that the gift was made after the nature and effect of the transaction had been fully explained to the donor by some independent and qualified person so completely as to satisfy the Court that the donor was acting independently of any influence from the donee and with the full appreciation of what he was doing. 1949 T C L R 172, Foll. AIR 1954 Trav-Co 407 (417) (Pt A) (Pr 46) (DB).

4. Save as aforesaid a gift cannot be revoked—Paragraph 3.

——S. 126—Revocation of gift—Registration—Subsequent sale-deed —Effect — (Registration Act (1908), S. 47).

A completed gift which has been subsequently registered cannot be revoked by a registered sale-deed executed after the gift but before its registration. 1954 All W R (HC) 108 : A I R 1954 All 595 (597) (Pt B) (Prs 6, 8).

——S. 126 — Gift subject to condition that donee should maintain donor — Gift cannot be revoked for neglect to maintain donor. 1956 Andhra W R 632 : AIR 1956 Andhra 195 (197) (Pt B) (Pr 9).

——S. 126—Unconditional gift in consideration of donee maintaining donor—Failure of consideration—Gift cannot be revoked. See Hindu Law—Gift. A I R 1962 Him Pra 4.

——S. 126—Gift of property to wife and children—Subsequent sale by settlor of some items of property absolutely to eldest son for conveniently discharging settlor's debt and not in exercise of the power of revocation which settlor reserved to himself under gift deed. See Marumakkathayam Law — Gift. AIR 1957 Ker 81 (DB).

——S. 126—Deed of gift reciting that on failure of donee to maintain donor, he would have right to take back property—Donee held to have fulfilled condition — Revocation of gift by donor not valid. 1960 M P L J (Notes) 9.

——Ss. 126, 122—Gift subject to condition that donee should maintain donor — Gift cannot be revoked for failure of donee to maintain donor. AIR 1962 Orissa 130 (131) (Pr 6).

——S. 126—Conditions to be performed by donee provided for in gift deed after operative portion — Conditions held pious wishes of donor but did not give him right to revoke on non-observance of these conditions. See Hindu Law — Gift. AIR 1955 N U C (Trav-Co) 1046 (DB).

——S. 126—Gift with a condition—Validity

Where the operative portion of a deed of gift is followed by a direction that the donee should continue to be subservient to donor as she used to be, it is only a pious wish of the donor and not a condition and the deed operates as a complete and irrevocable gift. I L R (1953) Trav-Co 1121 : AIR 1954 Trav-Co 348 (351) (Pt C) (Pr 10).

SECTION 127

——S. 127—Gift — Gift of undivided share by a coparcener in favour of his minor wife and mother burdened with obligation to pay maintenance to donor cannot be held to be void ab initio. See Hindu Law—Gift. AIR 1957 Audh Pra 1012 (DB).

——S. 127—Sole proprietor executing leases in favour of a minor son represented by mother as guardian before date of vesting — Leases are really gifts with obligation to pay rent—Not void. See Tenancy Laws —Madhya Pradesh Abolition of Proprietary Rights (Estates Mahals, Alienated Lands) Act (1 of 1851), S. 3(1). 1964 Jab L J 575.

——S. 127—Gift followed by direction to donee to maintain donor—Effect of such direction.

Where there is an out and out transfer by way of gift followed by a direction to the donee to maintain the donor the latter direction is only a pious wish and not a condition. It will not give any right to the donor to revoke the gift if the conditions are not observed. 2 T L J 105; 23 T L J 637, Rel. on. 1951 Ker L Tim 479 : A I R 1952 Trav-Co 47 (49) (Pt B) (Pr 7) (DB).

——S. 128—Gift not of whole property does not make a universal donee.

Where under the deed of gift A gifted to B a 1/54th share of the property and he remained owner of the 1/54th share that he had purchased, the fact that B got his name mutuated over the entire 1/27th share would not make him a universal donee. AIR 1954 All 770 (771) (Pt A) (Pr 4) (DB).

——S. 128—Universal donee is a 'legal representative' of the deceased testator — Decree against the donor prior to his death—Decree holder can proceed against property in the hands of donee in execution of his decree — Fresh suit for establishing such right not necessary. See Civil P. C. (1908), S. 2(11). AIR 1964 Mad 78.

——S. 128—Universal donee — Widow owning stridhana property as well as limited interest in her husband's estate—Surrender by the widow of properties in favour of her daughter—Donor's whole property is not transferred — Donee not liable for the debts of the donor. 1961 Mad W N 54 : (1962) 1 Mad L J 224 : AIR 1961 Mad 291 (292) (Prs 4, 5, 6).

——S. 128—"Valuable consideration" — Acceptance of liability by donee to discharge debt of donor and to maintain him for lifetime out of profits and income of property transferred, is not valuable consideration—Condition of quid pro quo is satisfied. AIR 1925 Oudh 28; 30 Mad L J 415, Doubted, See Provincial Insolvency Act (1920), S. 53. AIR 1955 Pat 458 (DB).

——S. 128—Plaint basing liability of defendants as "universal donee" — It cannot be said that no plea under S. 128, T. P. Act was raised in pleading and that therefore no liability can be fastened on defendant under S. 128. See Civil P. C. (1908), O. 6, R. 2. 1962 Raj L W 455.

——S. 128—Act not in force in Marwar when gift took place—Principle of section applied.

The principle which S. 128 enunciates saddles a universal donee with an obligation to pay the debts and liabilities of the donor to the extent of the property received by the donee. This doctrine in essence appears to be an extension of the principle of the maxim "Qui sensit commodum debet et sentire onus", he who receives the advantage ought also to suffer the burden. The rule embodied in S. 128 is not a rule of mere legal technicality but is based on canons of natural justice, morality and public policy.

The principle applies to gift which took place before the Act was applied in Marwar. 1962 Raj L W 455.

——S. 128—Principle of section applies to liabilities also—Sale of property by donor—Vendee paying consideration — Donor gifting away all his property subsequently — Sale set aside after gift — Liability of donor to pay back the consideration arose before the date of the gift when he took the sale price regardless of the fact when the sale was set aside and the same passed on to the universal donee. 1962 Raj L W 455.

——S. 128 — Suit on hypothecation against father alone — Before suit property gifted in favour of sons —Sons held to be universal donees — Decree against father — Pending execution father dying — Creditor decree-holder cannot execute decree against donee — Civil P. C. S. 52. 1951 Ker L Tim 453 : ILR (1951) Trav-Co 357 : A I R 1952 Trav-Co 23 (26, 27, 28) (Pt A) (Prs 12, 13, 18) (DB).

——S. 129 — Gift by a Muhammadan to a Hindu — Revocation of — Law applicable — Personal law of donor applies. See Letters Patent (All), Cl. 14. A I R 1963 All 469.

——S. 129—Gift by a Muhammadan — Property subject to the usufructuary mortgage — Gift by deed is valid. See T. P. Act (1882), S. 123. A I R 1955 All 255.

● ——S. 129—Oral gift by muslim lady—Subsequent document evidencing transaction executed as ekrarnama — Test to decide whether amounts to deed of gift — Document held a gift deed liable to stamp duty and registration. See Registration Act (1908), S. 17. A I R 1962 Andh Pra 199 (FB).

——S. 129 — Gift by Muhammadan—S. 123 does not apply—Registration is necessary if reduced to writing. See T. P. Act (1882), S. 123. AIR 1955 N U C (Andh Pra) 3607.

——Ss. 129 and 130—Estate Duty Act, 1953 (Central Act 35 of 1953) S. 9—Gift by Mahomedan—Is complete on execution of instrument — Non-acceptance by donee—Does not render gift inoperative.

That S. 130 of the T. P. Act, is a specific provision dealing with a transfer of an actionable claim, including a gift of an actionable claim, and it must prevail and override the provisions of the Mohamedan Law. Under the section if the gift of an actionable claim is effected by the execution of an instrument in writing signed by the transferor, such transfer shall become complete and effectual upon the execution of such instrument. The requirements of the Mohamedan Law as to the declaration, acceptance and delivery of gifts are not necessary in the case of a gift of an actionable claim effected under S. 130. An instrument in writing under S. 130 need not be, and is not required to be, in any particular form, and should not be construed in as strict a manner as a Court would do a deed of conveyance, and so long as the intention of the donor to give a gift is made manifest in the instrument in writing, it would be sufficient. Under S. 130 there can be a valid transfer of a part of an actionable claim. ——S. 129—Transfer of immoveable property in lieu of dower — It is a simple gift and formalities laid down in S. 123 not applicable — (Muhammaden Law — Marriage — Dower). See T. P. Act (1882), S. 54. A I R 1952 Hyd 3 (DB).

——S. 129—Gift — Essentials—Delivery—Gift of immovable property registered — Registration cannot dispense with delivery of possession under Mahomedan Law. See Mahomedan Law. A I R 1960 Madh-Pra 260.

——S. 129 — Gift — Delivery of possession—Onus — Recital in deed of gift by deceased that possession is delivered — Onus is on persons claiming under deceased, that no delivery took place (Evidence Act (1872), Ss. 17, 18, 19 and 101-104). See Mahomedan Law. A I R 1958 Mad 527.

——S. 129—Gift—Delivery of possession—Donor and donee living jointly in house, the subject matter of donation — Donor need not remove himself from house in order that gift might be operative. See Mahomedan Law. A I R 1958 Mad 527.

(Transfer of Property Act (1882), S. 130.)

1. Scope.
2. "Transfer".
3. Assignment of rents and profits.
4. Assignment of part of debt.
5. Transfer by operation of law.
6. Form of assignment.
7. No particular words are necessary to constitute assignment.
8. Registration not necessary.
9. Agreement between debtor and creditor that debts would be paid from a fund in the hands of third person, if assignment.
10. Completeness of transfer and notice to debtor.
11. Transfer of mortgage debt.
12. All rights and remedies of the transferor shall rest in the transferee.
13. Sub-section (2).
14. Exception.

1. Scope.

● ——S. 130 — Debt arising in foreign country — Is property and actionable claim — It has no location except notionally under arbitrary rules—Determination of legal liability raises complex questions of private international law — Two distinct lines of thought (i) Lex situs and (ii) proper law of contract. Applicability of lex situs and (ii) proper law of contract dismissed. See Constitution of India, Art. 51. A I R 1955 S C 590.

● ——S. 130 — Judgment debt — Transfer — Debt is property — It is a chose in action and heritable and assignable. See T. P. Act (1882), S. 3. A I R 1955 S C 376 (1).

——Ss. 130, 3 and 6 — Assignment of debt as part of assets of firm to one of partners—It is not transfer of actionable claim — S. 130 is not applicable to such case. A I R 1964 All 15 (16) (Pt B) (Pr 7).

——S. 130 — Right to purchase shares or an option to do so is assignable and can be attached. See Civil P. C. (1908), S. 60 (1). 69 Cal W N 815 : A I R 1966 Cal 134.

——S. 130 — Conditional assignment of policy — Validity and effect of — (Insurance Act (1938), S. 38 (7)).

Before the enactment of S. 38, Insurance Act, transfer of a life insurance policy constituting as it did, an actionable claim was governed by S. 130, T. P. Act.

The effect of an assignment is, it operates to completely divest the assignor of any right under it, and the effect of the condition is only to make the assignment inoperative upon the subsequent happening of either of the two contingencies. (1955) 25 Com Cas (Ins) 7 : A I R 1955 Mad 459 (460) (Pt A) (Pr 4).

——S. 130 — Scope — Assignment of document and negotiability of instrument compared — Negotiable Instruments Act S. 14.

Per Hidayatullah, C. J. — An assignment creates rights 'in rem' destroys the rights of stoppage 'in transitu' and the assignee of the document of title to goods becomes an owner of the goods and can even give a better title than he possesses. But though a holder in due course can give a discharge, he cannot give a better title than he himself possesses. The negotiability by assignment as such is different but it is a kind of negotiability nevertheless. 1956 Nag L J 791 : 1956 M P L J 215 : A I R 1957 Nag 31 (41) (Pt C) (Pr 67) (DB).

——S. 130 — Assignment of actionable claim (debt) and pay order — Distinction—Words and Phrases—Pay order.

The consequences of a pay order and an assignment of an actionable claim (debt) are not same in law. In the case of pay order the liability of the party on whom the pay order is given continues towards the maker of the pay order if he does not pay as desired, but in the case of an assignment, the assignee becomes, entitled as of right to the payment. Again, a pay order is revocable but not so an assignment. Yet again, a pay order fails on the death of a drawer but an assignment does not. 1962 Raj L W 588 : I L R (1962) 12 Raj 925.

An assignment in a law is an act by which one person transfers to another or causes to vest in another his right or title to something before the object of the transfer has become property in possession of the assignor. It is the transfer or setting over the right to fruits of cause of action from one person to another.

A valid and enforceable contract of assignment comes into being when it is executed by parties possessing legal capacity to contract, when it is supported by consideration, when it is not contrary to law or to public policy, when it is not tainted with fraud or illegality and when it is not the result of an agreement between the assignor and the assignee that they shall divide the property sued for between them in consideration of the assignee carrying on the suit in his own name and possibly a'so at his own expense. A person who wishes to obtain a decree on the basis of a deed of assignment must allege and prove a valid assignment in order to show that he had a cause of action.

Held, on the evidence on record, that the assignment was champertous and not supported by any consideration. 59 Punj L R 361 : I L R (1957) Punj 1555 : AIR 1958 Punj 52 (53) (Pt A) (Pr 3).

A, a bank, started an overdraft account in B's name in order to finance B in carrying out certain military contracts. B executed a power of attorney in A's favour, authorising A to collect all bills and to receive all payments in respect of the contract. A copy of the power of attorney was sent to and was duly noticed by the military authorities. On finding that certain amount due under a bill on which B had obtained overdraft facility, was paid directly to B, in spite of the repeated demand for it by A, A sued both B and the Union of India claiming that a charge was created with respect to the bills under S. 130, in favour of the holder of the power of attorney who became an assignee and the Government, as a debtor was bound to pay to A, the assignee, after the express notice.

Held, (1) that the authority to collect the bills did not ipso facto signify that the power to collect those bills no longer remained with B.

(2) that the power of attorney was not irrevocable,

(3) that no charge was created or assignment made in favour of the bank and there was therefore no legal obligation on the part of the military authorities or the Government to pay up the sum covered by the

The giving of notice of assignment of actionable claim to the debtor is not essential to effectuate an assignment, but where no such notice is given, the debtor cannot be expected to attorn to the assignee, and if, in ignorance of the assignment, he pays the debt to the assignor, the assignee can have no remedy against the debtor. 1962 Raj L W 588 : I L R (1962) 12 Raj 925.

—Ss. 130, 131 — Notice of transfer of actionable claim.

—S. 130—Completeness of transfer.

The words "shall be complete and effectual upon the execution of such instrument" mean that it takes effect from the execution of the instrument irrespective of the notice to the debtor so far as the transferor and the transferee are concerned. It does not mean that the assignment once having been executed cannot be challenged on grounds, including want of consideration, on which any other contract can be impeached. 1950 Raj L W 284 : AIR 1951 Raj 74 (77) (Pt E) (Pr 20) (DB).

12. "All rights and remedies of the transferor shall vest in the transferee."

—Ss. 130, 3 and 6 — Assignment of rights under contract.

In order that an assignment should be effective all the interest of the assignor under the contract must be transferred and conveyed to the assignee. The only question that the Court has to consider with regard to assignments is whether if the debtor paid the assignee, he would get a complete and proper discharge.

A's contract with B, as sole proprietor of A and sons—Assignment of benefits under the contract by A to C does not affect B's liability to pay A and in law to pay his assignee C—B cannot plead against C's claim on the ground that since the assignment was made by A as Karta the other co-parceners of the joint family may make claim against him contending that the assignment was not made for the benefit or legal necessity of the family, and that therefore, he apprehended that by paying the assignee he could not get a complete discharge — The apprehension is baseless because the co-parceners having no privity of contract with him could not sue B under the contract. 55 Bom L R 901 : ILR (1954) Bom 424 : (1954) 25 I T R 207 : AIR 1954 Bom 167 (170) (Pt B) (Pr 7) (DB).

—S. 130 — Assignment of railway receipt — Effect of.

There is no particular mode of assignment prescribed by the statute. The rights and benefits arising out of a contract of carriage of goods can be transferred in any manner. The only thing to be considered is whether the intention of the transferor to transfer the rights is made clear by the mode adopted. An unqualified endorsement on a railway receipt by the consignee to the effect that the goods consigned should be delivered to the endorsee indicates such an intention. 1956 Nag L J 791 : 1956 M P L J 215 : AIR 1957 Nag 31 (45) (Pt F) (Pr 97) (DB).

——Ss. 130, 134—Assignment of actionable claim — Effect.

The very moment a transfer of actionable claim has taken place by the execution of an instrument of transfer, the rights and remedies of the transferor become vested in the transferee, and then the transferor, as it were, gets out of the picture and it is the transferee who takes his place and then is competent to sue the third party in his own name without making the transferor a party thereto. But the assignee takes the actionable claim subject to all the liabilities and equities to which the transferor was subject in respect of it at the date of the transfer. The plea of his being a bona fide transferee without notice cannot avail him. 1962 R L W 588 : ILR (1962) 12 Raj 925.

See Negotiable Instruments Act (1881), S. 51. AIR 1954 Mad 820.

—S. 137—'Document of title' — Railway receipt—Assignability—Railways Act (1890), S. 72 — Sale of Goods Act (1830), S. 2 (4).

Per Hidayatullah C. J. — Whenever a new document is used to base a suit, the question arises and the Courts try to find out (a) if it is a document of title in goods, i.e., a negotiable document, or (b) whether in the ordinary course of business it is regarded as so negotiable. However, if a document has received recognition in the law as a document assignable by endorsement or delivery, the question cannot arise. The railway receipt is so named in the Sale of Goods Act, the Transfer of Property Act, the Railways Act and the Factories Act. 1956 Nag L J 791 : 1956 M P L J 215 : AIR 1957 Nag 31 (41) (Pt B) (Pr 64) (DB).

——S. 137—Railway receipt—Mercantile document.

A railway receipt being a 'mercantile document of title to goods' the mode of assignment prescribed in S. 130 is not applicable to assignment of a contract of carriage of goods contained in a railway receipt. The assignee's rights are also not subject to equities. 1956 Nag L J 791 : 1956 M P L J 215 : AIR 1957 Nag 31 (44) (Pt E) (Pr 95) (DB).

——S. 137—Railway receipt by endorsement—Effect.

Per Tambe, J.—(Agreeing with Hidayatullah, C. J.) —The title to the railway receipt passes to the endorsee by endorsement and the endorsee has a right of action. A bona fide endorsee is not prejudiced by any defect in title of the assignor provided the endorsement is not obtained by practising fraud or forgery. The effect of S. 137, T. P. Act, is that a railway receipt is in effect clothed with all the essential characteristics of negotiability though it may not be a negotiable instrument in its strictest sense. 1956 Nag L J 791 : 1956 M P L J 215 : AIR 1957 Nag 31 (41, 46) (Pt H) (Prs 69, 107 to 109) (DB).

——Ss. 137 and 132 — Railway receipt having series of endorsements—Right of last endorsee to bring suit against railway—(Railways Act (1898), S. 72).

Per Tambe, J.—(Agreeing with Hidayatullah, C. J.) —Where there is a series of endorsements on the railway receipt the last endorsee can institute a suit in his own name, without proving that he is a holder for value, since that will be presumed unless rebutted. He can give a valid discharge to the carrier and thus sue and is not required to prove that all intervening transactions were bona fide and for value. Rule 46 is mandatory and has a statutory force. The importance of the explanation of the licensee for the excesssive wastage in spirit, and of the opinion thereon of a responsible officer-in-charge, stationed at the spot, is not to be disregarded, and though the account books and registers maintained are evidentiary of the quantity used, they are not conclusive as to liability for duty on excess quantity. Rules, dated 17th January, 1953, framed by His Highness the Rajpramukh under Travancore Abkari Act (4 of 1073) and under Cochin Abkari Act (1 of 1077) dealing with licence fee, gallonage fee and limit of quantity of liquor saleable at a time to non-licencees are ultra vires the rule making power and have the force of law as if enacted in the respective Acts. The provisions of Art. 265 of the Constitution that no tax shall be levied or collected except by authority of law are satisfied in this case as the rules, dated 17th January, 1953, constitute law within the meaning of that article.

Assuming that the freedom to practise any profession or to carry on any occupation, trade or business that the petitioners have under Cl. (1) (g) of Art. 19 extends to traffic in intoxicating liquors, the impugned rules are reasonable restrictions which could be imposed upon that freedom under Cl. (6) of that article.

All the tests mentioned in A I R 1953 Mad 476 by which the reasonableness of a restriction is measured, operate to uphold the impugned rules as the purposes of public security, public order, public health and public morality which are the ultimate objects to be achieved by prohibition and restrictions calculated to bring about a progressive reduction of the liquor traffic are steps in the right direction as they lead towards prohibition and are legitimate and necessary. ——S. 26—Rules (1953) framed under, R. 8—Deposit.

The deposit is only a security and must be there so long as the right and duty of collecting gallonage fee is on the licensee and cannot be released so long as the licence or any liability of the licensee subsists. ILR (1954) T C 806 : A I R 1954 Trav-Co 504 (510) (Pt D) (Pr 10) (DB).

——S. 26 (as amended by Act (6 of 1125) — Abkari Rules under — Selection of site for liquor shop — Restriction on—Validity of — Constitution of India, Arts. 13 (2) and 19.

In testing whether the restriction imposed by Abkari Rules (given in Cochin Excise Manual, Vol. 1, page 230, Clauses 1 and 2) namely, an unfettered discretion on the statutory body constituting the Administrative Head of the Excise Department to approve or not to approve a selected site for a liquor shop it cannot be forgotten that the property concerned is the property in an Excise licence and the trade or business is trade or business under that licence. Hence the interests of general public demand that there must be a controlling voice to decide where a liquor shop shall be located. It cannot, therefore, be held that the power conferred on the Board of Revenue is an unreasonable restriction on the exercise of any fundamental right and hence void. SECTION 39

——S. 39—Scope and object—Default of person executing bail bond to appear before Abkari Inspector —Procedure to be adopted—Cr. P. Code (5 of 1898), S. 514.

There is no provision in the Travancore Abkari Regulation for the Inspector to forfeit the bond. On the other hand provision is made enabling him to forward the bond to the Magistrate having jurisdiction to try the offence against the accused and S. 39 provides that in such a case the Magistrate may proceed to compel payment of the penalty in the manner provided in the Cr. P. Code treating the default of appearance before the Inspector as if the party had defaulted to appear in a case of a bond taken before him to appear before his own Court. The procedure which the Magistrate has to follow is prescribed in S. 514, Cr. P. Code. (1965) M L J (Cr) 833 (Ker) : 1964 (2) Cri L J 93.

——S. 39—Report by Inspector under S. 39 — Proper action by Magistrate is to forfeit bail bond under S. 514, Criminal P. C.

Section 39 of the Travancore Abkari Regulation is specifically introduced to meet a case of a person executing a bond before prohibition officers and failing to appear before them, and the intention of the legislature would appear to have been that the Magistrate should proceed in the same manner and with the same power as if the default had been made by a person bailed to appear before his own Court. Consequently, where a report under S. 39 is made by an Inspector to a magistrate the proper order is the forfeiture of bail bond under S. 514, Criminal P. C. SECTION 51

——Ss. 51 (a) and 54—Seizure of liquor — No provision in the Act or rules that liquor seized should be sent for chemical analysis — Excise Officer's opinion whether expert evidence—Evidentiary value.

There is no provision in the Travancore Abkari Act or the rules that the liquor should be sent for chemical analysis. The Excise Officers may be considered as experts on the question whether a certain liquid is illicit liquor or not. But before the Officer's opinion is accepted, the Court should ascertain the grounds on which his opinion is based so as to test it. The finding of a Court on the question whether a certain liquid is illicit or not, based on an Excise Officer's opinion cannot be said to be wrong for failure to chemically analyse the liquid as there is no provision in the Abkari Act or the rules thereunder that the liquor should be sent for chemical analysis. An Excise Officer is an expert on this particular question and a Court can accept it after ascertaining the grounds on which it is based. 1962 Ker L T 31 : 1962 Ker L J 9 : 1962-1 Ker L R 145 : ILR (1962) 1 Kerala 471.

SECTION 51A

——Ss. 51-A and 61—Conviction under — Confiscation of bottles and glasses — If part of punishment—'Confiscate'—If synonymous with 'forfeit'—Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 517.

A comparison of S. 61 of the Act and S. 517 of Cr. P. Code shows that confiscation is not a part of the sentence for an offence but is only one of the modes by which Courts can dispose of property which comes before it in criminal trials. Forfeiture unlike confiscation is not a mode of disposal of property coming before Courts in criminal trials but is an established form of punishment. It is recognised as such under S. 53, I. P. Code, which enumerates the difference that can be awarded under the Code. Hence to use the term 'confiscate' as synonymous with 'forfeit' is not quite correct. Where therefore, a Magistrate while awarding a sentence of fine under S. 51-A of the Act also ordered the confiscation of bottles and glasses it was held that the confiscation was not a part of the sentence and as such an appeal filed against the sentence was incompetent in view of S. 414 of Cr. P. Code. AIR 1954 All 642, Distinguished. 1961 Ker L J 125 : (1961) 1 Ker L R 223 : 1961 Ker L T 169 : ILR (1961) 1 Ker 374.

TRAVANCORE AGRICULTURAL INCOME-TAX ACT (1 of 1119 M E)

——S. 7 (2) (c) — Travancore Income-tax Act (23 of 1121), S. 14 (3) (c) — Immature plants — Expenses on maintenance of whether allowable.

It is impossible to include within the expression 'the expenses of cultivating the crop from which such agricultural income is derived' the expenses incurred by the assessee on the maintenance of plants which were immature and had not begun to yield. 'Such agricultural income' in the section must mean agricultural income from which the deduction is claimed and 'the expenses of cultivating the crop' must mean the expenditure on the mature trees from which that income was earned. The word 'crop' does not mean the plantation as a whole or an adventure in agriculture but the produce itself that yielded the income. For a deduction to be permissible as far as agricultural income is concerned it is not enough if the expenditure was not in the nature of capital expenditure and was in respect of the agricultural operations of the assessee during the accounting year. It must be far more intimately related—so related as to form a link in the claim of causation to the crop that earned the profits or gains which form the basis of the assessment. AIR 1921 Bom 391, Disting. ILR (1954) Trav-Co 1290 : 1955 K L T 360 : AIR 1956 Trav-Co 17 (17, 18) (Prs 3, 5) (DB).

——S. 7 (2) (c) and (g) — Permissible deduction — Expenses incurred for replantation of trees.

As regards agricultural income, both in respect of computation as also in respect of deductions, the provisions of the Travancore Agricultural Income-tax Act, 1119, constitute the sole guide which have, therefore, to be applied regardless of hardship, principles of business or any other consideration. (1869) L R 4 H L 100, Foll.

There is no place in the scheme adumbrated in the said Act, for any replantation or any expenditure in respect of such a process. The Act no doubt authorises deductions of the expenses of cultivating the crop from which agricultural income is derived. This, however, does not include the expenses of replantation. Where, therefore, an amount spent by the assessee represents the expenditure incurred for replanting a portion of the estate, a portion on which yielding trees were standing originally the amount is not a permissible deduction under S. 7. 1952 Ker L T 453 : ILR (1953) Trav-Co 221 : AIR 1953 Trav-Co 14 (16, 17) (Prs 3, 4, 5) (DB).

——S. 11—Arbitration without intervention of Court —Award—Application under repealed provisions of O. 39, R. 20, Tr. C. P. C. for filing award in Court and passing decree thereon—Petition can be treated as a suit for passing decree in terms of award — S. 11 does not affect such right — (Arbitration Act (1940), Ss. 14 (2) and 17.)

In an arbitration without the intervention of the Court an award was made by the Arbitrator and it was accepted by all the parties. Subsequently however one of the parties raised objections to the award and thereupon the petitioner filed an application under O. 39, R 20, Tr. Civil P. C. for giving notice to the arbitrator for filing the award in Court and then passing a decree thereon. This application was made when the provisions of O. 39, Rr. 17 to 21 had been repealed by S. 3, Travancore Arbitration Act 11 of 1115. The petition was tried as a suit and at the stage of argument the defendants contended that as the petition was filed under O. 39, R. 20, C. P. C. which was repealed it was not maintainable and that under S. 11 (2) of the Arbitration Act (11 of 1115) the plaintiff had no right to approach the Court in the first instance to cause the award to be filed in Court and to enforce it without first requesting the arbitrators to file the award. The Court accepted the contention and dismissed the suit. The plaintiff appealed.

Held, that when an award is produced in Court under S. 11, the Court has only to hear objections as provided for in the subsequent sections and pass an order to have it filed in Court. No decree on the same need be passed and the award itself could be executed as if it is a decree; but the provisions in Act 11 of 1115 do not take away the rights of a party to file a suit to enforce the award, so that a decree could be passed by the Court on the basis of the award. 1947 T L R 799 and A I R 1926 Cal 938, Rel. on.

Virtually, the plaintiffs' petition was to have a decree passed on the award, which the Court could have done, even if it found that the petition filed quoting the repealed provisions of the Civil Procedure Code was not maintainable. The plaintiff must therefore be allowed to treat their petition as a plaint and continue the suit after paying the necessary Court-fees in the Court below. AIR 1952 Trav-Co 540 (541) (Pr 2) (DB).

TRAVANCORE CHILD MARRIAGE RESTRAINT ACT (21 of 1116 M. E.)

——S. 11 — Marriage below age prescribed by Act is not invalid — Absence of notification under S. 11 exempting such marriage makes no difference—Marriage once duly solemnised, although without consent of guardian, is valid—Plea about want of guardian's consent cannot be allowed for first time in Letters Patent Appeal.

Contravention of the provisions of the Act does not render marriage in Travancore-Cochin invalid. A marriage below the age prescribed in the Act is not rendered invalid by any of the provisions in the Act and the fact that such marriages have not been exempted by the Government by issuing a notification as provided by S. 11 has not the effect of rendering such marriages invalid. So also, a marriage once performed and solemnised is a valid marriage though it be without the consent of the guardian. When no objection about the want of guardian's consent is raised in the trial Court or in the appeal from its decision, it is to be presumed that the marriage took place with the guardian's consent, specially when it is raised after a long interval at the stage of Letters Patent Appeal. In any case, the defendant, not having raised the plea earlier, cannot be allowed to raise it for the first time at the stage of a Letters Patent Appeal. 76 Mad L W 737 : ILR (1964) 1 Mad 273 : (1964) 2 Mad L J 334 : A I R 1964 Mad 237 (238) (Pt B) (Prs 5, 6) (DB).

Former F of a chitty was a debtor to a non-prized subscriber N who had obtained a decree therefor. F obtained a decree against a prized subscriber in arrears on the footing of a security bond executed by that subscriber D. F assigned it immediately to S a third party. N attached the decree so assigned to S. The heirs of S applied in execution against D and notice was served on N who opposed it. The executing Court and the appellate Courts held the assignment was without consideration but dismissed N's objections. On appeal, Held: Under S. 36 the chitty assets of the foreman must first be applied to the chitty debts due by the foreman. The object of the provision is that the chitty assets should be made available for payment of prized and non-prized subscribers.

Section 28 (1) of Chitties Act provides the transfers of the rights of the foreman against the prized subscribers shall be voidable at the instance of a non-prized subscriber and sub-s. (2) throws on the transferee the burden of proving that such transfer was not intended to defeat and delay the claim of a non-prized subscriber.

The assignment of the assets of the chitty by the foreman F to S for no consideration, when there was a decree against him for a claim by a non-prized subscriber N is void as against N.

It is not necessary for N to file a separate suit to avoid the transfer. 1952 Ker L T 697 : AIR 1952 T C 497 (498) (Pr 2) (DB).

——Ss. 6 and 7 — Distinction between Ss. 6 and 7—Chitty transaction of less than hundred rupees in value — Default of foreman in obtaining licence — Liability of foreman for prize money.

Where chitty transactions to which S. 6 applies are forbidden by law, those under S. 7 are not. Hence the default of foreman in obtaining a licence to conduct the chitty under S. 7 will not secure him immunity from liability to pay prize money is a chitty of less than one hundred rupees. 1952 Ker L T 593 : AIR 1953 Trav-Co 44 (45) (Pr 3).

SECTION 7

——S. 7 — Distinction between Ss. 6 and 7 — Chitty transaction of less than hundred rupees in value — Default of foreman in obtaining licence—Liability of foreman for prize money — Default in obtaining licence will not secure him immunity from liability to pay prize money in such a case as transactions under S. 7 are not forbidden by law — (Contract Act (1872), S. 23). SECTION 17

——Ss. 17 (1), 19 (2) — Travancore Chitties Rules, R. 44 — Banker and customer — Foreman of chitty depositing amounts in bank — Bank undertaking to pay interest — Liquidation of bank — Foreman of chitty, whether entitled to preferential payment—Nature of relationship between banker and depositor and creditor.

The appellant, the foreman of a chitty, made certain deposits in a bank in pursuance of Ss. 17 (1) and 19 (2) of the Travancore Chitties Act, 1120. When the bank went into liquidation the question arose whether the appellant was entitled to preferential payment with regard to such deposits :

Held, that the relationship between banker and customer is a contractual one; and normally it is one of debtor and creditor with no right to any preferential payment. In order to sustain a claim for preferential payment and an abrogation of the healthy rule that equality is equity, it has to be established that the relationship was not that of a debtor and creditor. It has to be established that the bank, in a given case, was something else; for example a bailee or a trustee, and not a mere debtor to its customer. The deposits under Ss. 17 and 19 of the Travancore Chitties Act, 1120; are no doubt deposits for a special purpose. But that by itself will not sustain a claim for preferential payment. The presumption is that when a bank receives money it is intended that the bank should use the money; and the burden is on the depositor to show that the understanding was different. There is nothing on record to show that the money deposited was not intended to be used as a part of the general assets of the bank. Therefore even though the deposits were made for a special purpose, they were general deposits creating only the relationship of debtor and creditor and were not entitled to any preferential payment. The bank was neither a bailee nor a trustee. If a general deposit is properly made by a trustee in his name as trustee, the bank does not become a trustee of the money but a debtor to the trustee. The trustee becomes a creditor of the bank and holds his claim against the bank in trust for the beneficiaries of the trust. The bank is as free to use the money deposited by a trustee as it is to use any other funds which are placed on general deposit with it. Where a bank undertakes to pay interest on the deposit, it is clearly the intention of the parties that the bank should have the use of the money and that it becomes a debtor and not a trustee. 1965 Ker L J 60 : (1965) 1 Com L J 103 (Ker).

——Ss. 17 (1), 19 (2)—Deposits under—Nature of—Foreman depositing money to bank — Banks undertaking to repay debt only with Chitty — Registrar's consent — Bank does not become trustee — Banker and Customer—Trusts Act (1882), S. 94.

Deposits under S. 19 (2) are ordinary deposits in current account. If the money cannot be paid owing to the prize winner's default the foreman is bound by S. 19 to invest the money in an approved bank mentioned in the variola instead of keeping it himself so that it can be withdrawn and paid to the prize winner when the default ceases, and that the foreman is not to withdraw the money for any other purpose. The words, 'purposes other than those for which the same has been held in deposit' refer to the purposes for which the foreman holds the money in the shape of the bank deposit.

On money being invested in a bank, the relationship created between the investor and the bank is that of a mere creditor and debtor. Even if the bank knew that the depositor occupied a position akin to that of a trustee and is bound to apply the money in a particular way, the only duty cast on the bank is that it should not be a party to a breach of trust as, for example, by knowingly paying the money for a personal purpose of the depositor : A I R 1962 S C 1764, A I R 1940 Mad 178 and (1940) 2 M L J 559 : AIR 1941 Mad 48, Foll.

Deposits under S. 17 (1) are interest bearing fixed deposits in the foreman's name on the face of them no different from any ordinary fixed deposit. A fixed deposit, like any other deposit, is only a loan, although for a stated term, and like any other deposit, the relationship it creates between the depositor and the bank is, in the absence of a special arrangement whether express or implied, impressing it with the character of a trust, that of an ordinary debtor and creditor. The essence of the matter is whether the deposit is a species of trust.

Where the depositor, a foreman of a chit fund lends money to the bank and the bank at his request or at the request of the Chitty Registrar or both gives an undertaking to the Chitty Registrar that the debt will be repaid only with the Chitty Registrar's consent, the fact that the depositor gives the debt due to him as security to a third party or the bank's undertaking not to pay the depositor without the consent of a third party cannot make the bank a trustee for its creditor. There being no agreement by the bank to hold the money as an agent or stakeholder for the purpose of satisfying the Chitty security bond, the Bank does not become trustee of the depositor. The bond executed by the foreman under S. 17 (1) in favour of or in trust for the subscribers of the chitty for the proper conduct thereof gives the deposit with the bank as security. It is duly stamped and amounts to a mortgage of the debt due under the deposit as contemplated by S. 134, read with S. 130 of the Transfer of Property Act. (1963) 2 Com L J 51 : 1963 Ker L J 788 : (1963) 33 Com Cas 922 : 1963 Ker L T 611.

Where the bank running a Chitty subjected its property to a charge in favour of two of the subscribers to the Chitty to be held in trust for the subcribers to the Chitty, the Bank is in no way a trustee of the property for the Chitty subscribers but is a beneficial owner of the property. It is the two subscribers and not the Bank that are trustees. The Chitty subscribers are merely in the position of secured creditors and must work out their rights in the winding-up proceedings. 1959 Ker L T 1237 : 1960 Ker L J 143 : (1960) 30 Com Cas 135 : I L R (1960) Ker 597 : A I R 1960 Ker 243 (245) (Pt D) (Pr 9).

The money due from a prized subscriber to the chitty is undoubtedly a chitty asset, and on this asset the chitty creditor have a charge. It is their security, and under S. 28 (6) of the Kerala Insolvency Act the bankruptcy of the foreman does not affect their power to realise the security. Therefore the winding-up of a company which is a foreman should not affect the power and the chitty creditors are entitled to insist that the liquidator, acting on their behalf, should realise the security in full without any deduction by way of set off in respect of a liability of the company by which they are in no way bound. TRAVANCORE CHRISTIAN GUARDIANSHIP ACT (11 of 1116 M. E.)

PREAMBLE

——Pre—Retrospective effect—Paternal uncle.

Right to guardianship of the property of minor must be rested on an order of Court or on some personal law. A person deriving authority in this manner would be a de jure guardian. So far as the Christian Community in the Travancore State is concerned there is no written personal law or any uniform custom as regards the position of the paternal uncle as guardian before the Travancore Act 2 of 1116. The Act is not a declaratory Act and has no retrospective effect. Hence the paternal uncle is incompetent to alienate the interest of the minors and such an alienation is absolutely void. 1951 Ker L T 223 : ILR (1951) Trav Co 150 : AIR 1951 Trav Co 118 (121) (Pt B) (Pr 9) (FB).

● ——S. 3 — Christians governed by Hindu law in matters of succession — Intestacy occurring before Act — Widow succeeding — Death of widow after Act—Effect.

Where in the case of Indian Christians governed in the matter of succession by the priniples of Hindu law, intestacy has occurred long before 1092, when the Travancore-Cochin Succession Act (2 of 1092), came into force, the provisions of the Act have no application. In this case it was held that even if intestacy is considered to have occurred after the coming into force of the Act, on the death of the widow who had succeeded to the widow's estate upon the death of the last full owner before the Act and that therefore the Act applied, it would make no difference, since the person succeeding after the widow under the Act would be the same as the person who would succeed, if intestacy is considered to have occurred before the Act upon the death of the last full owner. 2 Trav L T 574 : 25 Trav L J 708, Foll. 1944 Trav L R 595, Not foll. SECTION 14

——S. 14 — Nature of widow's interest in husband's properties—Life interest over one half of immovable property—No right of alienation—She has no right to represent estate of deceased husband.

The position of a widow under the Christian Succession Act is entirely different from the position of a widow under the Hindu Law. So far as a Hindu widow is concerned, the property becomes vested in her, and for the time being she is the full owner thereof, although her interest is characterised as a limited estate but a Christian widow, inheriting under the Christian Succession Act gets only a life interest over one-half of the immovable property left by the deceased and the right terminates on her death or remarriage. She has no right to alienate the property as such although it is open to her to transfer her life-interest. In the case of Christians there is no question of the estate of a deceased being represented by one of the legal representatives. ● ——Ss. 17, 19, 24, 25 and 30 — Roman Catholic Christians—Succession.

Sections 17 and 19 of the Christian Succession Act read together show that the husband is a legal heir of his deceased wife and that he would be entitled to a one-half share of the wife's properties. Section 25 prescribes that the residue will be divided among the heirs of the different groups mentioned there according to the preference laid down in the section. The limitation that the wife or the husband inheriting the other spouse's properties shall only have a life interest is provided in S. 24, but that section is by S. 30, specifically not made applicable to the Roman Catholic Christians of the Latin Rite inhabiting the taluks mentioned in the section. While the husband was therefore entitled absolutely to a one-half share the other half share alone devolved on other heirs. Prakasi Gomez v. ——Ss. 17 and 24—Widow succeeding to intestate—Reversioners after her death—Position of — Heirs of last owner take vested interest — Position under Hindu Law discussed—(Hindu Law—Reversioners) —(Hindu Law—Widow's estate).

Under the Hindu Law, a reversioner cannot be said to have a vested right in the property taken by the widow of the last owner. The right of a reversionary heir expectant on the death of a Hindu widow is a 'spes successionis' and is not transferable or attachable property. A widow's estate under the Hindu Law is not a mere life estate. The widow is the owner of the property inherited by her, subject to certain restrictions on alienation and subject to its devolving upon the next heir of the last full owner upon her death. The whole estate is for the time vested in her, and she represents it completely. Case law Ref.

But the position of a widow under the Travancore Christians Succession Act is entirely different. Under S. 24 of the Act what the widow gets is only a life interest terminable at death or remarriage. She can only enjoy the property till her death or marriage. She has absolutely no power to alienate the property. In no sense, can she be said to be the owner of the property.

The persons who take the property on the termination of the life interest of the widow are those heirs of the original owner who are entitled to succeed to the estate on his death and not those who will be entitled to succeed to the estate at the time of the termination of the widow's life interest. This means that those who are the heirs of the original owner at the time of his death get a vested interest in the property subject to the life estate taken by the widow. If one of such heirs dies before the termination of the widow's life estate his right will devolve on his heirs. The right of a person who succeeds to an estate subject to a life interest created in favour of another is clearly not a mere 'spes successionis'. It is a vested interest and is transferable property. It is property which is capable of being attached and sold in execution of a decree. When the widow dies her life interest in the properties terminate and the auction purchasers become the full owners of the properties. I L R (1954) Trav-Co 442 : A I R 1955 Trav-Co 20 (22, 23) (Prs 6, 7, 8).

——Ss. 25 and 2—Applicability of Act — Hindu is entitled to succeed his Christian brother.

The Travancore Christian Succession Act applies to all cases of intestate succession to the property of an Indian Christian irrespective of the question whether the person who claims to succeed to the estate is a Christian or not. The fact that the Hindu Law disqualifies a Christian to inherit the property of a Hindu is no reason why a Hindu should not inherit the property of a Christian under the Christian Succession Act if that Act does not disqualify a Hindu from so inheriting. In deciding that question one ought not to be influenced by consideration of mutuality or reciprocity of the law. Thus, a Hindu Nadar, is entitled to succeed to the estate of his Christian brother who died intestate after the coming into force of the Travancore Christian Succession Act. ■ ——S. 30—Scope of — Custom of male and female sharing equally in intestate's properties — Essentials to be proved.

What S. 30 does is to grant an immunity from the operation of Ss. 24, 28 and 29 to all Roman Catholic Christians of the Latin Rite according to the customary usage among whom the male and female heirs of an intestate share equally in the property of the intestate. It follows that in order to obtain the immunity it is not enough if the plaintiff proves that she is a Roman Catholic Christian of the Latin Rite; she must also establish that she belongs to a class of Roman Catholic Christians of the Latin Rite among whom the usage specified does obtain. Residence in one of the taluks specifically mentioned in the section is not essential to obtain the immunity provided by the section. The words 'and other taluks' show that residence in any of the taluks of Travancore State will suffice. A. S. No. 381 of 1959 (Kerala), Approved. Kesava Kurup Kunjupillai Kurup v. ——S. 30—Applicability—Latin Christians of Quilon Taluk — Male and female heirs share equally — (Custom—Travancore-Cochin — Succession) — (Civil P. C. (1908), O. 6, R. 17).

Section 30 expressly recognises the customary usage among certain classes of the Roman Catholic Christians of the Latin rite in the taluks of Karunagapally, Quilon, Chirayinkil, Trivandrum and Nayyattinkara, of male and female heirs sharing equally the properties of the intestate and directs that nothing in the provisions of the Christian Succession Act relating to intestate succession should be deemed to affect the said custom.

Where therefore a suit for redemption brought by a purchaser of equity of redemption from a son of a Latin Christian female mortgagor was dismissed by the trial Court on the ground that according to the custom the plaintiff's transferor was not entitled to succeed to the assets of his mother, and at the appellate stage the plaintiff applied for leave to amend the plaint in order to convert the suit into one for partition and redemption of one-half of the plaint property.

Section 14 (d) of the Civil Courts Act (2 of 1084) requires that the Court must, before issuing process against immovable property, be satisfied that the judgment-debtor under a small cause decree had no personal property which can be proceeded against. The Court shall in all such cases record in its own hand-writing its reasons for doing so and in no case shall such execution be allowed unless the decree-holder supports his application by a verified statement as is provided for in the case of plaints under the Code of Civil Procedure. It may be that an affidavit of the decree-holder may be enough and a verified petition might not be essential. It may further be that a specific order of Court granting sanction to attach may not be necessary. But it is essential that the Court should be satisfied that the judgment-debtor has no sufficient personal property to satisfy the decree. 1957 Ker L T 174 : ILR (1957) Ker 267 : A I R 1957 Ker 74 (75) (Pr 4).

It is only by means of such evidence that the Courts can be assured of its existence and that it possesses the conditions of antiquity and certainty on which alone its legal title to recognition depends. 14 Moo Ind App 585, Followed.

Held, after considering the evidence and cases relied on by the plaintiffs that the custom pleaded by the plaintiffs had not been proved and therefore, the parties to the case being Hindus were governed by Hindu Mitakshara law, by virtue of S. 18, Travancore Civil Courts Act. 1960 Ker L T 1195 : ILR (1960) Ker 1366 : A I R 1961 Ker 149 (152, 153) (Prs 10, 14) (FB).

PREAMBLE

—Pre.—Scope—Retrospective effect.

The rules contained in Rules 104 and 105 of O. 21 were provisions regulating procedure. Hence they can have retrospective effect and will govern all pending proceedings, 1958 Ker L T 379.

—S. 8 (as amended by Act (25 of 1121))—Retrospective effect.

The amendment of the section has not in any way destroyed or curtailed the plaintiff's rights under the decree. His right to realise the decree amount from the judgment-debtor and his properties remains unaffected. But a change in the procedure to be followed in the matter of executing the decree has been affected by S. 8 as amended by Act 25 of 1121). It is a well-recognised principle that such changes in the law of procedure are retrospective in effect. Consistent with this principle it has to be held that the procedure prescribed by S. 8 as amended is applicable not only to proceedings in execution started after the amended section came into force but also to the execution proceedings which were initiated prior to the amendment of the section and which were pending on the date when the amendment came inte force. The Court could proceed with any application in furtherance of execution only if the required sanction was also produced along with the application. But the Court is not justified in totally rejecting the proclamation schedule filed by the decree-holder. The new procedure insisting on the production of Government sanction along with the application to proceed in execution against kandukrishy lands was brought into force during the pendency of the execution proceedings started in accordance with the procedure that was till then in force. In such a situation the decree-holder should have been allowed a reasonable time to obtain and produce the Government sanction as required by S. 8 and the case should have been adjourned for that purpose. The Travancore Civil Procedure Code has now been replaced by the Indian Civil Procedure Code which does not contain any provision similar to that contained in S. 8 of the Travancore Code. Thus the decree-holder is now entitled to proclaim and sell the attached properties for realising the decree amount due to him by following the procedure prescribed by the Indian Code and he is not obliged to produce any Government sanction in respect of kandukrishy lands. The judgment-debtor is not in any way prejudiced by the new situation brought about by the Indian Civil Procedure Code having been made applicable to the State of Travancore. A I R 1952 Trav-Co 357 (358) (Pr 2) (DB).

——S. 31 — Hypothecation bond containing stipulation that arrears of interest will be treated as principal and interest calculated thereon — Stipulation should not be treated as one for compound interest.

Plaintiffs cannot take advantrge of a provision that arrears of interest will also be treated as principal carrying interest, contained in the bond, so as to claim compound interest which is prohibited under law. No doubt, the parties are at liberty to enter into a contract that the interest due at the end of each year would be treated as a separate principal by itself carrying further interest at the stipulated rate. In such a case the amount due by way of arrears of interest for each year would be treated as a fresh loan. The necessary consequence is that the interest due on such amounts also will have to be limited to a moiety up to the date of the suit as per S. 31, Travancore Civil P. C. 1950 Ker L T 497 : A I R 1951 Trav-Co 39 (Pt A) (Pr 2).

——S. 31—Interest charged on interest—Not allowed.

There is no justification at all to strain the wording of S. 31 so as to cover cases of claims for interest on interest also. To do so would be clearly going against the statutory limitation imposed by the section. In the absence of a clear stipulation to treat the arrears of interest as principal amount, a mere stipulation in a bond that in case of default to pay up the interest on the due date such interest should also carry further interest, does not amount to an agreement between the parties to treat the defaulted interest as a principal amount by itself. The arrears still remain the arrears of interest only and there being only one principal amount, interest on that amount alone can be allowed upto one half of it upto the date of suit under S. 31. No interest can be allowed on the arrears of interest also. ('51) 1951 Ker L Tim 382 : ILR (1951) Trav-Co 272 (DB).

The Travancore-Cochin Adaptation and Application of Laws Order, 1125, has not become ineffective, but is still good law, after 26-1-1950, as an existing "State law" in view of Art. 372 (1) of the Constitution of India which came into force on 26-1-1950. It is an existing State law within the meaning of Art. 366 (10) of the Constitution and R. 2 (1) of the Adaptation of Laws Order, 1950. These provisions give sufficient authority to the Government of Travancore-Cochin State to issue Notifications, Orders, etc, as they were doing before, e. g., under the Salt Act. There is therefore, no legal impediment, after 26-1-1950 to the State Government issuing the Notifications as before; the omission to refer expressly to the Adaptation of Laws Order, 1950, and the reference to the Order of 1125 in the Notifications, cannot render the said notifications invalid, if they are otherwise valid. 1950 K L T 159 : 1950 T C L R 162 : AIR 1952 Trav-Co 14 (19) (Pr 18).

By Ordinance No. 1 of 1124, subsequently re-enacted by Act (6 of 1125), the existing laws of Travancore were continued in force in the territory of the erstwhile State. Admittedly, the Travancore Investi-

If a particular enactment was on the statute book before 1st July 1949 (the date on which Act 1 of 1124 came into force) it has to be regarded as 'existing law' on that date, unless it has been abrogated in the meanwhile. Agricultural lands, in respect of which quit rent and royalty are payable under the Settlement patta, are not tax-free lands and they should be considered as assessed to land revenue, as royalty cess is an item of land revenue. Any rent or revenue derived from such lands will therefore be liable to agricultural income-tax under the Act. The Travancore Act is a post-Constitution enactment. Therefore by virtue of Art. 366 (1) of the Constitution the words, 'and is either assessed to land revenue in the taxable territories or subject to a local rate assessed and collected by officers of the Government as such' in S. 2 (1) (e) of the Indian Income-tax Act, 1922, must be held to be implicit in the definition of 'agricultural income' in S. 2 (a) (1) of the Travancore Act : 1960 K L J 517, AIR 1961 S C 487 : 1961 S C J 495, Rel. on. (1963) 48 I T R 339 (Ker).

—Ss. 2 (a), 5 (j) and (n) (i) — Applicability — Amount spent on upkeep and maintenance of immature rubber plants—Not a permissible deduction.

It is impossible to say that the amounts spent on the upkeep and maintenance of the immature rubber plants were laid out or expended 'for the purpose of deriving the agricultural income', much less that they were laid out or expended 'wholly and exclusively' 'for that purpose'. 'The agricultural income', in the context, can only mean the agricultural income obtained in the accounting year concerned and not the agricultural income of any other period. The fact that there is a provision like S. 5 (n) (i) is no reason to depart from the plain meaning of a provision like S. 5 (j) of the Act. Therefore under the Travancore Cochin Agricultural Income Tax Act in calculating the assessable agricultural income of a rubber estate already planted and containing both mature yielding rubber trees and also immature rubber plants which have not come into bearing, the annual expenses incurred for the upkeep and maintenance of such rubber plants, are not a permissible deduction. 1958 Ker L J 33 : I L R (1958) Ker 308 : (1958) Ker L T 298.

● —S. 2-A (as amended by Kerala Agricultural Income-tax (Amendment) Act (11 of 1959)) — 'Previous year' defined for Madras area merged in Kerala State — Constitutional validity—Constitution of India, 1950, Art. 14, if violated.

Under the Travancore-Cochin Agricultural Income-tax Act, 1950, the basis of assessment for any year is the agricultural income of the 'previous year'. With effect from 1st November, 1956, the said Act was extended to the Madras areas of Kasaragod Taluk and Malabar District, which were added to the Travancore Cochin area under the State Reorganization Act, 1956, so as to form the State of Kerala. In a petition moved by certain assessees, the Kerala High Court held that the extension of the Act to the Madras areas from 1st November, 1956 onwards did not authorise assessments of agricultural income accruing in that area for the assessment year 1957-58, because no tax can be levied for the period before 1st November, 1956 and even the period from 1st November, 1956 to 31st March, 1957, being less than 12 months, cannot serve as the "previous year" for that assessment year. The agricultural Income-tax (Amendment) Ordinance II of 1959 was thereupon promulgated which was replaced by the Agricultural Income-tax (Amendment) Act, 1959, for charging agricultural income-tax on income accruing in the Madras area from 1st November, 1956 till 31st March, 1958 or at the option of the assessee, from 1st November, 1956 till such date, before 31st March, 1958, to which the assessee's accounts are made up. The entire total agricultural income of such previous year was to be brought to tax in the assessment year 1958-59, but at the rates applicable to the average proportionate income of 12 months out of such previous year.

The petitioner held lands in Kasaragod Taluk in the Madras area, deriving agicultural income. The Agricultural Income-tax Officer assessed the petitioner's agricultural income for the assessment year 1958-59, relevant to the previous year 1st November, 1956 to 31st March, 1958 at Rs. 87, 745-36, demanding a tax of Rs. 21,920-41, the average net annual income rates provided by S. 2-A of the Act. The petitioner challenged the validity of the assessment on the ground that the said section offends Art. 14 of the Constitution.

Held, that the classification is founded on an intelligible differentia between the assessees of the two parts of the Kerala State, which originated from historical reasons. The said differences have rational relationship to the object of the amending Act, which was not to discriminate against the agriculturists of the Madras area, but to bring them in line with agriculturists from the rest of the Kerala State. The assessees of the Madras area under the Act formed one class and S. 2 A applies to all of them. The fact that in the case of one of the crops the assessees in the Malabar area harvested earlier cannot be a ground for holding that the law has made an unjust discrimination between persons belonging to the same class, but that is due only to the fortuitous circumstance of some assessees gathering crops earlier than others It cannot be said that the Legislature has arbitrarily, selected the most advantageous period for the purpose of fixing the rate of taxation. The Court cannot, for obvious reasons, meticulously scrutinize the impact of the tax burden on different persons or interests. Where there is more than one method of assessing tax and the Legislature selects one out of them, the Court will not strike down the law on the ground that the legislature should have adopted another method, which, in the opinion of the Court is more reasonable, unless the Court is convinced that the method adopted is capricious, fanciful, arbitrary or clearly unjust.

The impugned section is a temporary provision intended to apply only for one year to tide over a difficult situation brought about by the reorganisation of States. The Legislature has selected one of the many methods open to it, and though the method selected may not be as good as others, it is not liable to be struck down as unreasonable. Khandige Sham Bhat v. SECTION 3

——S. 3 (4)—Charge of super-tax — S. 3 (4) applies. See T. C. Agricultural Income-tax Act (22 of 1950), S. 58. ILR (1963) 2 Ker 8.

● ——Ss. 3 and 4 and 2 (10)—Applicability—Malabar becoming part of Kerala on 1-11-1956—Act extended to Malabar with effect from 1-4 1957 — Person required to file returns for financial year 1957-58 showing agricultural income derived during previous year ending on 31-3-1957 — Legality — Theory of territorial nexus—(Constitution of India, Art. 245).

A necessary condition for the levy of tax for the financial year commencing with 1-4 1957 must be that the taxable territory for the purpose of the Act was in being during the whole of previous year. (1955) 28 I T R 386 (Orissa), Rel. on.

The former Malabar District was disintegrated from the Madras State and became under the States Reorganisation Act (1956) a part of Kerala only as and from 1-11-1956. The Travancore Cochin Agricultural Income Tax Act, (1950) as amended by Act, VIII of 1957, had been extended on 6 8-1957 to the whole of Kerala including the former Malabar District but with effect from the 1st April 1957. The Income-tax Officers concerned required the petitioners to include in their returns for the financial year 1957-58 their agricultural income derived from land situated in Malabar and received by them during their previous year i.e, the year ending on 31-3-1957 or on any day anterior to it but within that year as the case may be. The petitioners raised the question as to whether the Travancore Cochin Agricultural Income-Tax Act, 1950, as amended by Act 8 of 1957, has effectively and validly authorised the levy of agricultural income-tax for the assessment year 1957-58 on the income derived from land situated in Malabar and received by the petitioners during the previous year.

Held, (i) that the general principle was well settled that a territorial nexus or connection may be enough to save extra-territorial legislation. However, the test of territorial nexus should be satisfied in respect of every year for which the taxation is proposed. So understood there would be no territorial connection established in this case unless the statutory test laid down in S. 4 of the Act was satisfied by the situation within the State and during the year concerned of the land yielding the income sought to be assessed. In fact the fetter of extra-territoriality could never be got over because the legislation here was in essence territorial. A I R 1957 S C 699 and AIR 1948 P C 118, Rel. on. (ii) that even otherwise the period was less than the 12 months required to constitute a previous year under the definition in S. 2 (o) of the Act and no assessments under the Act could be validly had, for the income during such period. (iii) that the Act as made operative from 1-4-1957 purported to levy for the first assessment year under it, tax on income which was foreign both as derived and as received. This certainly was overstepping the limits of extra-terrioriality and the tax must to that extent be bad. (1945) 90 Law Ed. 116, Disting. Ananthanarayana Iyer v. ● ——Ss. 3 (4) and 2 (kk) — Scheme of Act—Assessment of tax of Malabar Nambudiri family governed by Madras Nambudiri Act (21 of 1933).

The scheme of the Travancore Cochin Agricultural Income Tax Act, 1950, is to treat certain family groups as units of assessment but with varying concessions as to rate of chargeability attached and dividing them for the purpose broadly into two categories, viz., (i) those governed by Aliyasanthana law or Marumakkathayam law or simply the rule of impartibility, e.g., Nambudiries of Travancore and Cochin, Moothathus, etc., and (ii) Hindu undivided families consisting of brothers only or brothers and their branches. By virtue of S. 2 (kk) Nambudiri families of Malabar governed by the Madras Nambudiri Act, 1933, to whom the rule of impartibility did not apply are properly fitted into the second category. Hence the assessment of such families as under S. 3 (4) of the Act is not in any way wanting invalidity. Ananthanarayana Iyer v. Agricultural Income Tax and Sales Tax Officer. 1958 Ker L T 1144 : 1958 Ker L J 1286 : ILR (1959) Ker 125 : 1959 Ker L R 1 : A I R 1959 Ker 182 (190) (Pt E) (Pr 27) (FB).

——Ss. 3 (5) and 29—"Hitherto assessed."

Section 29 (1) deals with Hindu undivided families and Marumakkathayam tarwads "hitherto assessed as undivided". The words "hitherto assessed" must refer to assessments under the Tranvancore-Cochin Agricultural Income-tax Act and not to assessments under any other enactment and where the assessee had never been assessed as an undivided Marumakkathayam tarwad under that Act prior to the assessments in controversy S. 29 would have no application to the case and the case would be governed by S. 3 (5). 1958 Ker L J 435 : ILR (1958) Ker 757.

——S. 5 (j)—Scope — If residuary provision—S. 5 (n) (1)—If excludes S. 5 (j).

A residuary provision normally winds up a section (or an Act). Section 5 (j) is not to be deemed to be a residuary provision, the application of which is excluded by any other specific provision in S. 5, particular by S. 5 (n) (i). 1958 Ker L J 33 : ILR (1958) Ker 308 : (1958) Ker L T 298.

——S. 9 (1) First Proviso—Settlement deed covering agricultural properties — Settlement not ex facie revocable — Settlement effected in favour of three sons of the settlor, two of whom were minors—Settlement deed enjoining upon sons to contribute to maintenance of their mother from out of income of properties settled on them — Deed further stipulating upon sons to grant 'stridhanam' to their sister by settling upon her properties of equal value from out of properties settled upon them individually — Deed also providing that the stridhan deed was to be effected with the knowledge and consent of their mother and in case of obstruction to or delay in execution of stridhan deed by the sons the settlor was given full right and authority to execute stridhan deed by selecting at his sweet will properties from out of the properties settled upon the sons—Held, that the last clause gave the settlor the right to reassume power over the assets transferred and hence the deed must be deemed to be revocable within the meaning of proviso to S. 9 (1). (1958) 33 I L T 492 Foll. (1951) 21 I T R 135, Dist. (1945) 13 I T R 105 and (1948) 16 I T R 301, Ref. (1964) 53 I T R 764 (DB) (Mad).

——S. 9 (1), Third Proviso—Scope and applicability.

The third proviso to S. 9 (1) of the Act takes a case out of the scope of S 9 (1) if the settlement is not revocable for a period exceeding six years or during the lifetime of the settlor, and from which agricultural income the settlor derives no direct or indirect benefit. In order to invoke this third proviso both the above conditions should exist. It is true that the latter condition that the settlor derives no direct or indirect benefit from the agricultural income is satisfied in the instant case. But the first condition that the settlement is not to be revocable for the period specified is not complied with. The third proviso has thus no application to the instant case. (1964) 53 I T R 764 (DB) (Mad).

——Ss. 17 (2) and 35 — Re-assessment — Notice — Validity—Requirement of return essential—(Income-tax Act (11 of 1922), Ss. 22 (2) and 34).

The requirements of a notice under S. 17 (2) of the Travancore Agricultural Income tax Act are required in a notice under S. 35 thereof. Since a return of income or particulars as to the total agricultural income is the central requirement of a notice under S. 17 (2) which cannot be dispensed with an omission to call for such a return in a notice under S. 35 is fatal.

Period of time in a notice under S. 17 (2) has to be related to a specific act or must qualify a specific requirement in a notice and hence specification of time limit alone is not a requirement that would validate the notice.

Where a notice stated that the assessee's income from cocoanuts had escaped assessment and called upon him to file objections to the proposal to reassess his income.

Held, that the notice was not in compliance with the requirements of a notice prescribed by S. 35 or 17 (2) of the Act. A I R 1955 Bom 227 ; AIR 1940 P C 124, Rel. on. 1961 Ker L J 508 : 1960 Ker L T 1295 : I L R (1961) Ker 226.

——Ss. 34 and 71 (2)—Section 71 (2) if attracts S. 46, Travancore Income-tax Act — (Travancore Income-tax Act (23 of 1121), S. 46).

Section 71 (2) will attract S. 46, Travancore Income-tax Act, to cases in which every proceeding in respect of the assessments concerned was initiated only after the Travancore Cochin Agricultural Income-tax Act came into force. Section 34 of the Agricultural Income-tax Act does not contain any provision on the lines of S. 46 (3), Travancore Income-tax Act, and therefore the Commissioner is in error in rejecting a revision petition for failure to pay the fees prescribed by S. 46. Having regard to the imperative language of the proviso to S. 9, the persons who obtain orders cancelling revenue sales without making proper enquiries and ascertaining who would be the persons that would be affected by the order, would be doing so at their peril and the orders cancelling the revenue sales would themselves be liable to be set aside as passed in contravention of this proviso if impugned by the affected persons to whom notice had not been given. The rights and liabilities of the Government vis-a-vis the auction-purchaser and his heirs and assignees as well as the Government's rights and duties in the matter of recovering arrears of tax would also be affected by an order cancelling the sale. Government also has, therefore, a duty to see that the notice required under S. 50 of the Revenue Recovery Act and S. 9 of the Board of Revenue Act is given to the persons mentioned in those sections before a revenue sale is set aside. 1956 Ker L T 697 : AIR 1957 Trav-Co 116 (118) (Pt B) (Pr 6) (FB).

The petitioner filed a suit for wrongful termination of his services and amongst reliefs claimed future emoluments by way of compensation from the date of the plaint till reinstatement and did not pay any Court-fee on the relief. In revision against an order levying a Court-fee under S. 3 (2) of Travancore Cochin Court-fees Act.

Held, that since the relief did not rest on withholding of some earned periodical payments but on the petitioner not being allowed to earn the salary by performing his duties it was a relief for damages pendente lite and no Court-fee was payable. The valuation for the purpose of Court-fee need not be the same as the valuation for jurisdiction. AIR 1930 Cal 686, Rel. on.

Where, in a suit for declaration, the plaintiff after paying a fixed Court-fee of Rs. 10 for declaration has valued that relief at Rs. 10,000 for purposes of jurisdiction it is not right for the Court to pin down to the plaintiff to the value of Rs. 10,000 given for purposes of jurisdiction in respect of the consequential relief prayed by him. The proper course for the Court is to return back the plaint to the plaintiff for amendment, so that the plaintiff may elect on a single valuation for both the purposes. 27 M L J 497: AIR 1915 Mad 573; and AIR 1918 Mad 502 (1), Rel. on. 1962 Ker L J 1270.

—S. 3 (4) (e)—Suit for accounts — Essentials—Suit claiming fees for services rendered — Not a suit for accounts — Court-Fees Act (1870), S. 7 (iv) (f).

The mere fact that the plaintiff asks for an account or brings his suit on account or that accounts have to be gone into in order to determine the account, if any, due to the plaintiff, will not make the suit a suit for an account. The defendant must first be an accounting party, in other words, must stand in some such relation to the plaintiff as that of agent or bailee or receiver or trustee or partner or mortgagee. AIR 1932 Mad 565; AIR 1935 Cal 359; AIR 1947 Bom 255, Rel. on.

The amount of court-fee payable has to be determined on the allegations in the plaint as to the plaintiff's cause of action and the prayers therein and not with reference to the defendant's contention in answer to those allegations. Where the plaintiff sues for recovery of possession of properties on the basis of his full title in them and the defendant, while admitting the plaintiff's title to the properties, claims therein a leasehold right, the plaintiff has to pay court-fee on the market value of the properties under S. 3 (5) (a). —S. 3 (5)—Applicability — "Land"—Ezhuwa joint family — Alienation by senior members — Suit by junior members impugning same as without consideration and legal necessity and without bona fides and for possession and mesne profits — Court-fee payable— Decree—Appeal by alinee — Court-fee on aggregate value of possession and mesne profits—Sufficiency—Declaration—Court-fees.

In a suit brought in 1120 by certain junior members of an Ezhuwa family for recovery of possession of immovable leasehold properties alienated by the senior members of the family in 1102, impugning the alienation on the ground that it was unsupported by consideration and was without bona fides or family necessity, a decree was passed in terms of the plaint; the alienee of one of the items of property appealed against the decree in 1125, valuing it for purposes of Court-fee as one arising from a suit for possession of immovable property and he paid Court-fee on that basis on the market-value of the item of property of which he was the alienee. The suit in the trial Court was also valued likewise. The trial Court had decreed mesne profits as well, and the appellant therefore paid Court-fee on the total valuation and not separately on the two reliefs of possession and mesne profits granted by the trial Court. The question having been raised by the office as to whether the proper Court-fee had been paid.

Held, (1) that S. 3 (5) of the Travancore-Cochin Court Fees Act (1125), which came into force pending the appeal applied to the appeal, and Court-fee was paid on the market value of the subject-matter, which was to be taken, in cases of dispute, as ten times the annual gross profits of such land, building or garden, when capable of yielding annual profits, minus the assessment paid, if any, (2) that in that view the Court fee paid on the memorandum of appeal on the basis of the market-value was correct and proper, and no court-fee was necessary in respect of the declaration as to the validity of the alienation impugned; that the declaration sought as regards the alienation, i.e., its validity need not be made the subject of a separate Court-fee under the Court-Fees Act, governing the appeal, the two reliefs — declaration and consequential relief of possession—being incapable of being split up for purposes of Court-fee or jurisdiction; (3) that the leasehold right in the property being alone the subject-matter of the suit and appeal, Court-fee had to be paid on the market-value of such right only and not on the entirety of the rights over the properties; the leasehold right alone constituted "land" under S. 3 (5) for purposes of Court-fee in the suit and appeal; and (4) that under S. 3 (5) of the T. C. Court Fees Act, Court-fee is payable on the aggregate of the value of the two reliefs by way of possession and mesne profits and not separately on the value of each relief. 14 Mad 26; 27 Mad 480; 38 Mad 922 (FB); 38 Mad 1184; (1950) 1 M L J 408; 17 Coch L R 4; 17 Coch L R 246, Foll. 1950 T C L R 581 : 1950 Ker L T 559 : AIR 1951 Trav-Co 142 (146) (Pr 12) (DB).

See Court-fees Act (1870), S. 9. AIR 1961 Ker 129.

——S. 8 Part 3, Sch I, Art, 1—Suit for partition—Defendants claiming that some property has been left out — Defendants are not liable to pay Court-fees on it—Practice—(Travancore-Cochin Stamp Act (1 of 1125), S. 3 (14)—Court-Fees Act (1870), S. 7 (iv) (b)—Stamp Act (1899), S. 2 (15)).

Third part of S. 8 purports to cast a liability on the defendants to pay court-fees "according to the provisions of this Act". Section 8 cannot by itself make a defendant liable to pay court-fee if he is not otherwise bound to pay the same under the provisions of the Act. A claim by a defendant in a suit for partition that there are more partible properties than are stated in the plaint does not fall within Art. 1 of Sch. I.

The practice of Civil Courts in the erstwhile States of Travancore and Cochin to collect Court-fees from defendants who claimed their share in partition suits, has no statutory basis. 34 Cochin L R 221, Rel. on.

There is nothing in the law which requires a defendant in a partition suit to pay court-fees in order to have his share separately allotted to him. He is merely to ask for it in his written statement and it is open to the Court to order the shares of the defendant in a partition suit to be separated amongst themselves. The decree that is finally drawn up in the partition suit has to be stamped as an instrument of partition under the Stamp Act and except the stamp duty levied on the decree, no other Court-fee is payable by the defendant. The right of State to some revenue on the claim of the defendant is satisfied by the direction in the Stamp Act that the decree as finally drawn up should be stamped as an instrument of partition and except that stamp duty no other duty is payable by the defendant.

Moreover the claim of the defendants to the partition of certain properties which are not included in the plaint, by itself cannot cast a burden on the defendant to pay court-fee on the value of such property. There is only one suit for partition and the question is what the partible properties are. It is open for any of the defendants to point out that the list of properties furnished by the plaintiff is incomplete. If the Court be satisfied that more properties have to be brought in to be partitioned, that will be done and at the time of drawing up the final decree stamp duty will be collected on the value of such properties also. SECTION 9

——S. 9—Finality attaching to orders under—Question regarding category in which suit falls and not regarding adequacy of court-fees—Order is revisable.

A revision may not lie at the instance of the defendant regarding the adequacy of stamp paid on the plaint. But where the question is as to whether the suit comes under S. 3, sub s. (4), Cl. (e) or Art. 8, Cl. 8 of Sch. II of the Travancore-Cochin Court-fees Act, the question really is as to the category under which the suit comes and a revision at the instance

● —S. 36—Court-fee on application for return of document—Exemption.

The notification of the Travancore Government, dated 25-1-1915, which is embodied in R. 617 (1) of the Travancore Civil Courts Guide, 1944, and R. 605, sub-r. 6, 7 and 8 of the Guide, constitute the law relating to the payment of court-fee on applications for the return of documents from Court so far as the Travancore area of the State is concerned.

As regards the law in Cochin area an application presented by any person, whether a party to the suit or not, for the return of documents produced by him in Court, whether before or after the disposal of the suit is not liable to be taxed.

Thus the law relating to this matter is not the same in the Travancore area and in the Cochin area. SCHEDULE 2, ARTICLE 1

● —Sch. II, Art. 1 (a) — Court-fee on application for copies of documents—(T. C. General Clauses Act (7 of 1125), S. 12).

There is nothing in the T. C Court-fees Act which makes S. 12 (2) of the T. C. General Clauses Act inapplicable to the interpretation of the word "document" in Art. 1 (a) of Sch II. According to the rule of interpretation contained in that section the words "application for a copy of any document" in Art. 1 (a) must be interpreted to mean "application for the copies of any documents".

The rules governing this matter are : (1) An application for copies of more than one document in one suit or proceeding can be taxed only with the fee prescribed for one application, namely, one and a half anna. (2) If the documents of which copies are applied for are in more than one suit or proceeding, separate application will have to be filed in each of the suits or proceedings and each application will have to be taxed with a fee of one and a half anna. (3) For obtaining more than one copy of any one document separate applications will have to be filed for each copy and if one application is filed for the purpose it will be treated as many applications as there are copies applied for and taxed accordingly. A suit for the removal of a person from a management is incapable of valuation for purpose of Court-fee. Where under the scheme of the compromise decree, the manager for the time being of the common properties is only a trustee the Court-fee payable on a plaint to remove a trustee is specifically provided in Cl. (2) of Art. 7 of Sch. 2, Court-fees Act. Court-fee prescribed is Rs. 15. In a suit to remove a trustee or a manager, the plaintiff cannot put his own 'valuation for purposes of jurisdiction. Section 3 (4) of the Court-fees Act which entitled a plaintiff to put his own valuation for purposes of court-fee does not cover a suit of the present nature, nor is there any provision that even in the case of suits falling thereunder, the value as determinable for the computation of Court-fees and the value for purposes of jurisdiction, shall be the same. There is no Suits Valuation Act in force now, applicable to the Cochin area of the State. Just as S. 3 (4) does not cover suits like the present even for Court-fee purposes, S. 3 (5) does not either. Nor is there any provision that even in respect of suits falling under S. 3 (5) valuation for purposes of Court-fees and jurisdiction will be the same. The valuation for jurisdiction has to be determined with reference to the language of S. 12 of the Civil Courts Act. The market value of the property under the charge of the manager or the trustee to be removed, should determine jurisdiction. 1956 Ker L T 775 : I L R (1956) Trav-Co 971 : AIR 1957 Trav-Co 225 (226, 227) (Prs 5 to 8).

TRAVANCORE-COCHIN COVENANT
ARTICLE 21

——Art. 21 — Power of Maharaja of Cochin to grant suspension, remission or commutation of sentence cannot be invoked or exercised after commencement of Constitution. See Constitution of India, Art. 72. 1955 Ker L T 727 : ILR (1955) Trav-Co 788.

——Art. 21—Constitution of India, Arts. 72 (1), 291, Cl. (1), 362 — Maharaja of Cochin cannot invoke powers of suspension remission, or commutation of death sentences reserved to him under Art. 21, after commencement of Constitution.

After the commencement of the Constitution, no individual, or body or institution in the territory of India can exercise any executive, or judicial or legislative power unless the Constitution confers it or countenances its exercise.

The powers of suspension, remission or commutation of death sentences passed in respect of offences committed in the territory of Cochin under Art. 21 of the Covenant entered into by the Ruler of Travancore and Cochin for the formation of the United State of Travancore and Cochin cannot survive the passing of the Constitution of India, after which, no power of Sovereignity continues to vest in the members of the Princely Order. The Maharaja of Cochin cannot, therefore, after the commencement of the Constitution invoke the powers reserved in him under Art. 21 of the Covenant.

Art. 362 of the Constitution has nothing to do with the executive power like the suspension, remission or commutation of a sentence passed by a competent Court but concerns itself only with the guarantee or assurance given under such Covenant or Agreement as is referred to in Cl. (1) of Art. 291 with respect to the personal rights privileges and dignities of the Ruler of an Indian State. 1955 Ker L J 727 : ILR (1955) Trav-Co 788.

TRAVANCORE-COCHIN ENTERTAINMENTS TAX (VALIDATION OF LEVY AND COLLECTION) ACT (26 of 1955)

——S. 3—Validity—(Constitution of India, Arts. 31, 19 (1) (g)).

What S. 3 provides is that notwithstanding the omission to frame bye laws under S. 12 of Act (6 of 1951) (Trav-Co. Local Authorities Entertainment Tax Act) all orders passed and all actions taken in connection with the levy of or collection of entertainment tax by local authorities are valid. If the Act is not otherwise invalid the collection of tax in respect of the antecedent period cannot be taken to interfere with the right to carry on the trade or profession. There is no scope for applying the principles laid down by the Supreme Court in AIR 1952 S C 115, to such case.

Clause (1) of Art. 31 of the Constitution must be regarded as concerned with deprivation of property otherwise than by imposition or collection of tax. Even though the validating Act makes the levy or collection of tax in respect of the period before the date of passing of the bye-laws valid it cannot be said that Art. 31 of the Constitution has been violated. The fact that Act (26 of 1955) is retrospective in its operation is no ground for invalidating it. It was open to the Legislature acting within the sphere of its constitutional authority to pass a validating statute or to give retrospective effect to the new statute notwithstanding the fact that the earlier law governing the same matter was declared by the courts of law as invalid, unenforceable or inoperative. Section 3 of Act (26 of 1955) does not violate any of the provisions of Part III of the Constitution. As regards the criminal prosecutions launched by the Panchayat and the Municipality the same cannot stand in view of the proviso to S. 3 of Act (26 of 1955). 1958 Ker L T 550 : ILR (1958) Ker 940 : 1958 Ker L J 1093 : AIR 1959 Ker 43 (44, 45) (Prs 6, 7, 10) (DB).

A person accused of an offence alleged to have been committed by him in 1958 under S. 27 of the Travancore Cochin Forest Act, 1952 can be convicted for that offence even though when the complaint was filed in June 1962, the Travancore-Cochin Forest Act of 1952 was not in force, having been repealed by the Forest Act, 1962.

Section 4 of the Travancore-Cochin General Clauses Act provides a specific saving of penalty, forfeiture or punishment incurred in respect of offences committed against any enactment so repealed, unless a different intention appears. The new Act nowhere evinces an intention which is inconsistent with the continuance of the rights and liabilities accrued or incurred or under the repealed Act. Section 4 is applicable even to a case where the repeal of an enactment is followed by a fresh enactment. A I R 1955 S C 841, Rel. on. 1963 Ker L J 397 : 1964 Mad L J (Cri) 192 : 1963 Ker L T 478.

There is nothing in R. 11 of the Timber Rules inconsistent with the new Act and hence this rule may be deemed to be a rule passed under S. 38 of Act (3 of 1952). This rule does not provide for penalty for contravening that rule. The provision for penalty is contained in R. 26. Since Act (2 of 1068) of Travancore was repealed in toto by sub-s. (1) of S. 101 of Act (3 of 1952), Travancore-Cochin, it is obvious that S. 35 of the repealed Act could no longer be invoked for any purpose. It is wrong to assume that this section is alive for the purpose of R. 26 of the Timber Transit Rules even after the repeal of the Act as a whole. Only such of the rules as are consistent with the new Act are saved by sub-s (3) of S. 101. Rule 26 is clearly inconsistent with the new Act because that rule proceeds on the assumption that S. 35 of Act (2 of 1068) is in force, while as a matter of fact, that section has gone out of the statute book with the repeal of that Act. The failure to pass the required rules cannot be remedied by invoking the section of a repealed statute or a rule framed under that statute but which is inconsistent with the provisions of the new Act. 1958 Ker L T 53 : 1958 Mad L J (Cri) 130: 1958 Ker L J 121 : 1958 Cri L J 1184 : A I R 1958 Ker 262 (263, 264) (Prs 5, 6).

TRAVANCORE-COCHIN GOVERNMENT LAND ASSIGNMENT ACT (33 of 1950)

——Ss. 3, 4, 5 — Procedure under is mandatory—Assignments of lands — Mandatory procedure not followed—Assignments are without jurisdiction.

Government being in certain cases bound to follow a procedure that gives adequate safeguards to persons having claim, cannot, without rational classification and having regard to the guarantee of equality before law, be authorised to follow at its will another procedure where such safeguard is not available. The Act confers no other power of assignment on the Government, which is not controlled by Ss. 4 and 5.

Section 4 partly enacts the procedure for a quasi-judicial Tribunal, and the rules of judicial procedure intended for safeguarding claims of parties are mandatory. Hence under the Act any assignment by the prescribed authority must be after the stages under Ss. 4 and 5 been gone through, and there is no dispensing power in the Government.

Where, therefore, Government assigned lands without complying with the mandatory provisions of procedure and there were claims against the assignments, the assignments were held to be without jurisdiction. (1961) 2 Ker L R 559 : 1961 Ker L T 1121 : 1961 Ker L J 1192 : I L R (1961) 2 Ker 627.

● —Ss. 8, 25 — Applicability — U. S. T. C. High Court Ordinance (II of 1124), Cl. 8) — (Travancore High Court Act (IV of 1099), Ss. 11, 12)—(Constitution of India, Art. 214).

The review application was made on 22nd August, 1946, to the Travancore High Court. The preliminary objection to the maintainability of the review application was decided on 29th June, 1949, and was rejected. The Court of review then on 21st December, 1951, dismissed review application on merits. The defendants obtained on 14th April, 1952, special leave of the Supreme Court to prefer the appeal against the decision of the High Court. It was contended that in the changed circumstances the review application had become infructuous and should have been dismissed by the High Court in limine.

Held, that the application for review was properly made to the Travancore High Court and the Travancore High Court had to decide whether to admit or to reject the application. The judgment to be pronounced on the application for review did not require, under any provision of law, to be confirmed by the Maharaja or any other authority. It was a proceeding properly instituted and was pending on the 1st July, 1949, and consequently under S. 8 of Ordinance No. II of 1124 had to be continued in the High Court of the United State as if it had commenced in the said High Court after the coming into force of the said Ordinance. The application for review was rejected by the High Court. If, however, the High Court had admitted the review then such admission would have had the effect of reviving the original appeal which was properly filed in the Travancore High Court under S. 11 of the Travancore High Court Regulation (IV of 1099). That appeal, so revived, having been commenced prior to the coming into force of Ordinance No. II of 1124 would, under S. 8 of that Ordinance, have had to be continued in the High Court of the United State as if it had commenced in that High Court after such date.

The position would be the same if on this appeal before the Supreme Court, the Supreme Court now admitted the review, for, upon such admission the appeal filed in the Travancore High Court would be revived and then, having been commenced in the Travancore High Court and continued in the High Court of the United State by virtue of S. 8 of Ordinance No. II of 1124 the appeal so revived would, under S. 8 of the Act of 1125, have to be continued in that High Court as if it had commenced in that High Court after the coming into force of that Act. In other words, the old appeal, if restored by the Supreme Court, would, by the combined operation of S. 8 of Ordinance II of 1124 and S. 8 of the Act of 1125 be an appeal pending in the High Court of the United State. Under the present Constitution Travancore-Cochin has become a Part B State and under Art. 214 of the Constitution the High Court of the United State of Travancore-Cochin has become the High Court of the Part B State of Travancore-Cochin and shall have the jurisdiction to exercise all the jurisdiction of and administer the law administered by the High Court of the United State.

Such appeal must accordingly be disposed of under S. 25 of the last mentioned Act. That section does not require any confirmation of the judgment passed on the rehearing of the appeal by the Maharaja or Rajpramukh or any other authority. Assuming, however, that the appeal if restored will have to be governed by S. 12 of the Travancore High Court Regulation (IV of 1099), even then the provisions of S. 11 would have to be applied 'as far as may be' and it may well be suggested that the portion of S. 11 which requires the confirmation by the Maharaja, would, in the events that have happened, be inapplicable. Hence the review application had not become infructuous, Moran Mar Basselios Catholicos v. Most Rev. Mar Poulose Athanasius. 1955 S C A 1354 : (1955) 1 S C R 520 : 1954 S C J 736 : I L R (1954) T C 867 : 1954 Ker L T 385 : A I R 1954 S C 526 (537) (Pt A) (Pr 31).

● ——S. 8—Applicability — S. 8 of Ordinance II of 1124 and S. 8 of the Act had no application to proceedings closed before the date of the Ordinance—Decree of former High Court of Cochin did not become decree of High Court of the United State of Travancore and Cochin—Suit decree did not operate as res judicata — Being foreign judgment was not conclusive on issue as to title to property situate beyond its territorial jurisdiction.

Paragraph 2 of S. 8 of Ordinance II of 1124 has reference to 'any such proceedings as aforesaid' and is thus related to paragraph 1. The opening words in paragraph 1, 'all proceedings commenced prior to the coming into force of this Ordinance' normally refer to proceedings which were pending at the time and not to those which were dead or had ceased to be pending, may be, a long time before, say even thirty or fifty years. The plain and natural meaning of the word 'depend' in paragraph 1 is 'be pending' and that the words 'shall be continued' and 'depend' have to be read conjunctively for greater clarity and emphasis and not disjunctively to mean little or nothing. Therefore S. 8 of the Ordinance aforesaid applies only to proceedings which were commenced before the date in which it came into force and were pending on that date. Paragraph 1 of S. 8 of the Act of 1125 does not take in proceedings which were commenced and concluded prior to the date of the Ordinance, because they were not to be continued by virtue of S. 8 of the Ordinance. For that reason, paragraph 2 of S. 8 of the Act also has no application to proceedings which had closed before the date of Ordinance II of 1124. A decree of the Travancore High Court or of the Cochin High Court did not become a decree of the High Court of the United State of Travancore and Cochin under the Ordinance or the Act, and, the decree of the Cochin High Court was, therefore, a foreign judgment which could not operate as res judicata. As a foreign judgment the judgment of the Cochin High Court was not conclusive between the parties on the issue as to the title to the suit property situate in the former State of Travancore. ——Ss. 8 and 18 (2)—Scope and effect—Jurisdiction of High Court—Company—Liquidation—Proceedings pending in District Court—Application for certiorari by shareholders—Forum—Jurisdiction of High Court—Competency of company Court.

The fact that liquidation proceedings are pending in a District Court in respect of a company does not operate as a bar to certain shareholders of that company applying to the High Court for the issue of a writ of certiorari on behalf of the company. It cannot be said that the Court in which the liquidation proceedings are pending is the proper forum to entertain the application and not the High Court. What the applicants invoke by means of their application is the extraordinary jurisdiction vested in the High Court as a Court of record and whether the High Court ultimately grants the reliefs asked for or not, the jurisdiction invoked is one which the High Court alone has and not the company Court. S. 18 of the Travancore-Cochin High Court Act, 1125, gives power to the High Court to issue to any person or authority including in appropriate cases Government directions orders or writs in the nature of mandamus, prohibition, quo warranto and certiorari, throughout the territories of Travancore-Cochin. S. 8 of the Act provides that such proceedings commenced prior to the commencement of the Act shall be continued and depend in the High Court as if they had commenced in the High Court after the Act. The High Court consequently has jurisdiction to entertain such applications in respect of the company under liquidation notwithstanding that liquidation proceedings are pending in another Court. 1950 T C L R 162 : 1950 K L T 159 : AIR 1952 T C 14 (18) (Pt G) (Pr 14).

——S. 9 (1)—Appointment of a Judge who has passed the age of sixty years — Validity — Constitution of India, Arts. 217, 224 and 376.

Per Sankaran, J. — There is nothing in the High Court Act or in the Indian Constitution to indicate that a person who is qualified and fit to hold office as a High Court Judge would be deemed to be disqualified and unfit for the place merely because he has passed the age of sixty years. In fact no such age limit finds a place among the qualifications prescribed for a High Court Judge, in Cl. (2) of S. 9 of the High Court Act and in Cl. (2) of Art. 217 of the Indian Constitution. There is also no provision expressly prohibiting the appointment by the competent authority, of a person who is duly qualified and fit and who is above sixty years of age, as a High Court Judge. On the other hand, Art. 224 of the Indian Constitution provides for entertaining the services of retired High Court Judges, on the High Court Bench under certain circumstances.

The expression "every permanent Judge shall hold office until he attains the age of sixty years" in S. 9 (1) of the Travancore-Cochin High Court Act cannot be construed to mean that it operates as an absolute bar against a Judge being retained in service beyond the age of sixty years or that a judge on completing sixty years of age becomes disqualified to hold office.

Moreover, under Art. 376 of the Constitution which contains a temporary and transitional provision the President can ignore Art. 217 (1) and fix the retiring dates of the Judges specified in Art 376 (2), no matter whether that date is either above or below the age of sixty of the Judge concerned. 1950 Ker L T 439 : 1950 Trav-Co L R 306 : AIR 1951 Trav-Co 45 (52) (Pt D) (Pr 25) (DB).

See Companies Act (1913), S. 171. AIR 1952 Trav-Co 14.

——S. 18 (2)—Certiorari — Writ of against Government when can be issued. See Constitution of India, Art. 226. AIR 1952 Trav-Co 14.

——S. 18 (2) — Jurisdiction — Writ of certiorari (or prohibition) against Government in respect of executive or administrative acts—If can issue—Notification under Salt Act, without jurisdiction and beyond powers conferred by Act—Writ of certiorari to quash and prohibition against implementing Notifications.

It cannot be laid down as a broad proposition of law that no writ of certiorari (or prohibition) can issue against the Government of a State with respect to its administrative or executive acts. Where the action of the Executive Government is ultra vires their powers the writ will undoubtedly issue. In such cases no more appropriate cases of intervention by the High Court can be found when the acts are ultra vires. Such intervention is essential to safeguard the rule of law. The writ of certiorari is a legitimate remedy where executive or administrative acts of the Government are in excess of their jurisdiction and powers. S. 18 (2) of the Travancore-Cochin High Court Act leaves no room for any doubt; it empowers and authorises the High Court to issue such prerogative writs or directions or order to any person or authority throughout the territories of the State, including in appropriate cases Government. Where Notifications are issued by Government under the Salt Act, which does not empower them to act in the way mentioned in such Notifications, they are really no Notifications under the Act, but without jurisdiction. The High Court will consequently issue a writ of certiorari directing such Notifications to be removed into the Court to be quashed, and will also issue a writ prohibiting the Government from taking any further action by way of implementing the invalid Notifications or from doing other acts in pursuance thereof, such as entering upon or taking possession of lands or buildings or salt factories established therein. But no writ need issue as against the agents or servants of the Government who may act or take action in the name of the Government. 1950 T C L R 162 : (1950) K L T 159 : AIR 1952 T C 14 (19) (Pt G) (Pr 19).

The right of appeal against the orders of a Single Judge had been expressly conferred by cl. (3) of S. 18 of Act 5 of 1125. Even though that provision was deleted by Act 1 of 1952 the addition of the new provisions in clause (3) of S. 15 and cl. (1) of S. 16 of Act 1 of 1952 clearly indicated that the right of appeal was intended to be retained. Act 5 of 1125, and the later Act, Act 5 of 1959, clearly conferred the right of appeal against orders passed by a Single Judge on applications under Art. 226 of the Constitution. There is nothing in the intermediate Act 1 of 1952 to indicate that this right was taken away. Indo-Mercantile Bank, Ltd. v. See States Reorganization Act (1956), S. 51 (3). A I R 1958 Ker 188 (DB).

——S. 21 (ii) (b)—'Original jurisdiction'—Meaning.

The terms 'original jurisdiction' is well understood and means jurisdiction to entertain cases in a Court of first instance, as distinguished from appellate jurisdiction. An interlocutory order passed in an appeal, is an order passed in exercise of appellate jurisdiction and not of original jurisdiction since the case itself was not entertained in the court of first instance. 1957 Ker L T 1221 : ILR (1958) Ker 141.

——S. 21 — Single judge cannot declare that case decided by another judge is fit for appeal.

A Division Bench can hear and decide appeals against judgments passed by a single judge under sub-clause (c) of clause 4 of S. 20, only where the judge who passed the judgment makes the necessary declaration. The Judge who passed the judgment alone is competent to declare that the case is a fit one for appeal to a Division Bench. Hence single judge of the High Court is not competent to declare that a case decided by another judge is a fit one for appeal. 1956 Ker L T 506 : ILR (1956) Trav-Co 877.

——Ss. 15 (4) and 18 — Retrospective operation — (Travancore Cochin High Court Act (5 of 1125), S. 25)—(Civil P. C. (1908), Ss. 96 and 100).

There is no doubt that a right of appeal provided for by the Civil Procedure Code is a vested right that could not be defeated by a subsequent legislation. But except in urging that an appeal filed in the High Court under the provisions of Civil P. C. should be heard and decided by High Court, no litigant has vested right to compel that it should be heard by a particular number of Judges. The Judges exercise the powers conferred by the statute and when the new provision is that a matter attended to by three Judges can be disposed of by two judges, it is only one affecting the procedure to be followed by High Court. Such law will apply to all pending proceedings in High Court.

The provision in Act 1 of 1952 enabling a Division Court of two Judges to hear appeals specified in S. 25 Travancore Cochin High Court Act (5 of 1125 ME), now deleted, has retrospective operation. A I R 1953 Trav-Co 53 (60) (Pt C) (Pr 30) (DB).

TRAVANCORE-COCHIN HIGH COURT ORDINANCE (2 of 1124-ME) (1949)

●—S. 6 — Power of High Court to issue writs of mandamus, prohibition, etc.

Section 6 of the Ordinance (2 of 1124) under which the High Court of Travancore and Cochin is constituted provides that this Court shall be a Court of record. Though it does not state what exactly are the jurisdictional powers of the Court of record, it must be held that they are not inferior to those of a Court of record which is a superior Court elsewhere. That the Court of Travancore and Cochin is a superior Court does not admit of any doubt for there is no other Court exercising jurisdiction over this Court. It is one of the powers of a Court of record, especially of a superior Court elsewhere, that it has and should have the power to issue the prerogative writs such as mandamus, certiorari etc. Nothing shall be intended to be out of the jurisdiction of the superior Court except that which especially appears to be so. There is no provision in the Ordinance which limits this power by words express or implied. So on proper cause being shown, this Court will issue any one of the prerogative writs which a Court of record and a superior Court will issue elsewhere under similar circumstances. In the case of a judgment passed under S. 11 of the Travancore High Court Act, 4 of 1099 by a Full Bench, after the repeal of that Act by United State of Travancore-Cochin High Court Ordinance, if a review of that judgment is admitted, an effective judgment can be passed by a Full Bench of the present Travancore-Cochin High Court, and S. 11 of the Travancore High Court Act 4 of 1099 is no bar to the review being admitted. There is no provision in S. 25 of the Ordinance for submitting the judgment passed by the Full Bench to the Raj Pramukh for his confirmation. It is not necessary to consider whether His Highness the Raj Pramukh has got the right to confirm a judgment passed under S. 11 of the Travancore High Court Act 4 of 1099, in view of the repeal of the Act by Ordinance 2 of 1124. SECTION 3

—Ss. 3, 24 and 25 — 'Industry' — Maramat section of Travancore Devaswom Board functioning under T. C. Hindu Religious Institution Act, 1950 is 'industry' within S. 2 (j). See Industrial Disputes Act (1947), S. 2 (j). AIR 1963 Ker 250.

SECTION 9

——S. 9 — Application for removal of more than one member is maintainable—Singular includes plural — Interpretation of Statutes — T. C. Interpretation and General Clauses Act (7 of 1125), S. 12 — General Clauses Act (1897), S. 13 (2).

Section 12 of the T. C. Interpretation and General Clauses Act, 1125, which applies to the T. C. Act 15 of 1950, provides that in all Acts, words in the singular shall include the plural.

A member of the Board in S. 9 must then be construed to include the plurality of members of the Devaswom Board. It would then follow that an application for removal of all or any of the members of the Board must be found to be competent under S. 9 of the Act. 1965 Ker L J 1042.

——S. 9 — Application for removal of member of Board on ground of misbehaviour — For maintainability of application, misbehaviour should not be a "proved misbehaviour."

An application under S. 9 of the Act has not to be based on "proved misbehaviour", that is to say, on some misbehaviour that has already been proved in some prior proceeding. An application based on allegations of misbehaviour can be heard under the section. 'Proved misbehaviour' is mentioned in the section as ground for removal from office of a member of the Board and not as ground for an application under the section. An application calling for an enquiry into charges of misbehaviour or incapacity on the part of members of the Board can be moved under S. 9 of the Act. 1965 Ker L J 1042.

——Ss. 9, 31—Members of Devaswom Board reducing Nivedyam quantity in view of food control and expenses — No violation of "heretofore usages".

Consistent with the Hindu faith that idols in temples are only representations of the Divinity for purposes of concentration in worship for the ordinary people and that the Divinity is the omnipresent and omnipotent power, which manifests in various forms of Life and Energy in the universe, one cannot think that the efficacy of worship or the vitality of an idol is dependant, not on the concentration or devotion in worship but on the volume of materials offered in the service.

Held, that the prior usage was not to regard Nivedyam, Namaskaram, Masavisesham and Attavisesham as immutable but was to allow reductions of Nivedyam and termination of ceremonies. The acts of the members of the Devaswom Board in the same line reducing the quantum of some of these items and abolishshing some for the purpose of limiting the expenditure within the means and in view of controls over rice could not then be violations of "heretofore usages" of Devaswom.

It is common knowledge that prices of produces have risen above ten times of what they had been during the period 1090 to 1100 M. E. when most of the Pathivus have been fixed. Such rise in prices justifies aboliton of items of less religious merit. In the circumstances, the stoppage of Namaskarams and overlapped ceremonies could not be characterised as acts of "misbehaviour" within meaning of S. 9. 1965 Ker L J 1042.

——Ss. 9, 24 — Misbehaviour on part of members of Devaswom Board — Acts calculated to bring down expenses of temples and for cultural advancement of Hindu community or for national causes—No misbehaviour—High Court's duty in matter, pointed out.

The Travancore Devaswom Board, constituted under Act 15 of 1950, is a high functionary to whom "all rights, authority and jurisdiction belonging to or exercised by the Ruler of Travancore" as Sovereign of the State over the Devaswoms and Hindu religious institutions have been assigned. Even the power of assuming religious institutions run by private individuals or families has been assigned to them under S. 37 of the Act. To remove the members of such a high body, the Court has to be convinced of a grave misbehaviour or serious incapacity on their part Section 9 does not compel the High Court to remove any member of the Board on proof of any misbehaviour on his part. It gives a large discretion to this Court in the matter, and a discretion vested in a Court of law is not a blank cheque. Its exercise must not be arbitrary or fanciful, but judicial and judicious. The members of the Board are certainly of a higher status than the trustees of a Devaswom, and any consideration of their conduct has to be done with a greater sense of responsibility.

Held on facts (1) If all the available funds are directed to renovation of temples and nothing to cultural advancement the interest of the community would only be prejudiced.

(2) When the religious organisations of other communities in the State undertake enducational activities through schools and colleges of their own, it would prejudice the interests of the Hindu community if it alone stood aloof in the field and the establishment of such enducational institutions is within the purview of S. 24 of the Act.

(3) For the proper supervision and control of the large number of institutions entrused to the management of the Devaswom Board and for the organisations and consolidation of the Hiudus and for the promotion of their cultural and religious activities, frequent travels have to be undertaken by the members of the Board. It cannot then be said that they are guilty of any misbehaviour in undertaking travels or drawing allowances fixed therefor. in the absence of proof that travels were undertaken for different purposes.

(4) Delivery of excess gold out of accumulated offerings for a national purpose for value offered by Government in Gold Bonds overlooking advantages of a private sale to dealers, is not an unworthy conduct, much less a misbehaviour. 1965 Ker L J 1042.

——S. 24 — Misbehaviour on part of members of Devaswom Board — Acts calculated to bring down expenses of temples and for cultural advancement of Hindu community or for national causes — No misbehaviour — High Court's duty in the matter ponited out. See T. C. Hindu Religious Institutions Act (15 of 1950), S. 9. 1965 Ker L J 1042.

——S. 24—The words "shall" and "may" in section do not indicate that whatever follows "shall" is obligatory and whatever follows "may" is not.

It cannot be contended that whatever follows the word "shall" in S. 24 is obligatory and whatever follows the word "may" is non-obligatory. If such a construction is adopted, contribution to other Devaswoms not under the management of the Board, whether in or outside the State, would be an obligatory item which being of unlimited scope might exhaust the entire fund in every year never leaving anything for the cultural advancement of the Hindu community, even in matters of faith, piety or morality, which latter would be a non-obligatory item. Likewise, renovation or repair of unserviceable temples would be an obligatory item, while construction of a new temple in a fast expanding area where the Hindus crowd in large numbers without an institution for the conduct of their religious services, would be a non-obligatory item. Such cannot be the intention of the Section. The word "shall" should be construed as calling for a primary consideration and the word "may" for secondary consideration. If that be the correct construction, there is no compulsion to prefer always the items in the first series to those in the second. Whether a particular item of work is to be preferred to the other may depend largely on the circumstances of the case at hand. 1965 Ker L J 1042.

——S. 24—Maramat section of Travancore Devaswom Board functioning under T. C. Hindu Religious Institutions Act, 1950 is "industry" within S. 2 (j) of Industrial Disputes Act 1947. See Industrial Disputes Act (1947), S. 2 (j). AIR 1963 Ker 250.

——S. 28 (3) — Service Inam property attached to specific services — Alienation by holder contrary to past usage—Performance of services discontinued—Property can be resumed by Devaswom Board under S. 28 (3)—Grant—Service inam grant—Resumability—Services discontinued—Power of grantor to resume.

Where the property in suit is service Inam attached to specific services, thadivetu in this case, the alienation of the property by the holder contrary to the provisions of the Act has to be treated as null and void at the option of the Travancore Devaswom Board and their power to resume the property in such circumstances cannot be denied. It is not the law that once the property is given for the continued performance of services (thadivetu service in this case) in future and afterwards the services happen to be abolished, by such abolition and without more, the property becomes the absolute property of the grantee and lost to the grantor. On the contrary, the true rule ought to be, that on the burden of the services being litted, the condition subject to which the grant was made ceases to operate and therefore the property itself becomes resumable at the instance of the grantor. 40 Mad L J 537 : AIR 1922 P C 154 and I L R 9 Bom 198, Disting. 1964 Ker L J 191 : (1964) 1 Ker L R 1 : I L R (1964) 2 Ker 126 : 1964 Ker L T 641.

The jurisdiction conferred on the Board by S. 28 (3) is confined to lands given for future services. It does not extend to lands given in lieu of past services which become the lands of the grantee, that is to say, in respect of which the grantee is not bound to continue to perform any service. No question of any default of any service can arise in such a case and therefore where the question raised before the Board was whether the lands sought to be resumed were granted to the family of the petitioner for past services or not the question is beyond the competence of the Board to decide and its order should be quashed as ultra vires of Board's powers. K. Narayanan v. Devaswom Board, 1954 Ker L T 374 : I L R (1954) Trav-Co 846 : A I R 1954 Trav-Co 470 (471) (Pt B) (Pr 1) (FB).

——S. 31—Members of Devaswom Board reducing Nivedyam quantity in view of food control and expenses — No violation of "heretofore usages". See Travancore-Cochin Hindu Religious Institutions Act (15 of 1950), S. 9. 1965 Ker L J 1042.

——S. 32—Application against members of Board for appointment of auditor to check accounts of Devaswom—Procedure indicated.

The consideration of audit reports under S. 32 of the Act is done by the High Court at a public hearing. Under S. 32 (12) of the Act a copy of the audit report to be given "to any person who duly applies or the same". On getting a copy he can intervene when the relevant audit reports are taken for consideration in the High Court and press his views and solicit the Court to pass appropriate orders thereon. No separate independent application is maintainable for this purpose against the members of the Board in which the Devaswom Board, whose accounts are sought to be audited, is not a party. A proceeding against the members of the Board cannot in the light of S. 4 of the Act be reckoned as a proceeding against the Board. 1965 Ker L J 1042.

●——S. 48 — Validity. See Constitution of India, Art. 14. AIR 1954 Trav-Co 515 (FB).

SECTION 50

●——S. 50 — Unassigned lands — (Travancore Land Conservancy Act (4 of 1091), S. 6, Explanation).

The expression 'unassigned' is not used in the Land Conservancy Act and the Explanation to S. 6 of that Act cannot be used for construing that expression in S. 50 of Act 15 of 1950. A lease does not constitute an assignment within the meaning of this section. Assignment, for purposes of this section, must connote the creation of an interest smaller than by way of absolute assignment. An assigned land under S. 50 will continue to retain its character as such so long as it continues to be in the possession of the assignee and it will not be metamorphosed into unassigned land for purposes of S. 50 during the period of such continuance in the possession of the tenant. If the landlord Devaswom has to recover possession of property leased to a tenant resort to the ordinary civil Courts according to law is the remedy to be pursued. Resort to the Land Conservancy Act is not authorised. Section 50 which applies only to unassigned lands would, therefore, apply only to cases where the land has not left the possession of the Devaswom into other hands with the right for them to retain possession until evicted in due course of law. Eipu Varkey v. State, 1954 Ker L T 437 : I L R (1954) Trav-Co 841 : AIR 1954 Trav-Co 471 (472) (Pt A) (Prs 2, 3) (FB).

SECTION 60

●——Part II (Ss. 60 to 130) — Difference between Parts I and II—There is no provision for the imposition of superintendence in Part II while there is a provision in that behalf in Part I. See Travancore-Cochin Hindu Religious Institutions Act (15 of 1950), Part I. AIR 1956 Trav-Co 19 (FB).

SECTION 61

——Ss. 61 (6) and 93 — 'Dedication and use as of right'—Jurisdiction to frame scheme.

Where a temple was built by a rich family belonging to the Gowda Saraswath Brahmin community and it was later on dedicated by the family to and used as of right by that community:

Held, that even accepting the aspect of communal ownership that could only be true of a particular generation and as regards the next or future generations, the idea of 'dedication to and use as of right' taken in by the definition, must necessarily come into play. If, therefore, the temple and its properties could be deemed to be an 'institution' there could be no doubt the Cochin Devaswom Board had got the necessary jurisdiction to frame a scheme. AIR 1957 Trav-Co 307 (309) (Pt C) (Pr 10).

——S. 61 (6)— Framing of scheme under—No infringement of fundamental right. See Constitution of India, Art. 26 (d). AIR 1957 Trav-Co 307.

S. 61 (6). See Travancore-Cochin Hindu Religious Institutions Act (5 of 1950), S. 2(b). AIR 1956 Trav-Co 19 (FB).

——S. 62 — Contractual domestic tribunal — Procedure—Principles of natural justice including rule of bias, applicability—Cochin Devaswom Board feeling aggrieved by false denials of their statements by Principal of College managed by them, themselves holding inquiry into misconduct and dismissing principal — Inquiry is biassed in violation of principles of natural justice and dismissal order is illegal. See Domestic Tribunal. AIR 1961 Ker 282 (DB).

SECTION 63

——Ss. 63, 64 — Restrictions imposed by Ss. 63 and 64 in choosing members of Cochin Devaswom Board — Do not violate the provisions of any of the Arts. 14, 15 (1), 19 (1) (f) and (g) and 26. See Constitution of India, Art. 14. AIR 1956 Trav-Co 19 (FB).

SECTION 66

——S. 66 (vi) — Section 66 of the Act does not offend Arts. 19, 26 and 254 of the Constitution. See Constitution of India, Art. 19. AIR 1956 Trav-Co 19 (FB).

——S. 66 — 'Office-holder' — Chairman of Municipality.

A Municipality constituted under the Cochin Municipal Act is a local authority whose 'office-holders' are disqualified for membership of the Devaswom Board under S. 66 (iii) of T. C. Hindu Religious Institutions Act, 1950.

As to what exactly is meant by the term 'office-holder' in the section has to be resolved with reference to the provisions of that Act itself. S. 87 (i) of the Act refers not merely to office-holders but also officers and servants and on going through the various sections of the Act where the terms occur it is clear that though the words 'officer' and 'servant' have been created as interchangeable or as denoting two gradations in the official hierachy, the word 'office-holder' has been kept distinct and separate by the legislature as denoting something superior to the officers and servants of the Board and of the institutions under its control or management, something quite different from an employee serving under a contract of employment. Hence the contention that the term 'office-holder' in S. 66, means only an 'officer' and as the Chairman is not an officer of a Municipality under the Cochin Municipal Act but one of the Municipal authorities specified in S. 6 of that Act he cannot be considered as disqualified under S. 66 (iii) of the Act, is not sustainable.

The contention that as the chairmanship of the Municipality carried no remuneration but only a conveyance allowance the chairman cannot be deemed to be a holder of an office within the meaning of the Act has no warrant because an office without fees or perquisites will nonetheless be an office and the only test will be whether the particular office honorary or lucrative—is the creature of a statute and is of a public nature. 1954 Ker L T 723 : ILR (1954) Trav-Co 1295 : AIR 1955 Trav-Co 42 (43) (Pt A) (Prs 2, 3, 4) (DB).

——S. 66—Quo warranto—Election—Disqualification existing on date of nomination and election — Disappearance of disqualification on date of assuming office under election whether a ground for refusing writ. See Constitution of India, Art. 226. AIR 1955 Trav-Co 42 (DB).

——S. 66—Material date on which there should be a disqualification.

The material date with reference to which the existence or otherwise of the disqualification should be considered is the date of the nomination and the election and not the date on which the person in question assumed office as a member of the Board. 1954 Ker L T 723 : ILR (1954) Trav-Co 1295 : AIR 1955 Trav-Co 42 (43) (Pt B) (Prs 6, 7) (DB).

——S. 67 (2)—Applicability—(Constitution of India Art. 226).

S. 67 has nothing to do with the disqualification enumerated in S. 66 (iii) if it did not supervene after the election but existed at the time of the election itself. The remedy of the aggrieved party in such a case is not by an application under S. 67 (2), but in proceedings for an appropriate writ or direction under Art. 226 of the Constitution. 1954 Ker L T 723 : AIR 1955 Trav-Co 42 (45) (Pt C) (Pr 11) (DB).

——S. 90—Adjudication annulled.

A person whose petition has been dismissed or whose adjudication has been annulled is not affected by S. 90. What the section really means is that person whose application for adjudication is pending and any person adjudicated as an insolvent while the order of adjudication is in force are within the mischief of the section. ——S. 93—Jurisdiction to frame scheme — "Dedication to and use as of right" — If the temple could be deemad to be an institution, the Board had necessary jurisdiction to frame a scheme. See Travancore-Cochin Hindu Religious Institutions Act (15 of 1950), S. 61 (6). A I R 1957 Trav-Co 307.

——S. 111—Expenses incurred by Board for appearing in suit in connection with affairs of Devaswom —To be met by Devaswom.

Held, that a reading of S. 111, in Part I of the Act, in juxta-position with the corresponding Ss. 44 and 56 of Part I of the Act, shows that all matters that are provided for in Ss. 44 and 56 of Part I of the Act in regard to the Travancore Devaswoms are covered by S. 111 in Part II relating to Cochin Devaswoms. It must then follow that all expenses incurred by the Board in regard to the affairs of the Devaswoms inclusive of expenses incurred by them for appearance in litigations in connection with the Devaswoms, have to be met by the Devaswom concerned. The levy of the expenses made by the Cochin Devaswom Board which gave rise to the suit must therefore be found lawful. 1963 Ker L J 27.

● ——S. 113 (2)—Scope—If ultra vires — (Constitution of India, Art. 14).

Provisions of sub-s. (2) of S. 118 of Travancore-Cochin Hindu Religious Institutions Act, 1950, relating to Devaswoms whose management is "assumed" under Cochin-Hindu Religious Institutions Act (1 of 1081) are not ultra vires Art. 14 of the Constitution. Availability of a quick and coercive process to Devaswom Board for recovery of arrears of pattom, michavaram, renewal fees and other dues does not violate Art. 14. There is a difference no doubt between the procedure available to an ordinary jenmi and the Devaswom Board; but in the background and the circumstances of the case, the difference does not amount to discrimination or a denial of the equality guaranteed by Art. 14. There is a rational basis for the differential treatment and the provisions impugned do not in any way violate Art. 14 of the Constitution. SECTION 13

——S. 13 (1) — T. C. Co-operative Societies Act (X of 1952), Ss. 61, 86 — Government cannot review its own order passed in revision.

Section 13 (1) of the Interpretation and General Clauses Act cannot apply to a power the exercise of which results in a proceeding which is final in itself. The finality of the decision or order provided in S. 61 of the Co-operative Societies Act indicates only that a further exercise of the power is not contemplated by the legislature. The power of revision conferred by S. 86 of the Co-operative Societies Act is therefore one which is not within the purview of S. 13 of the Interpretation and General Clauses Act.

The revisional power of Government in the matter being only a statutory power, the limits of its extent must be sought in the statute that conferred the power itself. All that is found in the statute with reference to its exercise is in S. 61, of the Act and the power having been once exercised the Government becomes functus officio in the matter. Admittedly no further power to review that order is provided for in the statute, or even in the rules. ● ——Ss. 4, 5-A and 7 — (As amended by Act 10 of 1957)—Constitutionality — If confiscatory, discriminatory and imposes unreasonable restrictions.

Per Majority : (A. K. Sarkar, J., dissenting) : The Travancore Cochin Land Tax Act, 1955, is struck down as unconstitutional. Apart from being discriminatory and imposing unreasonable restrictions on holding property the Act is clearly confiscatory in character and effect. While the provisions of Ss. 4 and 7 are declared to be unconstitutional in view of the provisions of Art. 14 of the Constitution, all these operative sections of the Act namely, Ss. 4, 5-A and 7, must be held to offend Art. 19 (1) (f) of the Constitution also. No question of severability arises because these are the main provisions of Act which are declared invalid. A I R 1958 S C 538, Applied.

Per A. K. Sarkar, J.—The Act is valid except S. 7 which offends Art. 14 and which is severable. Kumathat Thathunni Moopil Nair, etc. v. State of Kerala. No tax can be struck down on the ground that it appears to the judicial mind as unwise or unjust. It is clear from Ss. 2, 3 and 4, of the Edavagai Rights Acquisition Act that what was acquired was the Chief's rights, and it is difficult to understand how the acquisition of those rights can possibly affect the right of the State to tax the lands concerned.

The right to basic tax is in no sense a manifestation of the Chief's right to Melvaram. It is a right founded on the Constitution and not on the acquisition of the rights of the Edavagais.

The fact that the State had not imposed any land tax till now in respect of these lands, does not mean that the State had lost its right to do so.

Hence the imposition of basic tax on the Edavagai lands was not ultra vires the Constitution. 1960 Ker L J 112 : 1960 Ker L T 378 : ILR (1960) Ker 345.

——Ss. 11, 12—Scope — Levy referred to in S. 12 in under Entry 45 of List II of the Seventh Schedule to Constitution and not under entry 49.

It cannot be said that in view of Ss. 11 and 12 of the Travancore-Cochin Land Tax Act, 1955, namely T. C. Act 15 of 1955, as amended and extended to Malabar area by Kerala Act 10 of 1957, no further levy by way of cess or tax can be made by the State Government and therefore, the levy of land cess under Madras Act 14 of 1920, as amended, is invalid, illegal and void. The prohibition that is contained in S. 12 of the T. C. Act is clear, namely, that except irrigation or water cess referred to in S. 11, all cesses whether charged on land or not and customarily levied as public revenue due to Government are abolished. The levy under the Madras District Boards Act (14 of 1920 as amended by Kerala Act 4 of 1958) is a levy imposed by virtue of power conferred upon the State Government under Entry 49 of List II of the Seventh Schedule to the Constitution and which has to be paid over to the District Board concerned for being untilised for the purposes mentioned in S. 112 of the Madras Act. Such a levy cannot certainly be considered to be a cess customarily levied as a public revenue due to the Government. It is only such cess as is customarily levied as public revenue due to Government that is covered by S. 12. Such levy is land revenue under Entry 45, List II of the Seventh Schedule to the Constitution. ILR (1962) 2 Ker 400 : 1962 Ker L J 1312 : 1962 Ker L T 826 : A I R 1963 Ker 31 (42) (Pt E) (Pr 62).

——S. 12—Scope—Levy referred to in S. 12 is under Entry 45 of List II of the Seventh Schedule to Constitution and not under entry 49, See Travancore-Cochin Land Tax Act (15 of 1955), S. 11. A I R 1963 Ker 31.

TRAVANCORE COCHIN LOCAL AUTHORITIES ENTERTAINMENTS TAX ACT (6 of 1951)

● ——Ss. 2 (8), 5 (1) (a), 6 (1) — Payment for admission—Is totality of payment inclusive of entertainment tax—S. 5 (1) (a) is not designed only for evasion of tax.

It seems implicit in the definition in S. 2 (8) that payment for admission is the totality of the payment made by a person for securing admission to an entertainment, without excluding any part of it without which he would not be admitted. Entertainments to which admission is by tickets are treated as a separate category by the Act for the purpose of the levy, assessment, and collection of entertainments tax. The combined effect of S. 5 (1) (a) and S. 6 (1) is that no person shall be admitted to an entertainment except on a ticket of admission, the full value of which is inclusive of the entertainments tax payable thereon which is indicated by the label issued by the local authority to be stamped on it. This is the manner as prescribed by the Act, for the collection of tax. In effect, in such cases the tax is passed on to the person admitted for payment to the entertainment and is collected by the proprietor by the sale of ticket to him stamped with the label issued by the local authority. Though the term 'price of admission' is exclusive of the entertainments tax for the purpose of R. 10 of the Local Authorities Entertainments Tax Rules, it is inclusive of it for the purpose of R. 3; this concept of 'price of admission' in R. 10 is not to be confused with the concept of 'payment for admission', in the Act and in R. 12. It cannot however be said that S. 5 (1) (a) of the Act is designed only for the purpose of preventing evasion of the tax by the proprietor or that there is nothing in the Act or in the Rules to indicate that the proprietor is only an agent of the local authority for collecting the tax. (Held, that mandamus shall issue to the Commissioner, Municipal Council, or the issue of labels indicating the proper entertainments tax payable for each ticket of admission for stamping the same, in cases not covered by S. 4 of the Act, as a condition precedent to the levy and collection of entertainments tax). SECTION 3 ——Ss. 3, 11 and 12 — Levy of tax — Bye-laws not made at all—Effect—Levy of tax by recourse to rules made under S. 11—Validity.

Section 12 contains a mandatory provision and until the condition laid down in the section is fulfilled a local Authority cannot levy entertainment tax under S. 3 of the Act. The bye-laws made under S. 12 are the pre-requisite to enforce the decision under S. 3 and it is only where such bye-laws have been made that the rules issued by the Government under S. 11 may be made to supplement them in matters not covered by the bye-laws. When bye-laws have not at all been made under S. 12 the local Authority cannot levy entertainment tax by recourse to the rules framed by the Government under S. 11. 1957 Mad L J (Cr) 407 : 1957 Ker L T 704 : ILR (1957) Ker 762 : 1957 Ker L J 704.

● ——S. 72—Travancore District Municipalities Act (23 of 1116 M. E.), Ss. 286, 287—Special and general statutes—Repeal by implication — S. 72 of T. C. Act 10 of 1125 does not impliedly repeal Ss. 286 and 287 of Act 23 of 1116 M. E. — Interpretation of statutes.

This presumption will be rebutted if the provisions of the new Act are so inconsistent with the old ones that the two cannot stand together. 18 Calif, 438, Rel. on. A general statute applies to all persons and localities within its jurisdiction and scope as distinguished from a special one which in its operation is confined to a particular locality. Therefore, where it is doubtful whether the special statute was intended to be repealed by the general statute the Court should try to give effect to both the enactments as far as possible.

Section 72 of the Travancore-Cochin Motor Vehicles Act cannot be considered to have impliedly repealed Ss. 286 and 287 of the Travancore-Cochin District Municipalities Act. The proper way of construing the two sets of provisions would be to regard S. 72 of the Travancore-Cochin Motor Vehicles Act as a provision in coutinuity with Ss. 286 and 287 of Travancore District Municipalities Act so that it could be availed of by the appropriate authority as and when it chose. In other words the intention of the legislature appears to be to allow the two sets of provisions to co-exist because both are enabling ones. 1960 Ker L J 252 : (1966) 1 Ker L R 344 ; ILR (1960) Ker 338 : 1960 Ker L T 46, Reversed. TRAVANCORE-COCHIN PLACES OF PUBLIC RESORT ACT (8 of 1951)

——S. 3—Act not repealed by S. 6 of Act 32 of 1958 —Offence under S. 13 — Charge of failure to take licence — Accused already holding licence under Cinemas Regulation Act—Acquittal of accused on the ground that S. 6 of Act 32 of 1958 has repealed all the provisions of Places of Public Resort Act and that there no need for getting licence under the latter Act was held as not correct — Cinemas (Regulation) Act (32 of 1958), S. 6. 1961 Ker L J 593 : (1961) 2 Ker L R 101 : 1961 Ker L T 533.

——Ss. 3 and 13 — Prosecution for conducting show without licence — Prosecution failing to prove whether place was enclosed with an area of more than 500 feet—Accused entitled to acquittal.

Under S. 3 it is only if the place, where the cinema show is conducted, is an enclosed place or building with an area of more than 500 sq. feet that a licence would be necessary. It is not a matter for presumption but of proof. Where the prosecution fails to prove this essential ingredient the accused cannot be convicted under S. 13 read with S. 3 of the Act. (1961) 2 Ker L R 32.

SECTION 8

——Ss. 8 (1) (g), 8 (1) (a) — Possession of fermented wash for illicit distillation — Offence is under S. 8 (1) (g) and not under S. 8 (1) (a) which applies only to possession of liquor—Case triable as warrant case and is punishable with imprisonment which may extend to two years. TRAVANCORE-COCHIN POLICE ACT (2 of 1952)

——S. 26—Vires—Constitution of India, Art. 19 (3).

Reasonable restrictions can amount to a total prohibition of the exercise of the right even when the prohibition is strictly circumscribed in time and operative area to suit the exigencies of definite threats to public order. Prohibition, contemplated by S. 26 of the Police Act is of this type and therefore the section is intra vires of the Constitution. SECTION 30

——S. 30—Scope—Attachment of pathway—Legality.

Under S. 30, there is no provision for an attachment of the pathway or the police taking possession of it. Besides. before taking action under that section the District Magistrate should be satisfied that such action is necessary "in order to prevent or suppress any riot or grave disturbance of the peace".

Held, that there was nothing in the order impugned to show that the Magistrate apprehended any riot or grave disturbance of the peace and considered it necessary to take action under S. 30 in order to prevent it, and the direction was liable to be quashed. ILR (1957) Kerala 538 : 1957 Ker L T 592 : (1957) Ker L J 515.

——S. 51 — Indecent or disorderly behaviour under —Mere use of threatening and angry words not amounting to such offence.

The use of threatening words uttered in an angry tone does not constitute riotous or disorderly behaviour within the meaning of S. 51 of the Police Act. The section recognises a distinction between the use of insulting or threatening language and indecent or disorderly behaviour by classifying them separately. 1962 Ker L T 29 : 1962 Ker L J 1 : 1962-1 Ker L R 143.

TRAVANCORE-COCHIN PRIVATE SECONDARY SCHOOLS SCHEME

——R. 8 (7) — Manager appointing teacher who is not qualified — Liability to pay for his services— (Contract Act (1872), S. 70).

The scheme does not create any relationship contractual or otherwise between the teachers in a private school and the Government. The teachers are appointed by the management in its own right and not on behalf of the Government, the departmental approval being only a condition for earning the grant. R. 8 (7) does not mean that the appointment is a contingent appointment, contingent on due approval, so that if the approval is withheld, there is no contract, no appointment, and no service. Approval is a condition of the grant and if a manager appoints a person who is not qualified, he takes the risk of approval being withheld and consequently the grant. But that cannot in any way, affect his liability to pay the teacher he has appointed and whose services he has had. And even if the refusal of approval by the department has the effect not merely of terminating the appointment but of rendering the contract altogether non-existing the management would be liable to pay the teacher a proper salary for his services in accordance with the principle embodied in S. 70 of the Contract Act. 1959 Ker L T 1008 : 1959 Ker L J 1165 : AIR 1960 Ker 133 (134) (Prs 3, 4).

——Ss. 12 and 160—Enquiry of Sanitary Inspector working in Municipality—Order by Executive Authority — Validity — Applicability of provisions of Cochin Municipal Act — (Municipalities — Cochin Municipal Act (18 of 1113), S. 69 and rules under).

The provision in the Cochin Municipal Act and rules relating to disciplinary action against a Sanitary Inspector is a matter relating to Public Health and to the extent it is repugnant to the provision in S. 12 of the Public Health Act, it is void. The executive authority is therefore incompetent to conduct the enquiry, against a Sanitary Inspector. 1959 Ker L R 1439 : 1960 Ker L J 84 : 1960 Ker L T 391.

——S. 42 — Prohibitory order under S. 42 by Health Inspector and Taluk Health Officer—District Collector and District Superintendent of Police not entitled, when their assistance is sought to enforce order to consider its validity and permit its breach—Rule of law—Constitution of India, Art. 226.

Where a Health Inspector and Taluk Health Officer, acting under S. 42 of the Travancore-Cochin Public Health Act (14 of 1955), issues an order, prohibiting certain church authorities, from effecting burials in a cemetery as that was detrimental to public health it is not open to the District Collector and District Superintendent of Police, charged with the duty to maintain law and order, when their assistance is sought to enforce the order, to consider the legality or correctness of the order, when they are not appellate or revisional authority constituted under the T. C. Public Health Act, and permit the church authorities to effect burials in breach of the prohibitory order, on the view that they were not bound to give any assistance to enforce the said prohibitory order as those authorities were not satisfied that the prohibitory order could have any legal sanction or validity since proceedings initiated by the Public Health Authority were without jurisdiction. If the church authorities felt aggrieved by the proceedings initiated by the Health Inspector, or hurt by the prohibitory order, on the ground that it is an illegal order, or an order passed without jurisdiction, or an order which would not have been issued by that authority under the provisions of the statute, it was perfectly open to them to approach either that officer to modify or cancel that order, or to straightway challenge that order by adopting any proceedings known to law. 1963 Ker L T 976 : 1964 (1) Cr L J 190 : AIR 1964 Ker 29 (35) (Pt B) (Prs 32, 33).

——S. 42 — Existence of nuisance — Health Officer himself must be satisfied.

Section 42 postulates the 'satisfaction' of the Health Officer himself as the condition precedent to any order for abating nuisance. Where, therefore, an order was issued by the Health Officer on the basis of 'satisfaction' not of himself but that of his official superiors, held, the order was not sustainable, the action of the Health Officer in issuing the order being not independent but inspired. 1957 S C J 803 : AIR 1952 S C 16, Rel. on. 1964 Ker L J 143 : 1964 Ker L T 15.

TRAVANCORE-COCHIN PUBLIC SERVICE COMMISSION BUSINESS RULES

——R. 5—Punishment—Order by Public Service Commission debarring clerk from service purporting to act, on the report of his last Superior, refusing to entertain his application against his termination—Such an order clearly amounts to an order of punishment — Order having been passed without further notice violates the rules of natural justice in passing the order behind the back — Order is ultra vires the power of the Commission. See Constitution of India, Art. 311. AIR 1958 Ker 352 (DB).

——Rr. 5 (a), 5 (b)—Refusal to re-register—Grounds of—Satisfaction of Commission—Principles.

It is obvious that the Commission can refuse re-registration under R. 5 (b) only if they are satisfied that the work and conduct of the candidate are not satisfactory. The emphasis is on the satisfaction of the Commission and not of the departmental superior. The natural implication is that the Commission has the liberty to ignore any adverse remarks that may be made against a particular candidate by a departmental superior and to form its own independent conclusion whether the work and conduct of the candidate had been so unsatisfactory as to justify a re-registration of his name. A duly qualified candidate can be denied the opportunity of trying his chances of selection at the hands of the Public Service Commission, only on very substantial and valid grounds clearly proved against him. A candidate who has been appointed to the public service can be removed from such service for any misconduct on his part, only after the alleged misconduct has been duly inquired into, with notice to the candidate concerned, and after it is definitely found that he is guilty of such misconduct. Refusal to re-register his name is also in substance and in effect a denial of the candidate's right to be re-employed and to have his seniority maintained on the basis of the date of earliest effective advice, and hence re-registration can be refused only if any misconduct is proved against him in the manner indicated above.

As the head of the department, a superior officer is perfectly within his right in disclosing his feelings about the conduct of the applicant by making the remark which he thought the candidate deserved, and such a remark is not liable to be reviewed by the High Court. But if on a consideration of all the relevant circumstances it is seen that in making such an adverse remark the head of the department was induced by malice towards the candidate concerned, the Public Service Commission will be perfectly justified in ignoring such adverse remarks, instead of acting upon the same as a proper basis for condemning the candidate and denying him his legitimate right to get re-employment. 1958 Ker L T 580 : AIR 1958 Ker 352 (354, 355) (Pt B) (Prs 4, 5, 6) (DB).

TRAVANCORE-COCHIN PUBLIC SERVICE COMMISSION (CONSULTATION) REGULATIONS (1952)

——S. 6 (1) and (2) (a)—Applicability—Order of suspension by way at substantive punishment — Would normally attract Art. 320(3)(c) but by virtue of S. 6(1) and (2) (a) of the Regulations framed under that Article previous consultation with the Commission is not necessary. TRAVANCORE-COCHIN PUBLIC SERVICE COMMISSION ORDINANCE (6 of 1124, M. E.)

——S. 3 (5)—Scope.

Per Sankaran, J.—The bar imposed by S. 3 (5) of the Act is against further employment under the Government of Travancore and Cochin. The office of a Judge of the High Court cannot be said to be an employment under the Government of the United States of Travancore and Cochin. Hence the appointment of Sri. C. Kunhi Raman as the Chief Justice of the Travancore High Court :is not contravention of S. 3 (5) of the Act merely because he was acting as a Chairman of the Public Service Commission in the State. 1950 Ker L T 439 : 1950 Trav. ● ——S. 4 — Dismissal without consultation with Public Service Commission.

After the Ordinance came into force on 16-7-1949 an order was passed on 13-9-1949 dismissing a person serving under the Government in a civil capacity, within the meaning of Cl. (c) of the section, without consultation with the Public Service Commission. Admittedly at that time the Rajpramukh had not notified regarding any of the matters falling under subs. (2) of Cl. (c) of the section. On the application of that person under Art. 226.

Held, the mandatory provisions of S. 4 regarding the necessity for an antecedent consultation with the Public Service Commission before taking action against the petitioner had been violated and that such violation was fatal to the order of dismissal. TRAVANCORE-COCHIN REVENUE RECOVERY ACT (1 of 1908)

——S. 1—Extinguishment of right of redemption by operation of law — Sale for arrears of Government revenue—Held, on facts of the case that the rights of the sub-mortgagee on account of whose default the revenue sale was occasioned, became vested in the appellant and defendant 2 in whom also became vested the rights of the purchaser at the revenue sale. See T. P. Act (1882), S. 60. AIR 1953 Trav-Co 563.

TRAVANCORE-COCHIN REVENUE RECOVERY ACT (7 of 1951)

See also Travancore Revenue Recovery Act (1 of 1068 M.E.)

——Ss. 1 (c), 2 and 5 — Revenue sale of land after notice to Pattadar conveys to purchaser full ownership over it.

Notwithstanding the fact that the pattadar has in fact no right at all to the property sold under a revenue sale for arrears of tax due on it, or has only a mortgage or lease-hold right in it, and the ownership of the property really vests in any other person, the revenue sale after notice to the pattadar would convey to the purchaser the full ownership over it, free of all encumbrances, and will be binding on the real owner also. By his default to have his name brought in the Revenue records as the registered holder, and by allowing the name of the person who has no right in the property or has only a mortgage or leasehold interest in it to stand in the records as the registered holder, the real owner has put forward that person as the ostensible owner of the property ; and having done so, he cannot be heard to say, after he has defaulted to pay the tax on the property and after the revenue sale for the arrears of tax. that the registered holder was not the real owner of the property but only the ostensible owner and that the proceedings taken against the registered holder were not binding on him. The right sold under a revenue sale for arrears of tax due on the property sold, and referred to in the sale certificate as the defaulters' right is the right of the "land-holder". It is not merely the right which the registered holder (the ostensible owner) has in fact in the property but the full right of ownership which for purposes of the Revenue Recovery Act is deemed to be with him. The rights of the real owner, freed from all encumbrances, pass under the revenue sale to the auction-purchaser, he gets the property absolutely as his, free of all encumbrances. 1956 Ker L T 313.

——Ss. 2 (a) and 62—"On account of water used for purposes of irrigation" — Meaning of — Demand notices relating to dewatering charges for Kole cultivation — Provisions of Revenue Recovery Act if can be invoked — (Travancore-Cochin Public Safety Measures Act (5 of 1950), Ss. 4 and 7)—Travancore-Cochin Kole Cultivation Authority Rules (1953), R. 12)—Words and Phrases).

Irrigation means the supplying of land with water by means of channels or streams, a process which should be considered as the very opposite of the dewatering undertaken by the Kole Cultivation Authority. It follows that there is no statutory or contractual basis for invoking the provisions of the Revenue Recovery Act for the recovery of the amounts specified in the demand notices relating to dewatering charges of Kole lands and issued by the Kole Cultivation Authority exercising powers under Ss. 4 and 7 of the Public Safety Measures Act under R. 12. 1957 Ker L J 386 : 1957 Ker L T 431.

——S. 2—Revenue sale of land after notice to pattadar conveys to purchaser full ownership over it. See Travancore Revenue Recovery Act (7 of 1951), S. 1 (c). 1956 Ker L T 313.

——Ss. 4 and 62 — Proceedings for recovery of sales tax arrears — Payments to proverthicar—Validity—Receipts in proper form not issued —Effect—(Sales Tax—T.-C. General Sales Tax Act (11 of 1125), S. 13) —(Sales Tax—T.-C. General Sales Tax Rules (1950), R. 15).

Section 4 makes it clear that payment of revenue to the Proverthicar is a valid payment. It also provides that the person making the payment is entitled to a receipt signed by the officer to whom such payment is made. The section does not contemplate any particular form of receipt. A direction in the Village Manual published by the Government in 1945 to the village officers to issue receipts in the proper form does not mean that the payment validly made will not be binding on the State if the receipt for the payment is not issued in the proper form. Where proceedings under the Travancore-Cochin Revenue Recovery Act have been initiated for the recovery of arrears of sales tax from the plaintiff, the Proverthicar being an officer auhorised to receive payment under S. 4 of the Act, payments made to him:are validly made and constitute a valid discharge so far as the plaintiff is concerned. That payment to the Proverthicar is not one of the modes provided for by R. 15 of the T.-C. General Sales Tax Rules, 1950, has no bearing on the question. I L R (1957) Ker 31 : (1957) 8 S T C 503 : 1957 Ker L T 193 : A I R 1957 Ker 40 (41) (Pt A) (Prs 3, 4) (DB).

Where immovable property belonging to an abkari contractor is sold by public auction under the Revenue Recovery Act, the fact that the sale was under a coercive process of law and not at his request or with his consent cannot make the contractor anything less than a vendor or the Tahsildar anything other than his statutory agent for the purpose of conducting the sale. SECTION 62

——S. 62—Scope — Recovery of arrears of income-tax—Collector's power to delegate powers to Tahsildar. Under S. 62 all sums declared by any other law in force to be recoverable as arrears of public or land revenue can be recovered under Revenue Recovery Act—Hence proceedings taken by the Tehsildar on the authority of the Collector are within his jurisdiction. ——S. 62—Applicability—"On account of water used for purposes of irrigation" — Meaning of — Demand notice relating to dewatering charges for Kole cultivation — Provisions of Revenue Recovery Act if can be invoked. See Travancore-Cochin Revenue Recovery Act (7 of 1951), S. 2 (a). 1957 Ker L T 386.

——S. 62 — Recovery of tax and penalty — Use of machinery provided by State Acts for recovery of arrears of land revenue—Legality — Section attracts by virtue of its own force the provisions of different local Acts in different States — For realising the arrears the Central Legislature has chosen to utilise the existing law and the existing machinery in the particular areas and that is all—Therefore no question of illegality or want of jurisdiction arises in the matter. See Income tax Act (1922), S. 46 (2). AIR 1956 Trav-Co 184.

——S. 63—Public auction by Tahsildar—Absence of strangers to bid—Bid by Tahsildar on behalf of State for nominal sum—Legality—S. 36.

Where the Tahsildar, who was conducting an auction sale under the provisions of the Act, bid the property on behalf of the State in the absence of strangers to bid at the action, the Tahsildar does not act without jurisdiction. The position of the Tahsildar is not that of the vendor of the property. The defaulter whose property is put up for auction is the real vendor, the Tahsildar who is conducting the auction being only the statutory authority specially empowered to conduct the auction and thus to effect the sale on behalf of the owner of the property. It is also incorrect to say that the auction sale in the case was in favour of the Tahsildar. It was the State who bid at the auction, and the bid was made on behalf of the State by the Tahsildar acting as the agent of the State. Since the Tahsildar was not bidding the property or acquiring any interest therein for himself, directly or indirectly, it cannot be said that he has violated the mandate contained in S. 63 of the Revenue Recovery Act, in bidding the property for and on behalf of the State S. 36 (6), which is an enabling provision can have no application to the situation where the bid is made by the officer himself as the agent of the State and that fact is recorded in the sale accounts. Whether the Tahsildar had the authority to bid as the agent of the State, is a matter for his own subjective satisfaction and where he is so satisfied, there is no necessity to produce any special written authority. The non-production of such a written authority cannot render the sale illegal. When there is only one bidder, there is no scope for competition. But all the same there is nothing wrong or illegal in accepting his bid as the highest bid: it cannot be quashed merely for the reason that the sale was for a nominal account. Even if there has been an error in calculating the amount due from the defaulter, it would not amount to an illegality rendering the sale void. 1958 Ker L T 1133 : 1957 Ker L J 1095.

TRAVANCORE-COCHIN SHOPS AND ESTABLISHMENTS ACT (9 of 1125 ME) (1949)

PREAMBLE

——Pre.—Complaint by Labour Officer.

There is no provision in the Travancore Cochin Shop Act like for example S. 46 of the Hyderabad Shops Acts and in the absence of such a provision there is no reason why a complaint filed by the Labour Officer before the Second Class Magistrate should not be considered as a complaint of facts constituting the offence under S. 190 (1) (a) of Criminal P. C. See Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 4 (1) (h). 1957 Cri L J 637 : AIR 1957 Ker 55 (DB).

SECTION 41

——Ss. 41, 45—Scope—Non-compliance—Effect.

It is clear from the wording of sub-s. (3) of S. 41 that a non-compliance with a decision of the appellate authority has not been made penal and the conviction therefor for a contravention of the provisions of that sub-section cannot be sustained. The provisions of S. 41 which if contravened will constitute an offence liable to be punished under S. 45 (1) are those embodied in sub-s. (1) of S. 41. 1957 Ker L T 273 : 1957 Ker L J 292 : (1957) Mad L J (Cri) 106 : 1957 Cri L J 637 : ILR (1957) Ker 353 : (1957) 1 Lab L J 631 : AIR 1957 Ker 55 (56) (Pt A) (Prs 3, 4) (DB).

——Ss. 41 (3), 51 — 'Shall be final' — Meaning and effect of—Distinction—(Interpretation of Statutes).

Under S. 51 the decision given by the Commissioner of Labour cannot be questioned in a Court of Law. There is no such prohibition in Cl. (3) of S. 41. Where in the same Act the decisions under two sections are final with respect to the matters mentioned therein and in one of the sections it is specifically stated that that decision cannot be questioned in a Court of law and in the other section there is no such prohibition the ordinary and legitimate inference is that where there is no such prohibition in a section the Court of Law can question the legality although the decision may be final as between the parties. 1957 Cri L J 399, Rel. on. 1957 Ker L T 273 : 1957 Ker L J 292 : (1957) Mad L J (Cri) 106 : 1957 Cr L J 637 : I L R (1957) Ker 353 : (1957) 1 Lab L J 631 : A I R 1957 Ker 55 (56) (Pt B) (Pr 6) (DB).

Notice, dated 30-4-1951 to dispense with services of employee — Appeal by employee under S. 41 of the Act before Labour Commissioner— Meanwhile employer intimating employee by order dated 28-5-1951 that notice of 30-4-1951 was cancelled and he was placed under suspension from 30-4-1951 onwards — Order, dated 30-11-1951, passed by Labour Commissioner reinstating employee — Petition by employer under Art. 226 of the Constitution against Labour Commissioner's order— Held, that order of dispensation of services having been cancelled by employer long prior to passing of Labour Commissioner's order dated 30-11-1951 there was nothing to adjudicate upon in appeal — Employer was entitled to conduct inquiry against employee and to substitute his own conclusion — Labour Commissioner in passing the order had wrongly assumed jurisdiction which was not available to him under the Act — Since the order was without jurisdiction and in excess of his legal authority the order was liable to be quashed under Art. 226 of the Constitution. I L R (1953) T C 104 : AIR 1953 Trav-Co 325 (325, 326) (Prs 2, 4) (DB).

——S. 45—Non-compliance with S. 41 (3).

It is clear from the wording of S. 41 (3) that a non-compliance with a decision of appellate authority has not been made penal and a conviction therefor for a contravention of the provisions of that sub-section cannot be sustained. SECTION 51

——S. 51—"Shall be final" — Under the section the decision given by the Commissioner of Labour cannot be questioned in a Court of Law — There is no such prohibition in S. 41 (3) — It merely lays down that the decision is final—Where there is no prohibition in the provision that the decision cannot be questioned the Court of law can question its legality — (Words and Phrases — Shall be final) — (Interpretation of Statutes). ——S. 35—Notice to executant.

There is no provision made in the Travancore-Cochin Stamp Act to issue notice to executor of a document before the Collector decides proper stamp duty payable upon an instrument. See Stamp Act (1899); S. 33. AIR 1955 N U C (Trav-Co) 1658 (DB).

——S. 35 — Adjudication by Collector — If party at whose instance document was brought into the Court wants first an adjudication by the Collector as to proper stamp duty and penalty leviable on it. Court has only to accede to that request. See Stamp Act (1899), S. 35. AIR 1953 Trav-Co 559 (DB).

——S. 37—Penalty under—Whether criminal matter. Though penalty under the Stamp Act savoured of punishment that would not make it a fine like one imposed by a Criminal Court. See Stamp Act (1899), S. 48. AIR 1955 N U C (Trav-Co) 1658 (DB).

——S. 37—Impounding.

If the Sub-registrar thinks that the instrument presented to him for registration is not properly stamped he has no option but to impound the document and send it to the Collector for being dealt with by him. See Stamp Act (1899), S. 33. AIR 1955 N U C (Trav-Co) 1658 (DB).

——S. 37—Adjudication by Collector.

If the party insists upon a prior decision as to proper stamp duty and penalty leviable on a document produced by him, the Court has only to accede to the request and not impose a decision which the party did not want. See Stamp Act (1899), S. 35. AIR 1953 Trav-Co 559 (DB).

SECTION 38

——S. 38 — Expression 'Admitted in evidence' is not conclusive of question whether document has been admitted in evidence or not — Suit on promissory notes. See Civil P. C. (1908), O. 13, R. 4. ILR (1963) 1 Ker 639.

——S. 38 — Promissory note insufficiently stamped, admitted in evidence — Defendant precluded from raising objection as to its admissibility again — 'Admitted in evidence', meaning of — Stamp Act (1899), S. 36, Civil P. C. (1908), O. 13, R. 3.

The objection as to inadmissibility of a document on the ground of its being improperly stamped has to be decided there and then when the document is tendered in evidence. The party challenging the admissibility of such a document has to be alert to see that the document is not admitted in evidence by the Court, for if the document is once admitted in evidence, he cannot subsequenlty rely on the fact that he had taken the point of inadmissibility at an early stage of the proceeding as the written statement or that an issue on the point had been raised at the trial of the suit. The expression 'admitted in evidence' means' let in as a part of evidence'. Where, therefore, a promissory note whose admissibility in evidence was challeged on the ground of insufficiency of stamp was exhibited with an endorsement which bore the letters 'Pd' over the signature of the presiding Officer of the Court, which meant 'proved' and denoted a stage further than and after that of admission.

Held that as the promissory note was admitted in evidence the defendant was precluded from raising the same objection at any stage of the suit or the proceeding. Dicta : that though there was a little difference in the language of S. 38 of T. C. Stamp Act and S. 36 of the Indian Stamp Act the relevant part of S. 38 that once a document is admitted in evidence, such admission shall not be called in question, means simply, that it shall never be called in question after such admission, as no point of time is indicated for the conclusiveness of the admission, except that at which the admission in evidence takes place. A I R 1961 S C 1655; (1962) 1 K L R 508, Followed. (1963) 1 Ker L R 141 : ILR (1963) 1 Ker 473.

——S 38 — Admitted in evidence — Means let in as part of evidence — Judicial consideration of question of sufficiency of stamp not necessary. See Stamp Act (1899), S. 36. A I R 1962 Ker 265 (DB).

——S. 38—"Where the instrument has been admitted in evidence"—Unless the Court admitted a document not properly stamped after applying its mind consciously to the question whether the document was admissible or not, the document could not be deemed to have been admitted in evidence. See Stamp Act (1899), S. 36. AIR 1957 Ker 105.

——S. 38 — Admissibility of document not duly stamped—Question raised for first time in revision—Bar. See Stamp Act (1899), S. 36. 1956 Ker L T 558.

——S. 40 (2) — Adjudication by Collector — If the party producing a document insists on a prior decision by the Collector as to proper stamp duty and penalty leviable on it, the Court has to accede to the request and cannot impose a decision which the party does not want. See Stamp Act (1899), S. 35. A I R 1953 Trav-Co 559 (DB).

SECTION 42

——S. 42 — Collector's power to proceed under — When arises — Certificate issued by Collector without jurisdiction — Presumption under S. 42 (2) does not arise—Collector treating promissory note as bond and issuing certificate on that basis — Decision of Collector not conclusive—Stamp Act (1899), S. 40 — Kerala Stamp Act (17 of 1959), S. 39.

The procedure prescribed in sub-clause (a) and (b) of S. 42 (1) is to be resorted to only in the case of instruments other than those chargeable with a duty of two annas or less than two annas only or a bill of exchange or a promissory note. In case the instrument falls under the excepted categories the Collector cannot proceed under the section. The presumption under Cl. (2) of S. 42 does not arise when the certificate of the Collector is issued without jurisdiction : A I R 1926 All 359, Rel. on.

Thus where the Collector treated a promissory note as a bond and levied and collected deficit Court-fee and penalty on that basis and issued a certificate stating that the stamp duty and penalty were collected :

Held, that the decision of the Collector that the instrument was a bond was not conclusive and that the Court was competent to go into the question and declare that it was a promissory note and hence was not properly stamped: A I R 1941 Lah 65, A I R 1935 Sind 46 and ILR 25 Mad 51, Dist. 1963 Ker L T 354 : ILR (1963) 1 Ker 443 : 1963 Ker L J 223.

TRAVANCORE-COCHIN VEHICLES TAXATION ACT (14 of 1950)

PREAMBLE

——Pre. — Validity of. See Constitution of India, Art. 304. AIR 1958 Ker 398 (DB).

——Pre. — Constitutional validity — Constitution of India (1950), Art. 304—Applicability—If in conflict with Companies Act (1913) — Constitution of India (1950), Arts. 254 and 304 — Applicability — Interpretation of Statutes.

In pith and substance the T. C. Vehicles Taxation Act (14 of 1950), is not legislation dealing with respect to trade or commerce but is legislation enacted by virtue of the powers conferred on the State Legislature under Entry 57, List II (State List) of the Seventh Schedule of the Constitution. The Scheme of the Act is to collect a tax from vehicles using the public road in the State. Therefore the proviso to Art. 304 of the Constitution has no application at all. There is no conflict between the Vehicles Taxation Act (14 of 1950 T. C.) and the Indian Companies Act, 1913. Therefore there is absolutely no scope for the application of Art. 254 of the Constitution. When a law is impugned what has to be ascertained is the true character of the legislation. To do that, one must have regard to the enactment as a whole to its objects and to the scope and effect of its provisions. If on such examination it is found that the legislation is in substance one on a matter assigned to the Legislature, then it must be held to be valid in its entirety even though it might incidentally trench on matters which are beyond its competence. ——Pre.—Scope—Companies Act—If conflicts with T. C. Act. See Constitution of India, Art. 254. AIR 1958 Ker 398 (DB).

——Pre. — Validity — Want of sanction under Art. 304 (b) proviso — Effect — Entry 57 of List II of 7th Schedule to the Constitution — Scope. See Constitution of India, Art. 304 (b), Proviso. 1958 Cri L J 380 : AIR 1958 Kerala 52.

——S. 1—Validity—Tax trade or commerce—(Constitution of India, Art. 304 (b) (Proviso), Sch. 7, List II, Entry 57).

The pith and substance of the Act is not to tax "trade or commerce" within the meaning of Art. 304 (b); but only to impose a tax on vehicles using any public road in the State, which is a matter within the legislative competence of the State, under Entry 57, in List II of the Seventh Schedule of the Constitution. Therefore, the Act does not fall within the scope of Art. 304 (b) and is not hit by the proviso. AIR 1958 Kerala 398, Foll. 1959 Ker L J 651 : ILR (1959) Ker 749 : 1959 Ker L T 829 : 1959 Ker L R 1239 : AIR 1960 Ker 58 (63) (Pt C) (Pr 17) (DB).

——Ss. 2 (1) (b), 3 and 6 — Empty goods vehicle driven on public road without paying tax — Offence —(Motor Vehicles Act (1939), S. 2 (8)).

A motor vehicle constructed or adapted for use for the carriage of goods is at all times a goods-vehicle whether or not it is actually carrying goods. A vehicle driven along a public road uses that road whether it is empty or loaded, and a goods-vehicle uses the road whether or not it is carrying goods. Therefore, where, under S. 3, T. C. Vehicle Taxation Act, read with the notification issued thereunder, the tax was due in respect of the vehicle, and without paying the same the vehicle was driven along a public road the owner of the vehicle commits an offence under S. 6. A plea that the vehicle was being tested for an inspection with a view to obtain a certificate of fitness will not bring the case within exemption. ILR (1958) Ker 372 : 1958 Ker L T 3 : 1958 Ker L J 119 : 1958 Cri L J 1031 : 1958 Mad L J (Cri) 138 : AIR 1958 Ker 249 (249, 250) (Prs 1, 2) (DB).

——Ss. 2 (2) and 3 (1) — Notification dated 25th July 1950, issued under S. 3 (1) — Weight laden — Definition of laden weight if can be applied to term.

The definition of the term "laden weight" in S. 2 (2) cannot be applied to the term "weight laden" occurring in the notification. ILR (1955) T C 889 : 1955 Ker L T 946 : AIR 1956 Trav-Co 85 (86) (Pt B) (Pr 7) (DB).

——Ss. 3, 5 and 8, Schedule 3—Cycle-rickshaws whether exempted from payment of tax.

Cycle-rickshaw will not come within Item 3 of Schedule III of T. C. Vehicles Taxation Act, 1950 because even though it is a three-wheeled vehicle it is not drawn or pushed by human agency, but is one which is propelled. So cycle-rickshaw cannot come within any of the items in Schedule III and come in only within the item rickshaw and rickshaw being exempted from the payment of the tax, the accused is not bound to pay any tax. (1966) M L J (Cri) 33 : 1965 Ker L T 879.

——S. 3 (1)—Taxation laws — Tax on motor vehicles —Differential treatment to motor vehicles plying in different areas on account of difference in density of traffic and road conditions — Discrimination not opposed to Art. 14—No violation of Art. 19 (1) (f) (g). See Constitution of India, Art. 14. AIR 1961 Ker 72 (DB).

——Ss. 3, Proviso and 18 — Scope of — If complete with each other—(Interpretation of Statutes).

The proviso to S. 3 is intended to confine the power delegated to Government under S. 3 (1) and (2), which is to fix the rates of the tax, within prescribed limits, while S. 18 (1) is inserted to delegate to Government, a different power, which was to alter the limits themselves to any extent. The purpose intended to be served thus being distinct and different, the two provisions can very well stand together, whatever be their validity. There is no disharmony between them, and therefore no scope for applying the principle of harmonious construction of different parts of a statute to these provisions. 1959 Ker L J 651 : ILR (1959) Ker 749 : 1959 Ker L T 829 : 1959 Ker L R 1239 : AIR 1960 Ker 58 (60) (Pt A) (Pr 3) (DB).

——S. 4 (1) (a)—Construction — Registered owner—Liability to pay tax.

Section 4 (1) (a) is an instance in which it is necessary to read the conjunction 'or' and 'and' one for the other, to carry out the intention of the legislature. The contention, therefore that the tax shall be paid by the registered owner if he is in possession or control of the vehicle, and if he is not in possession or control, by the person having actual possession or control over the same, is not warranted by the section. The tax can therefore be recovered from the registered owner of the vehicles. 1959 Ker L T 410 : 1959 Ker L J 388 : ILR (1959) Ker 464.

——S. 4 (1) (a)—Scope — Alternatives— If mutually exclusive.

The alternatives provided in S. 4 (1) (a) of the Act are not mutually exclusive. Both the registered owner and the person having possession or control of the motor vehicles are liable for the tax. Attempts to realise the tax from either of them will not exonerate the other and the liability of both of them will continue as long as the arrears subsist and have not liquidated. AIR 1930 Mad 510, Relied on. 1958 Ker L J 628 : 1958 Ker L T 537.

——Ss. 4 (1) (d), 8 and 11—Notification T4-7879/49 P. W. C-D/ 20-1-1951 issued under S. 11 — Accused paying tax in respect of eight buses — Right to put on road two reserve buses.

Two things are clear from the Notification (1) that the operators are entitled to one reserve bus free of tax for every seven route buses (or part thereof) in respect of which the tax has been duly paid; and (2) that a reserve bus can be put on the road only in lieu of a route bus for which the tax has been duly paid. It follows that if an operator has paid the tax in respect of at least eight of his route buses, he is entitled to put on the road two reserve buses and if he does so, there would be no violation of Ss. 4 (1) (d) and 8. 1953 Cri L J 1600 : A I R 1953 Trav-Co 425 (426) (Prs 6, 7) (DB).

——Ss. 7 (1), 8 — Non-payment of tax—Prosecution —Plea that accused has claim for recovery against Government—Sustainability.

The accused must establish that non-payment of tax was justified and the fact that he has a vital claim for recovery of a sum equal to or more than the tax due does not mean that he can violate the provisions of the Act for payment of tax and display of the tax license. The position would be different if he had obtained an order exempting him from payment of tax on this ground. The mere fact that in the event of conviction the Court can direct recovery of the arrears of tax as though it were fine cannot convert the prosecution into a proceeding for recovery of tax. 1959 Ker L J 894 : 1959 Ker L T 896 : 1959 Ker L R 803 : 1959 Mad L J (Cr) 815.

——Ss. 7 (1) and 8 — Non-payment of tax—Offence —Accused claiming refund of higher amount wrongly collected—Claim established only later—Effect.

The accused must establish that non-payment of tax was justified and the fact that he has a vital claim for recovery of a sum equal to or more than the tax due does not mean that he can violate the provisions of the Act for payment of the tax and display of the tax licence. On the date of the default in question he could not assert such a claim as his claim had been established only much later. The position would have been different if he had obtained an order exempting him from payment of tax on this ground. So long as there is no reason for non-payment of tax, he must be held guilty of the offences.

The mere fact that in the event of conviction the Court can direct recovery of the arrears of tax as though it were fine cannot convert, the prosecution into a proceeding for recovery of tax.

The Government should in fairness refund the excess amount collected from the accused or adjust the same towards tax on vehicles due from the accused, whichever course is preferred by the accused. 1959 Ker L R 803 : 1959 Ker L J 894 : 1959 Ker L T 896 : (1959) M L J (Cr) 815.

——S. 8 — Accused paying tax in respect of eight buses—Right to put on road two reserve buses. See Travancore-Cochin Vehicles Taxation Act (14 of 1950), S. 4 (1) (d). AIR 1953 T C 425 (DB).

——S. 11 — Accused paying tax in respect of eight buses—Right to put on road two reserve buses. See Travancore Cochin Vehicles Taxation Act (14 of 1950), S. 4 (1) (d). AIR 1953 T C 425 (DB).

SECTION 12

——S. 12—Policy and guiding principles for levy of tolls not indicated in Act—S. 12 amounts to excessive delegation of legislative powers (T. C.) notification dated 28-4-53 held invalid. See Constitution of India, Art. 245. AIR 1962 Ker 298.

——S. 18—Taxation laws — Tax on motor vehicles—Differential treatment to motor vehicles plying in different areas on account of difference in density of traffic and road conditions — Discrimination not opposed to Art. 14 — No violation of Art. 19 (1) (f) and (g) — Travancore-Cochin Vehicles Taxation (Amendment and Validation) Act (42 of 1959), S. 3 (1). See under S. 3 (1) — See Constitution of India, Art. 14. AIR 1961 Ker 72 (DB).

——S. 18—Taxation laws — Tax on motor vehicles — Differential treatment to motor vehicles plying in different areas on account of difference in density of traffic and road conditions — Discrimination not opposed to Art. 14 — No violation of Art. 19 (1) (f) and (g)—Travancore-Cochin Vehicles Taxation (Amendment and Validation) Act (42 of 1959), S. 3 (1). See Constitution of India, Art. 14. A I R 1961 Ker 72 (DB).

——S. 18—Scope of—No disharmony — Principle of harmoneous construction not applicable — (Interpretation of Statutes)—See Travancore-Cochin Vehicles Taxation Act (14 of 1950), S. 3, Proviso. AIR 1960 Ker 58 (DB).

——S. 18 (1) — Notification enhancing maxima specified in Schedules 1 and 2 — Validity—If ultra vires—Delegation of legislative functions—Principles —(Constitution of India, Arts. 245, 265).

The essential legislative function consists in the determination or choice of the legislative policy, and of formally enacting that policy, into a binding rule of conduct. 1957 S C J 527 ; A I R 1951 S C 332 and AIR 1954 S C 569 ; 1954 S C J 661 ; (1954) 2 Mad L J 344 and AIR 1954 S C 465 ; 1954 S C J 637 ; (1954) 2 Mad L J 211, Rel. on.

No delegation of power which amounts to "abdication" total or partial, and to "self-effacement" on the part of the legislature or the effect of which is the "creation of a parallel legistative body", can be permitted. The power delegated must be canalised and confined within proper limits. The possibility of abuse of the power delegated was also accepted as one of the tests of the validity of the delegation. It is implied in Art. 265 of the Constitution that the imposition or the levy of a tax, is an essential legislative function. The chief characteristics of a tax are, of course, its quantum, its incidence, meaning the person or class of persons on whom it is imposed and the mode of its recovery or collection. Under the T. C. Vehicles Taxation Act, 1950, though by S. 3 (1) and (2) and the proviso, the legislature had formulated a policy that the maxima shall in no case be exceeded in conferring the power under S. 18 (1), it laid down no policy, settled no principle, furnished no standard, and prescribed no limit, but permitted and sanctioned an inroad being made into its own policy. A delegation of that kind is objectionable, and cannot be maintained. The scope of the delegation of power under S. 18 (1) is wider than the fixation of rates. A I R 1958 S C 909, Rel, on. The delegation of power under S. 18 (1) of the Act, to the extent that it authorises Government to fix rates in excess of the maxima prescribed in Schedules 1 and 3 of the Act as passed by the legislature, is bad in law, and is void and ineffectual. The impungned notifications issued thereunder are, therefore, ultra vires the powers of Government and are void. 1959 Ker L J 651 : I L R (1959) Ker 749 : 1959 Ker L T 829 : 1959 Ker L R 1239 : AIR 1960 Ker 58 (60 to 62) (Pt B) (Prs 4, 5, 8 to 10, 15) (DB).

TRAVANCORE COMPANIES ACT (9 of 1114 M. E.)

——S. 142—A charge created under an hypothecation bond will not affect the rights of one under the lease deed, executed by the company in his favour where the charge is not registered under S. 142. See Companies Act (1956), S. 125. AIR 1957 Trav-Co 6 (DB).

SECTION 192

——S. 192 (1)—Construction and scope — Right to apply in case of company being wound up—If confined to liquidator only.

Section 192 (1) of the Travancore Companies Act (corresponding to S. 153(1), Indian Companies Act) cannot be construed as restricting or confining the rights to apply for ordering a meeting of the creditors or members under S. 192(1), in the case of a company which is being wound up, to the liquidator only. (1953) 23 Com Cas 161 : I L R (1952) Trav-Co 319: 1952 Ker L T 148: AIR 1952 Trav-Co 243 (244) (Pt A) (Pr 2) (DB).

SECTION 210

——S. 210—Proceedings against Company—Application for issuing a writ of certiorari to quash certain Government notifications by certain share-holders of a company under liquidation is not a proceeding against Company and S. 210 cannot apply. See Companies Act (9 of 1114 M. E.), S. 171. AIR 1952 Trav-Co 14.

——Ss. 210, 245—Company in liquidation—Application by share-holders for writs of certiorari for quashing certain notifications by Government—Applicability of Ss. 210 and 245, Travancore Companies Act—Application is maintainable. See Companies Act (1913), S. 171 AIR 1952 Trav-Co 14.

——S. 245—Aggrieved person — Civil P. C. (1908), S. 96.

Where the District Judge disallows an objection on behalf of the appellant to the jurisdiction of the Court to deal with a petition for reconstruction of the Company in liquidation but the District Judge dismisses the petition for considering a scheme for reconstruction the decision is in favour of the appellant although one of the findings was opposed to his contention. He cannot, therefore, be regarded as an aggrieved person who is competent to file an appeal from the order. 1951 Ker L T 141: ILR (1951) Trav-Co 73 : AIR 1952 Trav-Co 100 (100) (Pr 1) (DB).

——Ss. 245, 210—Company in liquidation—Application by share-holders for writs of certiorari for quashing certain notifications by Government — Applicability of Ss. 210 and 245, Travancore Companies Act—Application is maintainable. See Companies Act (1913), S. 171. AIR 1952 Trav-Co 14.

——S. 284 — Right of secured creditor — Decree obtained on security—Prior to winding up—Jurisdiction of winding up — Judge to call for proof of debt or inquire into validity or extent thereof—(Companies Act (1913), S. 229).

Section 284 of the Travancore Companies Act does not deprive a secured creditor of his security or the benefit thereof by reasons of the winding up. A secured creditor who has obtained a decree long before the winding up proceedings is entitled to stand outside the winding up proceedings altogether. The winding up Judge cannot compel him to prove his debt or subject it to his scrutiny; nor has the Judge jurisdiction to annul or modify a secured creditor's security or decree. The winding up Court has no jurisdiction to call for proof of his debt or to inquire into the extent or validity of the debt or decree. ILR (1951) Trav-Co 315 : 1951 Ker L T 754 : AIR 1952 Trav-Co 46 (46, 47) (Prs 3, 5) (DB).

——S. 285—Scope—"Bonus" if "wages"—Employees of company—Bonus sanctioned and payable to them—If wages—Right to rank as preferential creditors—Travancore Payment of Wages Act, 1116.

'Bonus' as used in the Travancore Companies Act does not come under the category of "wages" within the meaning of Travancore Payment of Wages Act. Since 'bonus' cannot be held to come within the category of wages in the Companies Act, there is no warrant for recognising the employees of a company in liquidation, in respect of bonus sanctioned and payable to them, as preferential creditors within the meaning of S. 285 of the Travancore Companies Act. SECTION 287

——S. 287—Jurisdiction—Alienation by Company—Applications by Official Liquidator alleging fraudulent preference—Power of Court to declare invalid.

When a question arises as to whether a particular alienation made by a company which is being wound up is invalid because it amounts to a fraudulent preference within the meaning of S. 287, Travancore Companies Act, the Court certainly is invested with power under the section to declare as to its validity or invalidity on the application of the Official Liquidator. SECTION 24

——S. 24 — "Public Service" — Employment outside territorial limits of State is not Public Service for purposes of section. See Contract Act (1872), S. 23. 1950 Ker L T 221.

—— Ss. 40, 55 and 56—Applicability—Chitty contract—Time, if of essence—Subscriber bidding at auction but not getting paid his prize money on date of next bid as stipulated due to collapse of chitty — Right to forgo prize amount or to insist on payment of all paid up subscriptions in full—In such contract time must be regarded as of the essence of the contract—The subscriber who has not been paid the amount of the bid is entitled to waive his right to claim the prize amount and to go back to his right to claim the paid up subscriptions in full. 1950 Ker L T 745 : I L R (1951) Trav-Co 685 (DB).

SECTION 55

——Ss 55, 56—Chitty—Contract—Nature of—Bidder of ticket at auction for less amount than amount of his paid-up subscriptions not paid prize amount on stipulated date due to collapse of chitty — Right to claim full amount of subscriptions—Travancore Contract Act.

The subscriber who has not been paid the amount of the bid is entitled to waive his right to claim the prize amount and to go back to his right to claim the paid-up subscriptions as a non-prized subscriber. Sections 40, 55 and 56 of the Travancore Contract Act will apply and the bidder can insist upon being paid back all the subscriptions duly paid by him towards his ticket in the chitty up to the date of the collapse of the chitty. 22 T L J 1274; 11 T L T 454, Disting. 1950 Ker L T 745 : ILR (1951) Trav-Co 685 (DB).

——S. 70 — Scope — The decree in the suit by the subsequent mortgagee made the mortgagor personally liable for the debt due thereunder and he was therefore "bound by law to pay" the same. The case therefore falls directly within the scope of S. 70. See Contract Act (1872), S. 69. ('50) 1950 Ker L Tim 238 (DB).

SECTION 4

● ——S. 4 (1) (iii), (v) (a) — Suit for removal of defendant from trusteeship and for possession of trust property — The plaintiffs are not bound to pay "ad valorem" court-fee on the value of the properties under Cls. (1), (3) and (v) (a) of S. 4 but need pay only fixed fees under Sch. II, Art. 8, Cls. (2) and (7). See Court-fees Act (1870), S. 7 (i). A I R 1954 Trav-Co 178 (FB).

[Overruled on another point in A.I R 1961 Ker 146 (FB).]

——S. 4 (5) (d) and Sch. II, Art. VIII (7) — Suit to avoid Melapattam — No prayer for possession — S. 4 (5) (d) applies—Computation of court-fee.

The suit is one for avoiding an alienation with respect to a limited interest in the property and as such is governed by S. 4 (5) (d). In such a case it is for the plaintiff to declare the market value of the subject-matter of the suit and it is only in case of dispute that the computation prescribed by the section has to be followed. [Overruled on another point in A I R 1961 Ker 146 (FB).]

——Sch. II, Art. 8 (vii) — A suit brought by a trustee or manager to remove the defendant from such office and to recover possession of the trust properties from him, would fall under Art. 17, Cl. (6), Sch. II, Court-fees Act, 1870. Further court-fee cannot be levied 'ad valorem' on the market value of the property. See Court-fees Act (1870), Sch. II, Art. 17 (vi). AIR 1954 Trav-Co 51 (DB).

——Sch. II, Art. 8 (7) — Suit to avoid Melpattom — No prayer for possession — S. 4 (5) (d) applies — Computation of court-fee. It is for the plaintiff to declare the market value of the subject matter of the suit and in case of dispute the computation prescribed by the section has to be followed. ——S. 184 — "Court of Session" — Proper Court to which commitment should be made — Order of committal to wrong Court — Liability to be quashed — Procedure when defect discovered before trial — (Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 531).

The Court of Session mentioned in S. 184, Travancore Criminal P. C., is the Court which would have territorial jurisdiction over the place where the offence is alleged to have been committed, in view of S. 175 of that Code. The Sessions Court to which a commitment is made should necessarily be a Court competent to try the case under S. 175. Where the commitment for trial is, however, made to a Court which is not the Court having jurisdiction, and the defect is discovered before the trial commences, the order of commitment need not be quashed as illegal; the proper and legal course, is to transfer the case for trial to the Sessions Court which has jurisdiction to try it, the order of commitment being deemed to be one made to that Court and not to the wrong Court. Under S. 201, the Magistrate is entitled to dismiss a complaint on considering the sworn statement, if any of the complainant as also the investigation by the police directed by him; it is not obligatory upon him to give an opportunity to the complainant to show that the police report is wrong, which is enjoined in Travancore Criminal Court Circular No. 18/1066. This Circular has reference only to a case where the complaint is made to the police and they refer the complaint as false or unproved to the Court; it has no application to the case of a complaint presented to the Magistrate by the complainant which latter case is governed by S. 201. 55 Cri L J 218 : 1951 Ker L T 414 : AIR 1954 Trav-Co 136 (136) (Pr 3).

——S. 215—"Point of law" — Order of commitment not supported by evidence—Quashing of.

The High Court can set aside or quash the order of commitment under S. 215' Criminal P. C. 1953 Ker L T 307 : 1952 Cri L J 791 : I L R (1951) Trav-Co 605 : AIR 1952 Trav-Co 158 (159) (Pt B) (Pr 4).

——S. 219 (2) — Framing of charge—Offences of falsification of accounts or forgery besides criminal breach of trust or dishonest misappropriation — —Nature of charge to be framed—Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 234.

The Court is to frame a separate charge for each distinct act of breach of trust or misappropriation and to include in that charge acts of falsification of accounts or forgery connected therewith and not have one charge for the gross sum misappropriated, another charge for as many falsifications as could be tried together without offending S. 231 and a third charge for forgery, if any. 1951 Ker L T 252 (DB).

——S. 223 –Scope—Charge of bigamy — Amendment by addition of charge of enticing away married woman and charge of adultery.

In a prosecution on a charge of bigamy the charge may legally be amended so as to include a charge against the man of enticing away a married woman under S. 501. Travancore Penal Code, but it cannot be so amended as to add a charge against him of the offence of adultery. 5 A I Cr D 569.

——S. 244 — Applicability—Case started on Police report and not on complaint—Acquittal under S. 244 —Legality of.

Section 244, Travancore Criminal P. C., can apply only if the prosecution has been started on a complaint. Where the proceedings have been started on a police report and not upon a complaint, S. 244 cannot be invoked and an acquittal of the accused under S. 244 is not warranted and is illegal. 5 A I Cr D 470.

——S. 244—Prosecution on police report — Acquittal on absence of complainant—Validity.

Section 244 does not refer to a case which was taken cognizance of on a Police Report. The order made by the Magistrate acquitting the accused under that section on absence of the complainant is, therefore incorrect. Unreported decision in Cr. App. Nos. 91 and 93 of 1951 dated 23-7-1951, Foll. 1952 Cri L J 1584 : AIR 1952 Trav-Co 476 (476) (Pr 1) (DB).

——S. 244 — Applicability — Case under S. 103— Absence of complainants and state witnesses—Procedure—Proper order. Under S. 115 the Court can terminate the proceedings and discharge the accused. There can be no acquittal under S. 244. See Travancore Criminal P. C., S. 115. 53 Cri L J 1271 : AIR 1952 Trav-Co 268.

——S. 244, Proviso — Complaint by public servant —Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 247, Proviso.

Where the evidence of the complainant who is a public servant has already been recorded the Magistrate in acquitting the accused under S. 244 on a subsequent date does not exercise a judicial discretion, especially when the complainant had engaged an Advocate to represent him. 1951 Ker L T 147 : AIR 1951 Trav-Co 25 (25) (Pr 3) (DB).

——Ss. 250, 430, 436—Criminal P. C (1898), Ss. 253, 517, 520, 523 — "When an inquiry or a trial in any Criminal Court is concluded."

The accused was discharged under S. 250 and in the same order the property in dispute was ordered to be confiscated. The order of confiscation of property was made under S. 430 and not under S. 436, and the revision petition was not the proper remedy open to the party. See Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 253. AIR 1954 Trav-Co 196 (DB).

——S. 250 (2) — Criminal P C (1898), S. 253 (2)— Complaint 'prima facie' disclosing offence—Accused discharged before examining witnesses — Duty of Court.

Before discharging the accused it was the duty of the Court to issue steps to the witnesses in the complaint and the Court was wrong in discharging the accused without taking the evidence which the complainant was prepared to adduce. See Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 253 (2). AIR 1954 Trav-Co 121.

——S. 254 — Applicability — Plea of guilty not accepted.

The Magistrate ought to proceed under S. 256 and ought not to convict the accused on the evidence adduced by the prosecution before the charge is framed. See Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 256. 1953 Cri L J 1814 : AIR 1953 Trav. Co 588 (DB).

——S. 262 (2) — Plea of guilty — Magistrate is not bound to convict on the plea. See Criminal P. C. (1898). S. 255 (2). 1953 Cri L J 1814 : AIR 1953 Trav-Co 588 (DB).

——S. 281—Procedure—Deaf and dumb accused— Duty of Court to endeavour to communicate with accused—Reference after sentence—Propriety.

Where the accused is a deaf and dumb person, who cannot understand the proceedings, the duty of the Magistrate, if a case is made out against the accused upon the evidence adduced by the prosecution, is to record a finding of conviction, and make a reference to the High Court under S. 281, Travancore Criminal Procedure Code. There is no provision for passing a sentence before the Magistrate refers the case to the High Court. It is only the High Court which must pass the necessary sentence or order. In such cases the Magistrate must also make an endeavour in the course of the trial to communicate with the accused through some person acquainted with the method of doing so. ILR (1951) T C 85 : 1951 K L T 29 : 5 A I Cr D 179 : 52 Cr L J 654 : AIR 1951 T C 125 (127) (Prs 5, 6, 7) (DB).

——S. 291—Scope of—Bench of Magistrate—Change in Constitution during hearing — Judgment by three members none of whom has been present throughout or has heard evidence of all witnesses—Is illegal and not curable irregularity under S. 446. 1952 K L T 40 : 1952 Cri L J 869 : AIR 1952 T C 175 (176) (Pr 4) (DB).

SECTION 302

——S. 302 — Judgment pronounced on a Sunday — Validity.

There is no prohibition against pronouncing judgment on Sundays and other holidays. Courts in India have been doing judicial acts and recognising their validity on Sundays or other holidays. 1951 K L T 243 : 5 A I Cr D 696.

——S. 302 — Judgment pronounced on Sunday — If valid—There is no prohibition against giving a judgment on Sundays or holidays if necessary notice is given regarding such pronouncement. See Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 366. 1951 K L T 243.

● ——Ss. 305 and 470 — Relative scope—Former, if subject to S. 470—Power of High Court to review or alter judgment - Grounds for exercise— Error of law —If justification for review (Criminal P. C. (1898), Ss. 369, 561A and 471).

It cannot be disputed that S. 305, Travancore Cr. P. Code, applies to the High Court also. It cannot be held that the section has to be read subject to S. 470. S. 470, Travancore Criminal P. C. does not confer any new power on the High Court. It only reserves the power which the High Court possessed before the section was enacted. The words "save as otherwise provided by this Code", etc., cannot have reference to S. 470. The words only refer to the express provisions of the Code which empower the Court to alter or review its judgment in certain specified cases, e.g., Ss. 326, 359, 395 and 400.

The High Court has therefore no power to review or alter its judgment in a criminal case, except in the case mentioned in S. 369, Indian Cr. P. Code, or where the Court has acted without jurisdiction or where it has decided the case without giving an opportunity to a party for being heard and S. 407, Travancore Procedure Code (S. 561-A, Indian Criminol Procedure Code) does not confer on the High Court any such power. Though the Court has passed an order on a view of the law which is not in consonance with the strict law, it cannot be said to have acted without jurisdiction or to have abused the process of the Court or caused any grave injustice to any party, so as to justify an alteration or review of judgment. State v. Aiyappan Pillai, 1952 All W R (Supp) 79 : ILR (1952) T C 285 : 1952 K L T 248 : 1952 Cri L J 930 : AIR 1952 T C 210 (211, 212, 217, 218) (Prs 5, 6, 30, 31, 33) (FB).

——S. 342—Applicability—Conviction based on evidence and not plea of guilty—S. 412, Criminal P. C. held did not apply—Appeal held maintainable. See Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 412. 1953 Cri L J 1814 : AIR 1953 Trav-Co 588 (DB).

SECTION 343

——S. 343—Repeal of — Section 25 of the Code of Criminal Procedure Amending Act gave retrospective operation to the Code of 1898 so as to make its provisions applicable to pending cases in Criminal Courts in any Part B State. The appeal was, therefore, incompetent. See Code of Criminal Procedure Amending Act (1951), S. 25. AIR 1955 N U C (Trav-Co) 140.

SECTION 346

——Ss. 346 and 350—Acquittal—Appeal from — Interference—Powers of High Court — Finding of fact —Interference — Option of that Judge on credibility of witnesses — Finding arrived at by indulging in speculation, unwarranted by evidence and contrary to S. 105, Evidence Act—Finality.

Sections 346 and 350, Travancore Cr. P. C., give to the High Court full power to review at large the evidence upon which an order of acquittal was founded and to reach the conclusion that upon the evidence the order of acquittal should be reversed. There is no restriction imposed upon the appellate Court in dealing with an order of acquittal on a question of fact. If the conclusion of fact arrived by the trial Judge is not warranted by the evidence in the case, and has been arrived at by indulging in speculation as to what should have happened without any suggestion made in the evidence or in the cross-examination of the witnesses for the prosecution the conclusion cannot be accepted, more so, when the speculation is both unwarranted and opposed to the provisions of S. 105 of the Evidence Act. In such a case the trial Judge must be held to have misdirected himself, and the acquittal will be set aside. 1949 T L R 191, declared obiter and Diss. 61 I A 393 ; AIR 1934 P C 227 ; AIR 1950 P C 30; 50 C W N 1 (PC); 56 All 354, Foll. 4 All 148, Not foll. 1950 K L T 227 : 4 A I Cr D 707.

——S. 349 (2)—Scope — Non-compliance — Effect—Appeal from conviction of compoundable offence on private complaint — Notice served on Public Prosecutor and not on complainant — If vitiates order of acquittal in appeal—Illegality—If cured—S. 446.

The provisions of S. 349 (2), Travancore Criminal P. C., are not mandatory and the fact that notice of appeal by the accused against his conviction of a compoundable offence on a private complaint is served on the Public Prosecutor and not on the complainant does not amount to any violation of any mandatory provision which vitiates the order of acquittal passed on appeal. The defect, or irregularity, if any, is amply curable by S. 446, Travancore Criminal P. C. I L R (1951) Trav-Co 183 : 55 Cri L J 336 : 1951 Ker L T 381 : A I R 1954 Trav-Co 162 (162) (Pr 3).

——S. 350—Powers of appellate Court — Conviction by trial Court of two offences — Award of one sentence only—Procedure — Duty of appellate Court—Enhancement of sentence.

Where an accused is convicted at a trial of the offences under Ss. 421 and 469, Travancore Penal Code, the proper course for the trial Court is to award separate sentences for each. Where that Court does not do so, it is open to the appellate Court under S. 350, Travancore Criminal P. C., to direct that the sentence passed by the trial Court should be apportioned for the two offences of which the accused has been convicted, provided such direction does not amount to an enhancement of the sentence, it being a fundamental rule that whatever the appellate Court does, it shall not enhance the sentence. 48 Cri L J 182, Ref. 5 A I Cr D 274 : 1951 Ker L T 261.

——S. 358 — Jurisdiction — Order passed by Magistrate with jurisdiction — Order under S. 142 by Magistrate not empowered to act—Legality — Revision—Interference—Power of High Court.

When a Court has no jurisdiction to pass effective orders as regards matters brought before it, but assumes jurisdiction and passes an order, the High Court is competent, and has jurisdiction under S. 358, Criminal P. C. to interfere in revision to correct the mistake and call the Magistrate to order. An order under S. 142, Criminal P. C., by a Magistrate who has not been empowered by Government to act under the section, is void and is liable to be set aside in revision. 5 A I Cr D 432.

——S. 362—Scope—Powers of revision—If confined to judicial orders only — Proceedings under S. 143—Order in revision—Maintainability.

The powers of revision are not confined to the case of orders which are judicial ; a revision petition is maintainable even if an order under S. 143, Criminal P. C., is not a judicial order. The High Court has power to revise the order in the case of "any proceeding" and not merely a judicial proceeding. 1951 Ker L T 243 : 5 A I Cr D 696.

——S. 362—Powers of High Court—Illegality brought to notice of High Court — Jurisdiction to interfere—Magistrate taking cognizance on police report submitted in pursuance of complaint by complainant—The party who originally preferred the complaint to police has no locus standi to apply for deletion of one section of Penal Code from reports or for withdrawal — Order of acquittal following on allowing application — Legality of — Not only the order of acquittal but the entire order including the order directing the deletion of a section from the police report will be set aside. 5 A I Cr D 426.

——S. 362 — Power of High Court — Discretion of Magistrate — Decision as to case being one of emergency under S. 143 (4), Proviso 2 — Interference in revision. See Travancore Criminal P. C., S. 143 (4), Proviso 2. 5 A I Cr D 345.

——S. 362—Quashing committal — Powers of High Court — Interference with proceedings of lower Court—When to be exercised.

While it cannot be disputed that the High Court has jurisdiction to interfere at any stage of the proceedings before the Court below and quash the same in the interests of justice. The power to quash proceedings has to be exercised sparingly and when the High Court is satisfied that sufficient grounds exist for that course. 4 A I Cr D 778 : A I R 1951 Trav-Co 35 (36) (Pr 1).

SECTION 384

●——Ss. 384, 305 and 470 — Criminal P. C. (1898), Ss. 369, 561-A and 471 — Power of High Court to review or alter its judgment in criminal case. 15 Trav-Co L J 85 ; 20 Trav-Co L J 378, Overruled. See Travancore Criminal P. C. (8 of 1117 M.E.), S. 305. A I R 1952 Trav Co 210 (FB).

●——S. 384, Proviso — Power of Court — Order of detention of lunatic accused with relative or guardian—Legality.

Under S. 384, Travancore Criminal P. C., and R. 7 of the Rules under the Travancore Lunacy Act, it is not strictly open to the Court, when passing a detention order, to allow the accused to be kept in the custody of a relative or guardian pending orders from Government ; the Court on the other hand has to direct the detention of the accused in a lunatic asylum. State v. Aiyappan Pillai, 1952 All W R (Supp) 79 ; I L R (1952) Trav-Co 285 ; 1952 Ker L T 248 ; 1952 Cri L J 930 ; A I R 1952 Trav-Co 210 (211, 212, 217, 218) (Prs 5, 6, 30, 31, 33) (FB).

——S. 384 — Criminal P. C. (1898), Ss. 471, 475— Travancore Criminal P. C., S. 384 — Detained in safe custody, meaning of — It means detained in such a manner and place as the Court thinks fit. See Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 471. A I R 1952 Trav-Co 52.

——S. 384—Scope — Duty of Court — Direction for accused to be kept in custody of relatives—Legality —Jurisdiction of Court—"Detained in safe custody" —Meaning of—Procedure — Travancore Lunacy Act —Rules under—Application.

The expression "detained in safe custody" in S. 384, Criminal P. C., does not mean detained in the custody of relatives or friends, but detained in safe custody in such manner and place as the Court thinks fit. The Court under the section has to detain the accused in safe custody and report the matters to the Government, which is given power to direct that the accused shall be delivered to any relative or friend of his for safe custody. The Court is not given power to do so and it has no jurisdiction to give such a direction. The rules under the Travancore Lunacy Act cannot have any application to the provisions of S. 384, Travancore Criminal P. C. I L R (1951) Trav-Co 175: 1951 Ker L T 276 ; A I R 1952 Trav-Co 52 (52, 53) (Prs 1, 2).

——S. 399 (4)—Scope — Offer by husband to maintain wife if she lived with him — Refusal — When justified.

A wife claiming maintenance is not entitled to refuse an offer by the husband to maintain her unless she is able to make out that there is sufficient reason for her refusing to live with him. An unfounded imputation of unchastity about the wife by the husband is a sufficient reason for her refusing to live with him. 54 Cri L J 72 : I L R (1951) Trav-Co 593 : 1951 Ker L T 655 : A I R 1952 Trav-Co 562 (563) (Pt A) (Pr 1).

SECTION 402

——S. 402—Power of Court under — Application by person detained under Preventive Detention Act— Scope of inquiry and duty of Court—The information obtained and relied on by the Magistrate need not satisfy the strict rules regarding admissibility of evidence before a judicial tribunal. See Preventive Detention Act, Ss. 3 and 7. 52 Cr L J 1089 : A I R 1951 T C 217 (DB).

——S. 402—Writ of Habeas Corpus —Whether S. 34 Cl. (1) does not oust Court's jurisdiction to entertain application under S. 402.

Section 34, Cl. (1) does not operate as a complete ouster of the jurisdiction of the High Court. See Public Safety—Travancore Emergency Powers Act (1 of 1122), S. 29 (1). 1950 Ker L T 544 (DB).

——S. 407—Scope — If controls powers of Court of Session or High Court under S. 409—Section 407 does not in any way control the absolute power vested in those Courts. See Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 498. 53 Cri L J 909 : AIR 1952 T C 182 (DB).

SECTION 408

——Ss. 408 and 409—Bail—Factors to be considered in disposing of bail applications.

It would be a relevant circumstance for High Court in disposing of applications for bail to consider whether there are reasonable grounds for believing that the prisoner is guilty of a non-bailable offence. See Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 498. ('50) 1950 Ker L T 223.

——Ss. 409, 407 — Criminal P. C. (1898), Ss. 498 and 496 — Scope — Powers of High Court and Court of Session are not controlled by S. 496. See Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 498. AIR 1952 Trav-Co 182 (DB).

——S. 409 — Scope — Powers of Sessions Judge — Person proceeded against under S. 104 — Order for interim bond — Subsequent cancellation and committal to custody on ground of breach of conditions of interim bond—Order by Sessions Judge for release on bail—Jurisdiction.

Under S. 409, Travancore Criminal P. C, the High Court and Court of Session have very wide powers to admit to bail any person who is detained in jail. It is open to the Sessions Judge if he is moved by that person to enlarge him on bail under S. 409. It cannot be said that the Sessions Judge has no jurisdiction to enlarge him on bail in view of S. 407; that section does not in any way control the absolute power vested in the court of Session and the High Court under S. 409. 58 All 589, Foll. 1951 Ker L T 620 ; 1952 Cri L J 909 : A I R 1952 Trav-Co 182 (182) (pt A) (Pr 2) (DB).

——Ss. 409 and 408—Bail—High Court's jurisdiction —Circumstances to be considered.

The jurisdiction of High Court under S. 409 is not fettered by S. 408. It would be reasonable to consider whether grounds exist for believing that the prisoner is guilty of a non-bailable offence. That the offence may be repeated and that the Sessions Judge had refused to exercise his discretion should be taken into consideration. See Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 498. ('50) 1950 Ker L T 223.

—S. 413—Application for discharge—Forfeiture of bonds—Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 502.

The Magistrate is bound to take the necessary step for the arrest of the accused when once the surety has applied for an order of discharge and before taking such steps, it will not be proper to seek to enforce the bond against the sureties. When the accused surrenders to the Court or is brought before it as per the action taken under S. 413 the sureties are ipso facto discharged and there will be no further question of forfeiture of their bonds. 1950 Ker L T 670 : AIR 1951 Trav-Co 24 (24) (Pr 2).

The accused having been discharged under S. 250 Criminal P. C. the order of confiscation fell under S. 430, Travancore Criminal P. C., and since the appropriate remedy was an appeal under S. 430 (4) and not a revision application S. 436 did not apply and the revision application was not competent. TRAVANCORE EDUCATION CODE (1909)

PREAMBLE

——Pre.—Scope—Statutory authority of.

The Travancore Education Code is only a body of executive instructions having no statutory authority. The rules therein can be amended by the Government in exercise of its executive authority, and they do not have the force of law. 1958 Ker L T 233 : 1958 Ker L J 357 : ILR (1958) Kerala 558 : A I R 1958 Ker 290 (295) (Pt B) (Pr 15) (DB).

——Pre. — Travancore Education Code — Effect — Application for writ — Maintainability — Education Code and Orders by Government or Department issued from time to time have no statutory force and the infringement of the provisions of the Code or such Orders cannot be made subject matter of judicial review. See Constitution of India, Art. 226. 1958 Ker L T 124.

——Pre. — Private Secondary School Scheme—Sanskrit School recognised as academic school — Latter orders of Government regarding conversion of Sanskrit schools into academic schools—Effect—School is entitled to all benefits of scheme. 1958 Ker L T 124.

RULE 68A

——R. 68-A—Evidence as to age — School Admission Registers—Entries in—Evidentiary value—Failure to examine parents or guardians in support of school records—Effect — Probative value of such entries in comparison with entries in electoral roll—Elections—Setting aside—Minority votes—Proof. Entries in the—School registers are of far less evidentiary value than the entries in the electoral roll and are, therefore, of little avail to show that age shown in the electoral roll is wrong. See Evidence Act (1872), S. 35. A I R 1963 Ker 18 (DB).

——Rr. 145 (n) and 146 (a) and (g) — Madras Grant-in-aid Code, R. 2—Madras Elementary Schools Rules, Part II, Chap. I, R. 14 — Grant-in-aid — Right under Art. 19 (1) (f), if infringed — Discrimination —(Constitution of India, Arts. 19 (1) (f), 19 (1) (g) and 14 and 13).

Neither under statute, nor under any principle of common law, have the school institutions or their managers any title to, or property in grants-in-aid until they are actually paid. Government are free to determine the manner in which they will, if they chose, give recognition and aid. No person can claim a fundamental right to run a recognised aided school. The rules governing these matters are not laws and there can be no question of offending Art. 14 which speaks of equality before the law and the equal protection of the laws. That article can apply only if the rule complained against is a law within the meaning of Art. 13. 1958 Ker L T 233 : 1958 Ker L J 357 : ILR (1958) Ker 558 : A I R 1958 Ker 290 (298, 299) (Pt G) (Prs 34, 36, 37, 39) (DB).

——S. 32 (1)—Applicability — Dying declaration — Admissibility — Conditions — Person surviving for 4½ months after statement — Effect—First information to Police by deceased — Use of as substantive evidence—"Legality".

In order that a statement may be admissible as a dying declaration under S. 32 (1) of the Evidence Act it need not necessarily refer to the cause of the death of the person making such a statement. When a statement is made by a person as to any of the circumstances of the transaction which resulted in his death, that statement will be admissible in evidence in a case in which the cause of the death of that person is a point in issue where the statement refers to what took place at the time of the occurrence or incident, between the accused and the deceased and it contains a statement falling within the second part of S. 32 (1) of the Evidence Act, that will be admissible in evidence as a dying declaration, although the person making the statement survived for about 4½ months after the statement was made and died only subsequently. Similarly the first information report given by the deceased to the Police, if it falls under S. 32 (1), may be admitted and relied upon as substantive evidence and not merely as corroborative evidence. 53 Cr L J 386 : (1950) K L T 306 : 5 A I Cr D 41 : AIR 1952 TC 70 (70, 71) (Prs 4, 5) (DB).

TRAVANCORE EZHAVA ACT (3 of 1100 ME)

——S. 3 (b) — Normal rule of Marumakkathaym Law relating to acquisition of property by Karanavan is saved—(Tarwad—Marumakkathayam Law). AIR 1955 NUC (Trav-Co) 2205 (DB).

SECTION 4

——S. 4 (11)—'Makkathayam property'—Meaning of. See Ezhava Act (3 of 1100), S. 32. 1957 Ker L T 756.

——S. 9—Constitutional validity — (Constitution of India, Arts. 14 and 15).

It was contended on behalf of an Ezhava wife that S. 9 should be struck off as offending against Arts. 14 and 15 of the Constitution in that while it fixes the maximum compensation payable by a husband at Rs. 2 000 it fixes the maximum compensation payable by a wife at the lesser figure of Rs. 500; Held, that such inequality or discrimination as there is in this provision is in favour of the wife, and it does not lie in the mouth of the petitioner (wife) who has been thus favoured to complain against it. It is also clear that the difference in the sums payable as compensation is founded on a reasonable classification, an obvious basis for the classification being that, as a rule, a husband has more means than a wife. 1957 Ker L T 326 : 1957 Ker L J 379 : I L R (1957) Ker 459 : AIR 1957 Ker 94 (94) (Pt C) (Pr 3) (DB).

■ ——S. 11 — Hindu Marriage Act (1955), Ss. 4, 19, 29 (2)—Section 4 does not repeal Travancore Ezhava Act, 1100—Petition for dissolution of marriage under S. 8 of Travancore Act — Jurisdiction to entertain petition is governed by Travancore Act and not by Central Act. See Hindu Marriage Act (1955), S. 4. AIR 1958 Ker 39 (FB).

——S. 11—Six months period—Computation.

The period of six months in S. 11 is not a period of limitation but is opportunity given for the purpose of repentance and reconciliation. That opportunity was in a way affected by reason of the pendeney of the Revision petition in the High Court or by the stay ordered by it, and it might even be said that these favoured rather than hindered a reconciliation. But, however that might be there is no provision in the Act suspending the period once it has begun to run. 1957 Ker L T 326 : 1957 Ker L J 379 : I L R (1957) Ker 459 : AIR 1957 Ker 94 (94) (Pt A) (Pr 2) (DB).

——S. 13 — Suit relating to tarwad properties — Mother as guardian.

There is nothing in the Travancore Ezhava Act to indicate that the mother is in any way disqualified from functioning as the guardian of her minor children. See C. P. C. (1908), O. 32, R. 3. AIR 1959 Ker 169 (DB).

——S. 13—Minor child—Right of father.

The father is not the legal guardian of his minor children regarding their right and interest in their tarwad property. 1959 Ker L R 574 : 1959 Ker L T 897 : 1957 Ker L J 688.

——Ss. 15 to 19, 32, 33 and Parts IV and VII (ii) —Scope — Makkathayam property—Property given exclusively for benefit of donee — Devolution of—Rule—Malabar law—Succession.

Section 32 makes it clear that it is open to any individual to give property for the exclusive benefit of any of his wives or for the exclusive benefit of any of his children without his children or other children, as the case may be, getting any right over that property. In such a case the property given by the husband or the father, as the case may be would be the separate property of the donee for whose exclusive benefit he gave it, notwithstanding the fact that it is makkathayam property falling within the definition of that term given in the Ezhava Act and so intestate succession in respect of such makkathayam property given exclusively for one individual alone will be governed by the provisions in Part IV which govern intestate succession both in respect of self-acquired and separate properties. Makkathayam property and separate property are not mutually exclusive terms, and a property which is makkathayam property of one individual can at the same time be his separate property. It is not therefore correct to say that the devolution of Makkathayam property will not be affected by the provisions in Part IV of the Ezhava Act. Nor is it correct to say that the devolution of Makkathayam property is governed by Part VII (ii) of the Act which only provides for the quantum of the share an individual is to get on partition of the makkathayam property given by a person to his wife and children in common and has nothing to do with intestate succession in respect of makkathayam property given either solely to one individual or in common to him and others. When makkathayam property is given and belongs exclusively to one individual, ordinarily, intestate succession in respect of that property will be governed by the provisions in Part IV, and since S. 33 of the Ezhava Act allows any individual member of an Ezhava tarwad to get himself or herself exempted from the operation of the provisions in Part IV of the Act, when an individual has obtained exemption from Government under that section the rules of intestate succession laid down in Part IV will not apply to him or her; in such a case, when exemption is obtained intestate succession will be governed by the rules of ordinary Marumakkathayam law. Under the ordinary Marumakkathayam law, the children of a pre-deceased son are never the heirs of an intestate female. When a female dies leaving no member in her own thavazhi, i. e, no issue in the female line under the ordinary Marumakkathayam law as obtaining in Travancore, her, mother's thavazhi takes the properties left by the intestate. Her issue in the male line gets no right at all to the properties left by her. 1957 Ker L J 1028 : 1958 Ker L T 8.

——Ss. 18 and 19—Effect of.

The effect of Ss. 18 and 19 is that when an Ezhava female dies leaving only a child by a pre-deceased son and no other issue such child will be her heir and will take the whole of her self-acquired or separate property even though that grand child is not a member of her thavazhi as that term is understood in ordinary Marumakkathayam law. Because of Explanation II to S. 19 the expression 'thavazhi' occurring in Part IV of the Ezhava Act has a special meaning different from what it means under the ordinary Marumakkathayam law and includes not only the issue in the female line but also the issue both in the male and female lines how-low-soever. 1957 Ker L J 1028 : 1958 Ker L T 8.

● ——Ss. 18 and 19, Explanation (2) — Explanation, if takes in all issues of intestate female — Heirs, if take properties as tenants-in-common or as joint tenants—(Marumakkathayam Law—Thavazhee.)

Explanation II to S. 19 would take in all the issues of the intestate female including both the descendants of her daughters and the descendants of her sons, and not merely the members of her thavazhee as that term is understood in ordinary Marumakkathayam Law, among the group of persons on whom, under S. 18, her self-acquired and separate properties would devolve on her death : 1945 Trav L R 122, Approved.

The heirs under S. 18 take the properties devolving on them as tenants-in-common and not as joint tenants. 1945 Trav L R 122, Explained and distinguished. Nanu Divakaran v. Velumpi Nani. 1954 Ker L T 812 : ILR (1954) Trav-Co 1280 : AIR 1955 Trav.Co 71 (73) (Prs 5, 8) (FB).

—S. 19, Expl. I—Acquisition or accretions to joint property by manager — Nucleus — Sufficiency of—Nature of property acquired — Burden of proof—Allowance of compensation to Manager.

The presumption of Marumakkathayam Law is that when it is established that the family had joint property the nature and value of which may have formed the nucleus of the property in question, one alleging that the property was self acquired has to prove that the property in dispute was acquired without the help of the joint family property. The Manager is entitled to reasonable compensation for his exertions. See Marumakkathayam Law — Joint family. 1962 Ker L T 99.

● —Ss. 28, 29, 30—Suit for partition—Jurisdiction of Court.

The ordinary jurisdiction of a Civil Court to entertain a partition suit instituted by one or more members of an Ezhava tarwad, which is essentially a suit of a civil nature, is not in any way barred by Ss. 28, 29 and 30. There is nothing in these sections or in any of the other sections of the Act to prevent a partition being effected in an Ezhava tarwad with the consent of all the members of that tarwad. 1947 T L R 167 and A I R 1952 Trav Co 563, Dist. —Ss. 28, 29, and 30—Partition—Consent.

Under Ss. 28, 29 and 30 the members of an undivided Ezhava tarwad cannot get divided from their lineal ascendant during her life-time without her consent. However under S. 30 each collateral thavazhee represented by the majority of the adult members thereof may claim an outright partition of property over which the tarwad has the power of disposal. SECTION 29 ● —Ss. 29, 30—Suit for partition — Jurisdiction of Court—(Civil P. C. (1908), S. 9.

The ordinary jurisdiction of a Civil Court to entertain a partition suit instituted by one or more members of an Ezhava, is not in any way barred by Ss. 28, 29 and 30. See Travancore Ezhava Act (3 of 1100 M E), S. 28. AIR 1958 Ker 178 (FB).

—S. 29—Partition—Consent. Under Ss. 28, 29 and 30 the members of an undivided Ezhava tarwad cannot get divided from their lineal ascendant during her life-time without her consent. See Travancore Ezhava Act (3 of 1100, M. E.), S. 28. AIR 1953 T. C. 460 (DB).

● ——S. 32 — Gift by person of some of his property to his wife and some to his grandson—There is contrary intention within S. 32 — Each takes property exclusively.

Where by a gift deed the donor gave some of his properties to his wife and other to his grandson he thus divided his properties between his wife and grandson and showed a contrary intention within the meaning of S. 32. The intention manifested that each was to take exclusively. Kunju Kesavan v. M. ——S. 32—Self-acquired property of male Paravar—Devolution—Children whether take specific shares.

One-half of the property acquired by a male member of a Paravar family devolves on his children and the other half on his seshakars. The children inherit the property as a group and not as tenants-in-common each having a specific share. The change brought about by S. 32, Ezhava Act is not applicable to Paravars also. See Malabar Law. 1958 Ker L T 113.

——S. 32—Applicability—The change brought about by S. 32 of the Ezhava Act is not applicable to Paravars. See Marumakkathayam Law—Succession. 1958 Ker L T 113 : 1958 Ker L J 331.

——S. 32—Effect of—Gift of Makkathayam property in favour of wife after the Act—If enures for benefit of wife alone or wife and children.

The effect of S. 32 is that ordinarily, makkathayam property obtained after the passing of the Act should be taken by the wife and children as tenants-in-common even though the instrument by which the property was acquired stands in the name of one individual alone, but if a contrary intention is expressed in the instrument effect should be given to that intention. 1957 Ker L J 1028 : 1958 Ker L T 8.

● ——S. 32 — Special custom of inheritance among misradayis—Legal effect of if abrogated.

As per the special custom that prevailed among misradayis each of the wives of a deceased misradayi Ezhava, along with the children born to her from him, will get an equal share in the half share of his assets. The Ezhava Act does not alter these rules of Marummakkathayam Law in relation to Makkathayam properties obtained before it came into force. AIR 1953 Trav-Co 460 (461) (Pt A) (Pr 2) (DB).

SECTION 33

——Ss. 33 and Parts IV and VI (ii)—Scope—Makkathayam property — Property given exclusively for benefit of donee—Devolution of—Whether governed by rules in Part IV or Part VI (ii) — Effect of exemption under S. 33. See Travancore Ezhava Act (1100), S. 15. 1958 Ker L T 8.

● ——S. 33—Scope of —Conditions for exemption.

There is nothing in S. 33 to indicate that the applicants' sworn statement is a condition precedent to the granting of the exemption applied for. The only two conditions postulated by the section are that there must be an application presented within a period of six months from the commencement of the Act and that Government must, after making such inquiry as may be necessary, be satisfied as to the truth of the application. SECTION 75

● ——S. 75 — Limitation—Period of six months expiring on holiday — Complaint presented on next day of sitting of Court—If barred—General Clauses Act (Travancore), S. 10.

The period of six months prescribed in S. 75 of the Travancore Factories Act is governed by S. 10 of the General Clauses Act, 1072; if therefore that period of six months expires on a gazetted holiday, the complaint under the Factories Act can be presented on the next day when the Court sits. A complaint so presented cannot be dismissed as being beyond time. The Factories Act being an Act passed long after the General Clauses Act, S. 10 of the latter Act (as also the rest of Chap. II) will apply to the Factories Act, when no contrary intention appears in the latter enactment. State v. SECTION 5

——Ss. 5, 6 and 8—Modes of interference by State in management of Devaswoms—Assumption of management by State—Position of trustee.

The Act contemplates two modes of interference by the State in the management of Devaswoms. One is assumption of management as per the provisions of S. 5 (1) and the other is the exercise of superintendence in the management as per S. 5, sub-s. (2). When it is a case of assumption the Ooralan or trustee who was taking part in the management of the Devaswom prior to the date of assumption loses all his right in that Devaswom from that day. His duties also end. This is made plain by S. 8. ILR (1956) Trav-Co 16 : A I R 1957 Trav-Co 316 (318, 319) (Prs 3, 4) (DB).

SECTION 14

——S. 14 (3) (c) — Scope — Computation of Agricultural Income —Special Contribution to Employees' Provident Fund by the Assessee not allowable deduction under the section.

Section 14 (3) (c) of the Act specifies one of the allowances to be made in computing agricultural income and that allowance is limited to expenses incurred by the assessee in actually raising the crop from which the agricultural income is derived. 1963 Ker L J 175 : 1963 Ker L T 245.

——Ss. 14 (3) (g), 10 (1), 14 (4) (c) — Computation of taxable agricultural income—Special contribution to Employees' Provident Fund—Allowable deduction —S. 14 not exhaustive.

A contribution or deposit by way of additional remuneration is a payment which in the hands of the recipient is chargeable under the head 'salaries' and therefore contribution made by the assessee to its Employees' Provident Fund is a permissible deduction in computing the taxable agricultural income, though it is not an allowance specifically enumerated in S. 14 (3) or the Rules, because the enumeration of allowable deductions in S. 14 (3) is not exhaustive. SECTION 20 ——Ss. 20 (3) (a) Cls. (iii) and (iv), 37— Scope of — Transfer in favour of wife and children in 1941— Applicability of S. 20—(Income Tax Act (1922), S. 16 (3) (a) Cl. (iii).

The sub clauses (iii) and (iv) of S. 20 (3) (a) are not intended to subserve the same purpose as S. 37. Section 37 deals with settlement, etc., which in the opinion of the Income Tax Officer, have been effected for the purpose of evading liability to assessment. Sub-clauses (iii) and (iv), on the other hand, deal with transfer of assets otherwise than for adequate consideration. The sub-clauses are intended to widen the area of taxable income by including in that category certain forms of income, which but for the said provisions would not have been taxable at all.

A transfer of assets in favour of wife and children may be, in certain cases, only an arrangement for providing maintenance to these dependent relations. If expenditure is incurred directly by the assessee for such purpose out of his income, he could not claim any allowance. 1957 Ker L J 63 : (1957) 32 I T R 161 : 1957 Ker L T 1308 : ILR (1957) Ker 89.

●——S. 32 (1)—Applicability—Proviso.

Section 24 (1) of the Indian Income-Tax Act (corresponding to S. 32 (1) of Travancore Act) was meant for a set off of profits arising under different heads. Where profits and losses to be adjusted arose under the same head, S. 24 (1) or the Proviso 1 thereto (corresponding to S. 32 (1) of the Travancore Act or the Proviso to it) cannot apply. See Income-Tax Act (1922), S. 24 (1). AIR 1959 S C 713.

——S. 32 (1)—Income Tax Act (1922), S. 24 (1)—Applicability.

Section 32 (1) only enables an assessee to set off the loss under one head of income against the profits under another head and the proviso also can apply only to such cases. But where there is only one head of income there is no scope for the application of S. 32 (1) or the proviso to that section. See Income-Tax Act (1922), S. 24 (1). AIR 1956 Trav-Co 51 (DB).

——S. 4(1), Proviso—Jurisdiction—Claim by Receiver to property covered by sale-deed to stranger as belonging to insolvent — Power of Insolvency Court to decide.

The proviso to Cl. (1) of S. 4 of the Travancore Insovency Act places an express limitation on the Insolvency Court. Where the Official Receiver applies to the Insolvency Court praying for a declaration that the properties covered by a sale-deed executed by the insolvent and others in favour of the insolvent's wife really belongs to the insolvent, and that the vendee was only a benamidar for the insolvent, the Insolvency Court can proceed to investigate and adjudicate upon the claim put forward by the Official Receiver, only if it is satisfied that it is one arising out of the insolvency of the debtor or if the respondent (vendee) has agreed to such an investigation and adjudication by that Court. TRAVANCORE LAND ACQUISITION ACT (11 of 1089 ME)

——Land Acquisition Act (1894), S. 23 — Mode of assessment of compensation — The value to be ascertained is the value to the seller of the property in its condition at the time of expropriation with all its existing advantages and with all its possibilities excluding any advantage due to the carrying out of the scheme for which the property is compulsorily acquired. See Land Acquisition Act (1894), S. 23. AIR 1953 Trav-Co 242 (DB).

——Ss. 3 (b) and 18 — Scope — 'Person interested', meaning of.

A "person interested" does not mean a person whose interest the Collector is prepared to admit. "Person interested" includes all persons claiming an interest in the compensation. See Land Acquisition Act (1894), S. 3 (b). AIR 1957 Kerala 152 (DB).

SECTION 4

——Ss. 4 and 6 — Procedure for acquisition — Not discriminatory—Act not invalid—Act is an "existing law" within protection of Art. 31 (5) (a) of Constitution—Constitution of India, Arts 14, 19 (1) (f).

What is guaranteed under Art. 14 of the Constitution is equality before the law or the equal protection of the laws. The law here means the statute, and the equality that is assured is under the same law enacted by the State, and not under different laws where the persons come to stay on account of a merger of different States. The Travancore Land Acquisition Act enacted in 1914, is obviously an 'existing law' within the protection of Art. 31 (5) (a). Hence Art. 19 (1) (f) is not attracted. The Act does not contain any provision for acquisition of land for Companies. It authorises acquisition for public purposes only. But a public purpose need not be a State purpose. The provisions of S. 25 are mandatory. Sub-s. (2) of it prescribes a penalty for the omission to make a claim as required by S. 9 (2), Land Acquisition Act (1894) unless it is properly accounted for, and it is the party, who wants to be exempted from the penal consequences prescribed by it, that should move the Court to permit him to make the claim for enhanced compensation. Provisions of S. 40 of the Travancore Land Acquisition Act regarding service of notice have to be observed in effecting service of notices under the Act. If, however, a party, in response to an irregularly served notice, participates in the further proceedings before the Land Acquisition Officer, he cannot turn round and attack the proceedings on the ground that service of notice was not proper. Further a notice under S. 12 (2) of the Act not served in accordance with the provisions of S. 40 of the Act would not bind a party; but where the party admits that he had authorised his samprathy to receive notice on his behalf, the service of notice on the Samprathy would at best be irregular but not illegal. TRAVANCORE LAND TAX PROCLAMATION (1121 M E)

PREAMBLE

● ——Preamble, Ss. 3, 4, 5, 6, 15 and 16 — Proclamation applies to all lands in State except those coming under S. 6 irrespective of whether they are subject to any land tax or not.

The proclamation was meant to levy a basic tax upon all the lands in the State irrespective of the question whether they were or were not then subject to any land tax. This conclusion is confirmed by S. 6 of the Proclamation where the classes of lands outside the ambit of the Proclamation have been excluded and the second clause of which provides for the exemption from basic tax levied under the Proclamation of any land or class of lands thereafter.

The use of the word 'any' after the words 'in lieu of' in S. 5 (2) is meant to connote the idea that the basic tax was in lieu of existing tax, if any. The provisions contained in the Preamble which refers to all lands and the 4th section which enact that there shall be charged or levied in respect of all lands in the State of whatever description would show that this is the true interpretation of the second clause of the 5th section. 1954 Ker L T 603 : ILR (1954) T C 1011 : AIR 1954 Trav-Co 522 (523) (Pt A) (Pr 2) (FB).

——S. 3 — Proclamation applies to all lands in State except those coming under S. 6 irrespective of whether they are subject to any land tax or not. See Travancore Land Tax Proclamation (1121), Preamble. AIR 1954 Trav-Co 522.

SECTION 4

● ——Ss. 4 and 6 —Order imposing basic tax on desa ozivoos lands — Validity — The proclamation by its Preamhle as also by the 4th section envisages a scheme for levying basic tax on all lands in the State to which the Proclamation will apply. See Constitution of India, Art. 14. AIR 1954 Trav-Co 522 (FB).

● ——S. 4—Proclamation applies to all lands in State except those coming under S. 6 irrespective of whether they are subject to any land tax or not. See Travancore Land Tax Proclamation (1121), Preamble. AIR 1954 Trav-Co 522 (FB).

SECTION 6

● ——S. 6—Order imposing basic tax on desa ozivoos lands—Validity—The orders of Government were not discriminatory and as such did not offend Art. 14 of the Constitution. See Constitution of India, Art. 14. AIR 1954 Trav-Co 522 (FB).

● ——S. 6—Proclamation applies to all lands in State except those coming under S. 6 irrespective of whether they are subject to any land tax or not. See Travancore Land Tax Proclamation (1121), Preamble. AIR 1954 Trav-Co 522 (FB).

● ——S. 6 (2)—Exemption under, when operative.

Under S. 6 (2) of the Proclamation the act of exemption or the process of exemption is the notification in the Government Gazette. The notification is the act. If there is no notification there is not the act. The notification is not, therefore, merely evidence of the act or order. It is the act itself. In order to attract the application of Cl. 2 of S. 6 there must be a notification.

Held, on facts of the case that there being no notification of the Government in the Gazette under S. 6 (2) exempting the lands of the petitioner from the operation of the Proclamation, the steps taken by the Government towards exempting the lands were of no effect even though the Government merely sanctioned certain lands being exempted. ● ——S. 15—Proclamation applies to all lands in State except those coming under S. 6 irrespective of whether they are subject to any land tax or not. See Travancore Land Tax Proclamation (1121), Preamble. AIR 1954 Trav-Co 522 (FB).

● ——S. 16 — Proclamation applies to all lands in State except those coming under S. 6 irrespective of whether they are subject to any land tax or not. See Travancore Land Tax Proclamation (1121), Preamble. AIR 1954 Trav-Co 522 (FB).

TRAVANCORE LIMITATION ACT (6 of 1100 M E)

See also under Limitation Act (1908).

PREAMBLE

——Preamble—Pronote executed in 1946—Suit instituted in 1952 held was within limitation. See Limitation Act (1908), S. 30 as added by Act 3 of 1951. AIR 1960 Ker 137 (DB).

——Preamble, Art. 137 — Cause of action already barred — No extension of limitation in favour of Government — Limitation Act (1908), Preamble, Art. 149).

The Article cannot be in voked in respect of claims which had become barred by limitation prior to the date on which the Government acquired the right to institute suits for the enforcement of the same. Case-law referred. ILR (1954) Trav-Co 267 : AIR 1954 Trav-Co 451 (455) (Pt E) (Pr 8) (DB).

——Preamble—Money left with vendee for payment to decree-holder of vendor—Failure—Suit for enforcing lien and personal remedy—Limitation—Starting point — Law applicable — The cause of action both for enforcing the lien on the properties and enforcing the personal remedy against the vendee arose on the day the properties were sold in Court auction. The law applicable was the one in force at the time when the cause of action arose. See Limitation Act (1908), Preamble. AIR 1952 Trav-Co 466 (DB).

● —S. 7—Execution by attaching decree-holder — Original decree-holder under disability — Period of limitation applicable would be the same as in S. 7 of the Act. See Civil P. C. (1908), O. 21, R. 53 (2). AIR 1956 Trav-Co 13 (FB).

●——S. 7—Benefit under—Assignee of person under disability — Whether entitled to—Quaere — Whether an assignee from a person under disability would be entitled to the benefit of S. 7 of the Act. AIR 1956 Trav-Co 13 (14) (Pt A) (Pr 4) (FB).

——S. 8 — Benefit under — If confined to original person under disability—If available to assignees or transferees from such person.

There is no warrant for the view that the benefit accruing to a person under S. 8 is a personal benefit which cannot be availed of by others who have acquired the rights of that person. It cannot be said that the section confers any such exclusive personal right in favour of a person under disability. Unlike under S. 6 the benefit is available also to others who acquire their rights from that person. 1951 K L T 557 : AIR 1952 Trav-Co 33 (34) (Prs 3, 4) (DB).

■——S. 8—The term "discharge" used in S. 8 of the Act, is not confined to the discharge of pecuniary liability only but also includes release of rights in respect of immovable property and even the right to institute suit. See Limitation Act (1908), S. 7. AIR 1950 Trav-Co 57 (FB).

——S. 14 — Applicability — Conditions — Defect of jurisdicttion or other cause of like nature — Meaning of. Where there is a defect of jurisdiction of such a character as to make it impossible for the Court to entertain a suit either at its inception, or at all events as to prevent it from deciding it on the merits, then the case would come under the category denoted by the expression 'other cause of a like nature' occurring in S. 14 of the Travancore Limitation Act. See Limitation Act (1908), S. 14. AIR 1951 Trav-Co 26 (DB).

SECTION 15

——S. 15—Stayed by iniunction or order—The period for which further execution of the decree in execution of which the property was purchased, was stayed cannot be excluded under S. 15 of the Act. See Limitation Act (1908), S. 15. AIR 1954 Trav-Co 383.

——S. 17—Legal representative — Right to institute suit when accrues—(Limitation Act (1908), S. 17).

The legal representative gets only the rights of the deceased person and can get no higher rights. Therefore, if the deceased person, if he was alive could have brought the suit only in 1121 M.E. his death earlier, would not entitle his legal representative to bring the suit earlier. A I R 1936 P C 309; 71 Mad L J 831, Rel. on. 1957 Ker L T 1161 : 1957 Ker L J 1104 : ILR (1958) Ker 169.

——S. 18 and Art. 151—Fraud vitiating sale and fraud keeping judgment-debtor in ignorance of his right to apply—Distinction — Fraud antecedent to sale—Allegations of absence of notice under O. 21, Rr. 22 and 66 — Judgment-debtor coming to know sale only within a week of application—S. 18 applies—Limitation under Art. 166 starts only from date of such knowledge. See Limitation Act (1908), S. 18. A I R 1964 Ker 88.

—— S. 18—Applicability—'Knowledge' — Particulars required to constitute.

The knowledge required by S. 18, Limitation Act, is not mere suspicion; it must be such knowledge as would enable the person defrauded to seek his remedy in Court. It must be knowledge that a particular decree was passed against him in a particular suit in favour of a particular person and for a particular sum. 47 Bom 85; 30 T L J 311, Appl. 1950 Ker L T 653 : 1950 Trav Co L R 647 : AIR 1951 Trav Co 107 (108, 109) (Pt B) (Prs 5, 6).

SECTION 19

——Ss. 19 (1) and 21 (1)—Payment and acknowledgment by hypothecator — Binding effect on hypothecated property and its alienee before payment — (Limitation Act (1908), Ss. 19 (1) and 20 (1)).

Such an acknowledgment is binding not only upon the hypethecator but also upon the hypothecated property and third parties to whom the title to the hypothecated property had passed before the payment and acknowledgment. 2 T L J 213; A I R 1942 Mad 200 and A I R 1943 Mad 395, Foll. 1957 Ker L T 1163 : 1957 Ker L J 1104 : ILR (1958) Ker 169.

●——S. 19 (1)—Acknowledgment under—Essentials — Acknowledgment by person not liable at time of acknowledgment — Does not amount to acknowledgment in law. See Limitation Act (1908), S. 19. A I R 1964 Mad 169 (FB).

●——S. 19 — Acknowledgment after assignment of equity of redemption — Will not be a valid acknowledgment so as to bind the assignee. See Limitation Act (1908), S. 19. A I R 1953 Trav-Co 196 (FB).

——S. 19—Statement in writing expressly or impliedly saying that debt has been discharged — Statement will not amount to sufficient acknowledgment. See Limitation Act (1908), S. 19, Expl. 1. AIR 1952 Trav-Co 518 (DB).

——S. 19 — Written statement containing denial of liability — Alternative plea that time for payment has not yet come — There is no valid acknowledgment. See Limitation Act (1908), S. 19. AIR 1952 Trav-Co 518.

——S. 19, Expl. IV—Scope—Joint decree—Acknowledgment by one judgment-debtor — Effect of — If saves limitation as against others—Art. 166, Expl. 1—Effect of.

In the case of a joint decree passed against several persons an acknowledgment of liability by one of them will not save limitation against the others, but will be effective as against the judgment-debtor who makes such acknowledgment. ILR (1952) Trav-Co 28 : 1951 Ker L T 683 : AIR 1952 Trav-Co 310 (313) (Pt B) (Pr 11) (DB).

——S. 19 and Art. 166 — Redemption decree against several mortgagees — Acknowledgment of right of redemption by one only — If saves limitation for execution against all or even as against party acknowledging—Piecemeal execution of redemption decree.

In view of the doctrine of indivisibility of a mortgage, it must be held that an acknowledgment by one only of several mortgagees of the liability to be redeemed is not sufficient to keep the right to redeem alive even as regards the interest of the party acknowledging. There cannot be a piecemeal execution of a redemption decree which on its terms is one and indivisible. ILR (1952) Trav-Co 28 : 1951 Ker L T 683 : A I R 1952 Trav-Co 310 (314) (Pt D) (Pr 17) (DB).

——Ss. 19 and 20 — 'Agent duly authorised' — Debt due by Nair woman — Acknowledgment or part payment by husband — If saves limitation — Implied agency—If exists between spouses.

No agency exists as between a husband and wife belonging to the Nair Community, and the fact of matrimonial relationship between the debtor and the person making the endorsement or part-payment will not therefore lead to any implication as to the existence of an agency or an authority to make the acknowledgment or part-payment to either of the spouses to act on behalf of the other in any transaction. In the absence of proof therefore of authority given to act as agent of the debtor, an acknowledgment or part-payment made by the husband of a Nair woman in respect of a debt due by her, cannot operate to save limitation under S. 19 or S. 20. A I R 1952 Trav-Co 255 (256) (Pt A) (Pr 3).

——S. 19—Co-judgment-debtors:— Acknowledgment by one — If saves limitation against others. An acknowledgment made by one of the several persons jointly liable under a decree otherwise than as agent of his co-judgment-debtors, cannot operate to save limitation as against any of the judgment-debtors other than the person making the acknowledgment. See Limitation Act (1908), S. 19. A I R 1952 Trav-Co 78 (DB).

——S. 19—Acknowledgment—Admission of execution of document giving rise to liability coupled with denial of liability due to limitation in written statement—Expression of willingness to discharge obligation if found enforceable by Court — Sufficiency to save limitation.

The expression of willingness to pay, though on conditions, taken along with the admission of the source of the liability would be an acknowledgment of liability sufficient, to save the claim from being barred by limitation under S. 19, Travancore Limitation Act. 1950 Ker L T 640 : A I R 1951 Trav-Co 93 (94) (Pr 1) (DB).

——S. 23—Applicability—Newly added defendants—(Civil P. C. (1908), O. 34, R. 1)—(Contract Act (1872), S. 43).

A the mother of B, C and D executed a hypotheca in favour of E and F minors and their mother G. Subsequently on 22-6-1110, E instituted a suit in forma pauperis for partition of his family properties. The right under the hypothecation bond was included as a partiable asset and the prayer with respect to it was that there should be a decree for recovery of the amounts due thereunder and that those amounts should also be divided among the sharers. Likewise a claim under another hypothecation bond was also included in the suit ; and similar prayers were made regarding the amounts due under that bond as well. The pauper application was in due course registered as a suit. In that suit B, C and D were not impleaded but A alone was the defendant. On 13-12-1118, E moved the Court that as besides partition, recovery of the amounts as per two hypothecation bonds were also included in the suit, the suit was open to the objection of multifariousness and that the claims for the amounts due as per two bonds may be registered as two separate suits besides the suit for partition. The Court allowed the prayer and directed E to file separate plaints in respect of the bonds. The new plaint in respect of the claim under the hypothecation bond executed by A was filed on 26-3-1119 and in that B, C and D were also added as parties which was going beyond the direction given by the Court in the matter.

Held, that the suit against B, C and D was barred as it must be considered to have been instituted against them only on 26-3-1119. This view was based not on S. 22, Indian Limitation Act, which was different from the law enacted in S. 23, Travancore Limitation Act which governed the case but was based on the fact that no substitution or addition of any defendants as envisaged in S. 23, Travancore Act ever took place in this case. Held, that as against A there ought to be a decree for the full amount of the principal with interest thereon and not only for so much of the debt as was found by the trial Court to be binding on B, C and D. A executed the bond in her own right and as the guardian of the minors and therefore she was in her personal capacity liable for the whole debt. The lower Court therefore was wrong in limiting the decree to a part of the claim, when its finding was that the suit as against her was not barred by limitation. AIR 1957 Trav-Co 305 (307) (Prs 5, 6) (DB).

——S. 23—Additional party impleaded at subsequent stage—Period of limitation will be calculated on basis of date of plaint —(Civil P. C. (1908), O. 1, R. 10 (2)). AIR 1952 Trav.Co 408 (409) (Pt B) (Pr 2) (DB).

——S. 23—Limitation Act (1908), Ss. 18 & 22 and Art. 166 — Suit to set aside sale on ground of fraud instituted by sons of judgment-debtor within limitation — Addition of judgment-debtor as co-plaintiff after limitation—Effect.

Notwithstanding the fact that a new relief was claimed in respect of another item the cause of action for the suit remained the same and therefore S. 23, Travancore Limitation Act was applicable to the case. Consequently the suit was not barred by limitation even as regards A. AIR 1952 Trav-Co 397 (398) (Prs 4, 5) (DB).

——S. 27—'Without interruption'— An agreement for an altered mode of enjoyment of an easement would not amount to a discontinuance of the easement itself. See Limitation Act (1908), S. 28. AIR 1955 N U C (Trav-Co) 6002.

SECTION 29

——S. 29—Principle of—The ordinary rule is that the expiry of the period prescribed for the commencement of an action results in the contemplated remedy being barred though not in an extinguishment of the right or title. The provision contained in S. 28 is an exception to this general rule. See Limitation Act (1908), S. 28. AIR 1954 Trav-Co 451 (DB).

——S. 29, Art. 122— Starting point under Art. 122—Failure to institute suit within limitation — Effect—(Indian Limitation Act (1908), S. 28).

Under Art. 122 the cause of action for avoiding the kanam deeds executed by the manager of a deva-swom and for seeking recovery of possession of the properties from the tenants in possession on the strength of such documents arises on the date when such deeds were executed. The Ooralars of such Devaswom were bound to institute suits for reliefs in such directions within twelve years from the dates of transfer under the documents. The result of the non-exercise of such a right within the period prescribed by Art. 122 was that the Devaswom lost that right for ever by virtue of S. 29 of the Travancore Limitation Act which corresponds to S. 28 of the Indian Limitation Act. ILR (1954) Trav.Co 267 : AIR 1954 Trav.Co 451 (453) (Pt C) (Pr 6) (DB).

SECTION 109

——S. 109—Suit for past profits on basis of registered agreement— The claim for past profits from 1118 for nearly five years till date of suit was within time. See Limitation Act (1908), Art. 116. AIR 1952 Trav-Co 498 (DB).

ARTICLE 8

——Art. 8—Suit under — Order rejecting objection to delivery by person setting up independent title — Appeal dismissed for default — Restoration application also dismissed — Appeal rejected — Suit to set aside order dismissing objection — Starting point— The time runs from the date of the order of the execution Court rejecting objection to delivery and not from the date of the order passed on an infructuous and incompetent appeal or revision against the order. See Limitation Act (1908), Art. 11-A. AIR 1955 Trav-Co 51 (FB).

ARTICLE 9

——Art. 9—Decree against joint family — Suit for setting aside sale. The sale held in execution of the decree would be binding on the son if debt incurred was not for immoral or illegal purposes. As the interest of the son is also sold in execution he is not entitled to recover possession without setting aside the sale. See Limitation Act (1908), Art. 12. A I R 1956 Trav-Co 262 (DB).

——Art. 9 (a) — Decree in contravention of S. 31 of Travancore Nayar Act. The decree would be null and void. See Travancore Nayar Act (2 of 1100), S. 31. AIR 1954 Trav-Co 60 (FB).

——Arts. 9 and 165—Applicability — Decree against minor — Execution — No proper representation of minor—Sale —If binding —Suit by minor to set aside —Limitation —Execution proceedings held not binding on minor —Suit for declaration that minor is not bound by sale can be treated as application under S. 47, Civil P. C. (1908)—Limitation is under Art. 181, Limitation Act. (Civil P. C. (1908), S. 47). 1952 Ker L T 1 : ILR (1951) Trav-Co 728 : AIR 1952 Trav-Co 136 (DB).

ARTICLE 23

——Art. 23—Claim for damages against Union of India for loss to goods consigned by railway — Suit validly instituted in Munsif's Court within the period of limitation — Change of law pending suit prescribing District Court as forum for institution of such suit — Plaint returned for presentation to such Court represented by plaintiff—No question of the suit in District Court being barred by limitation can arise. See Limitation Act (1908), S. 3. ILR (1964) 1 Ker 355.

——Art. 26 — Improvement on land by trespasser — Suit for compensation on eviction — Governed by Art. 120 and not by Art. 36. See Limitation Act (1908) Art. 36. 1965 Ker L T 666 : (1965) 1 Ker L R 489 : ILR (1965) 2 Ker 173 : 1965 Ker L J 858 : A I R 1966 Ker 72 (DB).

——Art. 35—"Person bound by an order" — Person proceeding under S. 145, Criminal P. C. in individual capacity as manager of school and filing suit for possession of this building in identical capacity as the owner of property : Held, there was only one capacity in which he functioned. See Limitation Act (1908), Art. 47. AIR 1952 Trav-Co 434 (DB).

——Art. 35—Final order—Order respecting possession of immovable property under S. 145, Criminal P. C. —Applicability — The mere observation by the High Court in the concluding portion of the order that the peaceful possession of a particular party to the proceeding should be maintained until that party is evicted in due course of law will not make it a final order within the meaning of Art. 35. See Limitation Act (1908), Art. 47. AIR 1952 Trav-Co 195 (DB).

——Art. 35—Applicability—'Order respecting possession of property' — Order of High Court quashing preliminary order under S. 128, Criminal P. C.— Observation in such order respecting possession— Effect of.

Article 35 does not apply where there has been no order for possession by a Magistrate under S. 128, Travancore Criminal P. C. Where in proceedings under S. 128, two orders are contemplated, the preliminary order passed by the Magistrate is itself quashed by the High Court it cannot be said that any observation made by the High Court in quashing the preliminary order is a 'final order' under S. 128, so as to attract the operation of Art. 35, Limitation Act. 1951 Ker L T 210 : AIR 1952 Trav-Co 195 (197) (Pt B) (Prs 8, 9) (DB).

ARTICLE 50

——Art. 50—'Money received for the plaintiff's use — Meaning — Suit for recovery of excess freight. Article 62 will apply to the suit, and the suit brought more than three years from the last payment by the plaintiff is barred by limitation. See Limitation Act (1908), Art. 62. AIR 1957 Trav-Co 61 (DB).

ARTICLE 53

——Art. 53 — Unregistered chitty security bond— Suit —When barred against surety.

If the suit is not brought against the surety within 3 years of the first default is barred by limitation. See Limitation Act (1908), Art. 83. 1949 T C L R 88.

ARTICLE 54

——Art. 54—'Where a day is specified for payment'.

When the day is clearly specified by implication on account of the terms of the bond, the requirements of the first column in Art. 66 would be fulfilled. See Limitation Act (1908), Art. 66. AIR 1958 Ker 246 (DB).

——Art. 72—Limitation Act (1908), Art. 85 —"Mutual open and current account"—An account is open when the balance is not struck or though struck is not accepted or acknowledged as correct, a running or continuous account is an account current. See Limitation Act (1908), Art. 85. A I.R 1953 Trav-Co 391 (DB).

ARTICLE 84

——Art. 84—Applicability—Starting point—Mortgage dues paid to mortgagee — Mortgagee once again recovering the amount from person to whom the mortgaged property was allotted in partition in family of mortgagor — Suit by person for recovery of amount— Limitation. The suit being within 3 years within time. See Limitation Act (1908), Art. 97. A I R 1955 N U C (Trav-Co) 3469.

——Art. 91 — Limitation Act (1908), Preamble, Arts. 83, 111 and 132 — Money left with vendee for payment to decree-holder of vendor — Failure—Suit for enforcing lien and personal remedy—Limitation —Starting point—Law applicable.

The cause of action arose on the date the properties were sold in the Court auction. The claim was not barred under Art. 91 and the law of limitation applicable to the case was the one in force at the time when the cause of action arose. See Limitation Act (1908), Preamble. A I R 1952 Trav-Co 466 (DB).

——Art. 101 — Compromise containing contract and fixing time of performance — Suit for specific performance—Limitation—Computation—Day on which compromise was executed—Exclusion of.

In computing the period of limitation prescribed by Art. 101 of the Travancore Limitation Act for a suit for specific performance of a contract embodied in a compromise fixing a period of time for performance of the contract the day on which the compromise was signed must be excluded. 1951 Ker L T 191.

ARTICLE 103

——Art. 103—Applicability—Starting point — Mortgage dues paid to mortgagee—Mortgagee once again recovering the amount from person whom the mortgaged property was allotted in partition in family of mortgagor—Suit by person for recovery of amount—Limitation — The suit being within 3 years as not barred by limitation. See Limitation Act (1908), Art. 97. A I R 1955 N U C (Trav-Co) 3469.

——Art. 103—Compensation for breach of contract.

The suit for claim would come under Art. 103 (corresponding to Art. 115, Limitation Act (1908)) and the plaintiffs are bound to sue within 3 years from the date of breach of contract to make annual payment. See Limitation Act (1908), Art. 115. A I R 1953 Trav-Co 193 (DB).

——Art. 104 — In respect of jenmon lands there is charge on kanom holding for michavarom and other dues—Suit for recovery of such dues — Limitation—The suit is governed by Art. 119 and not by Art. 104 and the plaintiff is entitled to recover the arrears of dues for 12 years before the date of suit. See Limitation Act (1908), Art. 116. 1956 Ker L T 313.

——Arts. 104 and 109 — Limitation Act (1908), Arts. 116 and 120 — Suit for past profits on basis of registered agreement—The claim for past profits from 1118 for nearly five years till date of suit was within time. See Limitation Act (1908), Art. 116. A I R 1952 Trav-Co 498 (DB).

——Art. 105—Absence of words 'on demand'.

It does not affect the application of Art. 105, since a promissory note in which no time for payment is specified is one payable on demand under S. 18 of the Negotiable Instruments Act. See Limitation Act (1908), Art. 73. A I R 1955 Trav-Co 141 (DB).

——Art. 109 — Improvement on land by trespasser—The Article applicable is Art. 120 and not Art. 36, Limitation Act (1908). See Limitation Act (1908), Art. 36. 1965 Ker L T 666 : (1965) 1 Ker L R 489 : I L R (1965) 2 Ker 173 : 1965 Ker L J 858 : A I R 1966 Ker 72 (DB).

——Art. 109 — Suit for recovery of excess freight—Art. 62, Limitation Act will apply. The suit brought more than 3 years from the last payment by the plaintiff is barred by limitation. See Limitation Act (1908), Art. 62. A I R 1957 Trav-Co 61 (DB).

——Art. 109 — Limitation Act (1908), Art. 120—Applicability — Suit against surety for recovery of money withdrawn by him from Court — Starting point.

Article 109 applied, and the starting point of limitation was the complete exoneration of the surety from the obligation undertaken by him under the security bond executed by him to Court. See Limitation Act (1908), Art. 120. A I R 1952 Trav-Co 546 (DB).

● ——Arts. 109 and 132 — Applicability — 'Right or interest' in immovable property — What amounts to establish right of plaintiff to collect revenue from occupants of lands, to restrain Government from making collections and for recovery of collections wrongly made—Limitation.

A suit for possession under Art. 132 of the Limitation Act, assumes that the defendant is in possession and that the plaintiff seeks to eject him. There must be a prayer in such a suit, express or implied, for dispossessing some one from the property or from the interest therein for which the claim is made in suit. But suits which are declaratory in their nature are governed by Art. 109 and not by Art. 132. A right to be placed on the revenue registers is not a right or interest in immoveable property. A claim to recover tax or revenue wrongly collected by the Government from tenants in possession of the lands, which the plaintiff claims he is entitled to collect is a claim sounding in damages, and a suit for recovery of the same, is not concerned in any manner with any right, title or interest in immoveable property (lands concerned). It is a claim personally against the wrongdoer and suit to enforce such a claim cannot obviously be regarded as a suit to recover any interest in immoveable property within the meaning of Art. 132, Travancore Limitation Act, the cause of action for the suit arises out of the tortious conduct of the defendant. State v. Ganpathi Valia Raja, 1951 Ker L T 316 : I L R (1951) Trav-Co 194 : A I R 1951 Trav-Co 232 (235, 236) (Prs 8, 16) (FB).

——Art. 119 — Unpaid purchase money — Vendor's lien—Suit—Limitation.

Money kept in the hands of a vendee to pay off prior encumbrances is in substance a part of the purchase money due to the vendor and the vendor is entitled to recover the same from the vendee and as a first charge on the property sold and the suit in regard to it is governed by Art. 119. See Transfer of Property Act (1882), S. 55 (4) (b). A I R 1955 N U C (Trav·Co) 5072.

——Art. 120 — Principle of — Hypothecation bond securing instalments—Default clause—Effect.

In enacting Art. 120 the principle was recognised that in a case of hypothecation bond securing instalments and providing a default clause, the creditor, by a demand in writing, could affect the nature and the incidents of the cause of action itself so as to practically make unimportant the distinction between the date of the accrual of the cause of action and the date of the commencement of limitation. There is, therefore, no justification for considering instalments accruing after date of demand as separate and distinct from the instalments which accrued due before date of the demand. The only limitation which the third column of the Article would impose is that the demand should be in writing and it should have been made before the last instalment fell due. If this happens all the instalments that stood defaulted makes up but one claim and that claim is enforceable in suit filed within 12 years of the date of demand. 1956 Ker L T 848 : A I R 1956 Trav·Co 239 (239, 240) (Pt A) (Prs 4, 5) (DB).

TRAVANCORE MALAYALA BRAHMIN ACT (3 of 1106 ME)

——S. 1—Parties governed by Act—Applicability of Hindu law — Alienation of illom property—Right of woman-member of illom by marriage to question its validity—If at the time of her marriage there was no member of the illom who could have questioned the debt she is not competent to do it. See Hindu Law. AIR 1954 Trav-Co 371 (DB).

——S. 1 — Applicability — Nambudiri Illom—Debts by Karnavan incurred prior to Act—Law applicable — Binding nature of — Burden of proof — Duty of creditor.

The Travancore Malayala Brahmana Act cannot be applied to transactions entered into anterior to the coming into force of that Act; such cases have to be decided according to the law prevailing at the time of those transactions.

Under that law, debts contracted by the Karnavan of the illom would be presumed to be binding on the illom or tarwad. This presumption also extends to debts contracted by junior members on behalf of the illom if they had the antecedent consent of, or if they had been afterwards accepted and ratified by, the Karnavan. Junior members who are not parties to the contracting of debts are entitled to impeach such debts as not binding on them and to show how they are not binding. The onus may be discharged by showing that the moneys borrowed were actually used for non-illom purposes or that the financial position of the illom was such that no loan at all need have been taken. If this is shown the burden shifts on to the creditor who may either prove the existence of necessity or bona fide inquiries by him as to the existence of necessity as a result of which he was satisfied as to the necessity on the faith of which he lent the money. If he shows this he would get a decree though in fact it might be found that no necessity really existed. The creditor is not bound to see to the application of the money lent. It is not also necessary for a creditor who advances money for discharging an existing debt of the illom or family when the Karnavan, the senior Anandiravan and several other Anandiravans all alike admit the existence and binding character of that debt, to make any further inquiry as to the existence of the debt. 6 M I A 393, Foll. SECTION 5

——S. 5—Kanom of Illom — Property — Validity—Essentials.

Three things are necessary for the validity of a kanom of illom property by a karnavan. There must be consideration, there must be illom necessity, and there must be the written consent of all the major members of the illom. Absence of written consent required by statute renders a transaction bad.

An acceptance or acquiescence are matters for pleading and not merely for evidence, and in the absence of a pleading on the matter, no amount of evidence is of any avail. ILR (1963) 2 Ker 238 : AIR 1964 Ker 144 (146) (Pt C) (Prs 5, 6).

——S. 5 — Property belonging to Illom — Sale of—Validity—Conditions of.

The sale of a property belonging to Malayala Brahmin Illom effected subsequent to the passing of the Malayala Brahmin Act can be upheld as valid only if all the three conditions specified in S. 5 and fully satisfied, viz., that the sale was for consideration, that it was for proper necessity binding on the Illom and that all the major members of the Illom have given their written consent to the sale. 1957 Ker L J 258 : I L R (1957) Kerala 367 : 1957 Ker L T 799 : AIR 1957 Ker 103 (104) (Pt A) (Pr 2).

——S. 5—Object—Transaction in violence of section—Validity.

The plain purpose of the Section is to restrict the power of the Karnavan in the matter of transactions mentioned in the section in a particular manner. What is prohibited by the section is a transaction as mentioned in that section which has not had the consent in writing of all the adult members of the family. The provision is clearly mandatory and would render any transaction in violence of it, void and inoperative as against the members for whose benefit the provision was made and whose consent has not been obtained as provided therein. AIR 1952 Trav-Co 368 (369) (Pt A) (Prs 5, 7) (DB).

——S. 5 — "Immovable property"—Term applies to property over which family has mortgage right—(General Clauses Act (1897), S. 3 (25))—(Travancore General Clauses Act (2 of 1072), S. 2). AIR 1952 Trav-Co 368 (369) (Pt C) (Pr 7) (DB).

——S. 5—"Immovable property."

It is not necessary that the various kinds of transactions which are prohibited under section 5 must all be available in respect of an item of property in order that it may be regarded as immovable property under section 5, because transactions must be read not collectively but distributively. A I R 1952 Trav-Co 368 (369) (Pt D) (Pr 6) (DB).

——S. 8—Applicability — Presumption as existence of necessity.

If the plaintiff has let in evidence to prima facie satisfy the Court that he made enquiries about the existence of necessity and has also acted in good faith in the absence of any counter-evidence on this point the Court is bound to proceed on the basis that there was a necessity existing at the time of the loan. 1959 Ker L J 979 : 1959 Ker L T 1338.

——S. 83 (1) (a)—Gist of offence — Disobedience of direction to stop vehicle—Absence of proof of police officer being in uniform—Offence, if committed.

The gist or essence of the offence of contravention of S. 83 (1)(a), Travancore Motor Vehicles Act, is the disobedience by the driver of a motor vehicle of a direction to stop the vehicle given by a police officer in uniform. To bring the guilt home to the driver it must be proved that the police officer who gave the direction to stop was in uniform at the time. In the absence of such proof no offence under S. 83 (1)(a) can be said to be committed by the driver who fails to obey the direction. 1950 Ker L T 650 : 5 A I Cr D 68 : 52 Cri L J 1075 : A I R 1951 Trav-Co 215 (216) (Pr 5) (DB).

TRAVANCORE NANJINAD VELLALA ACT (6 of 1101, M. E.)

——S. 17—Scope.

It cannot be said that S. 17 is intended to cover cases where the widow or widows co-exist with the mother of the deceased when the succession opens. When there are no lineal descendants the section entitles the widow to enjoy the whole of the intestate's property until her death or re-marriage without any power of alienation. I L R (1952) Trav-Co 214 : AIR 1952 Trav-Co 355 (356) (Pr 3) (DB).

——S. 26—Determined share of female member of tarwad—Succession.

Section 26 clearly provides that the undivided share of every member of Nanjinad Vellala tarwad determined as at the time of death of that member shall be treated as his separate property. In the instant case there being no child or any lineal descendants of her mother and her husband having remarried, the share devolved on her father. A I R 1951 Trav-Co 74 (75) (Pr 2) (DB).

SECTION 1

——S. 1—Adverse possession—Mortgagee in possession — Sale of equity of redemption to mortgagee without consent of all adult members of tarward — Under the Nair Act the written consent of all the adult members of the tarwad is necessary for a sale of tarwad property even in case where it is supported by consideration and tarwad necessity. See Limitation Act (1908), Art. 144. AIR 1955 N U C (Trav-Co) 1914 (DB).

——S. 1 —Karnavan —Alienation —Consideration — Barred debt—(Malabar law—Tarwad — Alienation—Karnavan).

Even if the debt was barred by limitation, it was competent for the karnavan before the Nair Act and for all adult members thereafter, to pay the creditor and relieve the family of its indebtedness. If the recovery of a debt becomes barred by the law of limitation, it does not mean that the debt is extinguished ; it means merely that the remedy through Court is unavailable. A barred debt will constitute good consideration for an agreement to pay and will also therefore be good consideration for an alienation. 1954 Ker L T 171 : A I R 1954 Trav-Co 401 (401) (Pt A) (Pr 3).

——Ss. 13 and 17 — Scope — Nair male leaving separate property and Makkathayam and marumakkathayam heirs — (Travancore Nayar Act (2 of 1100), S. 10 (c)—Limitation Act (1908), Art. 44).

Section 13 contemplates a case where a deceased Nair male leaves both makkathayam marumakkathayam heirs and has therefore no application to a case where he has left no undivided marumakkathayam heirs. Under S. 17 the heirs take the property in equal shares with right to individual partition.

What the law enacts is that the shares would constitute the separate property of the heirs, or in other words they take the property as tenants-in common. 26 Trav L J 284 (FB), Rel. on. When the shares which the widow and children obtain in the property constitute the separate property of each of them then under S. 10 (c) of the Nair Act (II of 1100) the mother is the legal guardian and the time to question the alienation effected by her as guardian of her minor children is that prescribed by Art. 44, Limitation Act. SECTION 2

—S. 2 (7)—"In the absence of such male member" —Meaning of — Temporary absence of Karnavan—Right senior female—"Karnavan".

The senior female member cannot take up Karnavanship merely because the Karnavan of the tarwad is temporarily absent from the tarwad. 1957 Ker L T 653 : 1957 Ker L J 670.

SECTION 4

● —Ss. 4 and 8 (1) — Dissolution of marriage — 'Mutual consent evidenced by a registered instrument', meaning of — Mutual consent and registered instrument manifesting this mutual consent are both conditions preceding effective dissolution of marriage — Subsequent marriage performed after alleged mutual consent but prior to execution and registration of document evidencing mutual consent — Subsequent marriage held void.

Held, that the dissolution of prior marriage was effected only after the date the subsequent marriage took place. SECTION 7

—S. 7 (4)—Rules under, Rr. 35 to 39, 46 and 47 — Power of High Court—Dismissal of petition for dissolution of marriage—Interference by High Court.

The powers of the High Court in hearing appeals under the Nair Act are very limited and it is not open to the High Court to go behind the verdict and see whether there is sufficient evidence to justify the same. 1963 K L T 700, Rel. on. 1958 Ker L T 447 : 1957 Ker L J 869.

——S. 7 (3)—Rules under Rr. 46 and 47—Powers of High Court in appeal.

The powers of the High Court in appeal against decisions in matrimonial causes under the Nair Act are limited. Section 7 (4), Travancore Nair Act, provides for an appeal to the High Court by an aggrieved party from any decision of the District Munsiff relating to dissolution or award or both; but this right is subject to rules, framed under the Act. 1953 Ker L T 700 : ILR (1953) Trav-Co 994 : A I R 1954 Trav-Co 158 (159) (Pt A) (Pr 4) (DB).

——S. 7 (8)—Finding of fact—No interference.

The decision on the facts in respect of the grounds for dissolution is the decision of the delegates. The question whether the husband was guilty of habitual cruelty is a question of fact and the trial Court is bound to accept the finding returned by the delegates and it is not open to the High Court, to examine the evidence on this point afresh.

——S. 22—Gift in wife's name — Children's right to get share therein.

Under S. 22, it is unnecessary that the gift of a property by the husband to the wife is to be in the name of the Children also even if it stands in the sole name of the wife, the Children would get a share in the same unless a contrary intention was expressed in the instrument of gift. 1947 T L J 426, Foll. 32 T L J 665, Dissent from. SECTION 23

——S. 23 — Scope and applicability indicated. AIR 1955 NUC (Trav-Co) 2202 (DB).

——Ss. 25 and 26 — Exchange of taward immovable property for convenience of enjoyment is invalid — Word 'sale' in S. 25—Meaning — Right of alienee — Alienee before being ousted entitled to get back his property — Contract Act (1872), Ss. 64 and 65 — — Transfer of Property Act (1882), Ss. 54, 55, 118 and 120.

An exchange of tarwad immovable property for the property of another is within the mischief of S 25 of the Travancore Nayar Act, the word 'sale' therein having been used in a generic sense to mean an outright alienation, such an exchange cannot therefore be made by a karnavan unless it is supported by adequate tarwad necessity.

A mere convenience of enjoyment cannot be a necessity and an exchange made for such a purpose is invalid. 1962 K L T 952, Rel. on.

The alienee of such an invalid alienation before being ousted from tarwad properties has to be given back his property. 1961 K L T 1022, Rel. on. (1963) 1 Ker L R 480 : 1963 Ker L J 395.

——Ss. 25, 26, 27 — Marumakkathayam Law — Tarwad—Alienation — Legal necessity—Sale of tarwad property for acquiring mortgage rights in another immovable property not one for legal necessity — Manifest advantage, what is — Evidence Act (1872), Ss. 101 to 104 — Alienation of Tarwad property—Burden of proof of legal necessity.

An alienation of immovable properties of a tarwad by competent persons for the purpose of acquiring other properties can be upheld only if such acquisition is to the manifest advantage of the tarwad. The acquisition contemplated by the rule, however, is the acquisition of immovable properties and not of some rights only in such properties. Acquisition of mortgage rights in immovable property by sale of tarwad property, therefore, does not constitute legal necessity binding on the tarwad. Tarwad necessity has to be established by the alienee of the impugned sale. ——S. 25 — Acquisition of mortgage right — Equity of redemption not belonging to tarwad — Not a tarwad necessity.

Acquisition of a mortgage right in a property, the equity of redemption whereof does not belong to the tarwad, cannot be a necessity of the tarwad to alienate any of its properties. 1961 Ker L J 1226 : 1961 Ker L T 1018.

——S. 25—Tarwad—Managing member — Alienation — Essential requirement — Alienation by sole major member—No presumption of necessity — Alienation for acquiring fresh acquisitions — When can be upheld.

Under S. 25 for an alienation by the karnavan or managing member of a tarward to be valid three requirements are essential (1) consideration, (2) tarward necessity and (3) the written consent of all the major members of the tarward. The lack of any one of these conditions will necessarily make the transaction void, ineffective and not binding on the tarwad. 1953 K L T 452, Foll. 1961 Ker L T 626.

——S. 25—Tarwad — Decree against Karnavan in his individual capacity—Execution against tarwad or its properties. It cannot be stated that any decree obtained against the sub-tarwad karnavan in his individual capacity was as karnavan. A decree obtained in contravention of the provisions of S. 31 of the Act is null and void, so far as that tarwad and its properties are concerned. See Travancore Nayar Act (2 of 1100), S. 31. ——S. 25—Sale of tarwad property — Consideration and necessity—Burden of proof—Duty of vendee.

In the case of sales of tarwad property, when consideration for the sale transaction was found, tarwad necessity for the same cannot be presumed. Vendees are bound to prove consideration as well as necessity. 1957 Ker L J 617 : 1957 Ker L T 577.

——S. 25—Alienation of tarwad property—Presumption of necessity. When the alienation is for consideration and with the written consent of all the adult members of the tarwad a presumption of necessity will arise. ——S. 28 — Karnavan, alienation by, for consideration—Necessity is not presumed in case of alienation after the Act — It is a matter of proof. See Travancore Nair Act (2 of 1088), S. 25. AIR 1954 Trav Co 401.

——S. 31—C. P. Code (1908), S. 47, O. 34, R. 1—Hypothecation of tarwad properry — Subsequent partition—Property allotted to a sub-tarwad—Suit to enforce mortgage — Sub-tarwad not impleaded as party — Decree not binding on members of sub-tarwad—Karnavathi of sub-tarwad joined as subsequent encumbrancer and not in her representative capacity—Objection by her — S. 47, C. P. Code not applicable.

Held, that the karnavathi of the sub-tarwad was party to the suit only as a subsequent encumbrancer and not as representative of her sub-tarwad and the objections by her could not be regarded as objections on behalf of the sub-tarwad and as such; they were not within the purview of S. 47, C. P. Code. Krishna Pillai Balakrishna Pillai v. ——S. 31—Suit against tarwad — Karnavan need not be impleaded as such.

It was not necessary under S. 31 that in the party array the Karnavan must be described as such. It is enough if the decree discloses that it is against the tarwad with necessary parties on record. There must be sufficient indication to show that the decree claimed is against the tarwad. AIR 1954 Trav-Co 487, Rel. on, 1959 Ker L T 984 : 1959 Ker L R 917 : 1959 Ker L J 1095.

——S. 31—Tarwad—Decree against Karnavan in his individual capacity — Execution against tarwad or its properties — (Travancore Nayar Act (I of 1088), S. 25.)

A decree obtained against a member or members of a Nayar Tarwad in contravention of the provisions of S. 31 of the Act (II of 1100) is null and void, so far as that Tarwad and its properties are concerned. If, in execution of such a void decree purported to have been obtained against the tarwad properties belonging to the same are sold, then the Court sale will also be null and void. AIR 1954 Trav-Co 60 (FB), Rel. on. 1957 Ker L J 1006 : AIR 1958 Ker 98 (102) (Pr 25) (DB).

● ——S. 31—Applicability—Suit instituted by or on behalf of tarwad.

The language of the section does not admit of a construction so as to extend its operation to proceedings started on behalf of the tarwad.

Starting proceedings in Courts for enforcing claims of the tarwad is a part of the management and no restraint has been placed upon the karnavan in the matter of initiating actions. This consideration also corroborates the conclusion that the scope of the operation of S. 31 is confined to the case where the tarwad is arrayed as a defendant or as a party proceeded against. 1951 Ker L T 144 : AIR 1951 Trav-Co 225, Overruled. ● ——S. 31—Suit by Karnavan on behalf of tarwad—Decree in favour of tarwad—Appeal—Karnavan not described as such—Effect.

To regard the decree of a lower Court in favour of the karnavan or other member on behalf of the tarwad otherwise than as a stage in the whole litigation and as creating a right in favour of the tarwad immediately, of which it could be deprived only in an appeal to which it is made a respondent in the manner provided by S. 31, would be fraught with very serious consequences which could not have been contemplated by the Legislature. The competency of the plaintiff to represent his cause continues and should continue in all the various stages of the litigation. Govinda v. Narayanan. 1954 Ker L T 620 : ILR (1954) Trav-Co 737 : A I R 1954 Trav-Co 487 (491, 492) (Pt C) (Prs 13, 14) (FB).

——S. 34 (2)—Scope—Consent not obtained—Suit—If barred—Civil P. C. (1908), O. 33, R. 1.

It is enough if the consent prescribed in the section be made out in the course of the suit—Non-procurement of such consent before the institution of the suit cannot be taken to debar a suit for partition. A I R 1958 Ker 158 : 28 Trav L J 821, Foll. Application for leave to sue as a pauper by a person who is not possessed of means to pay the Court-fee on the plaint cannot be refused on the ground that consent as required by S. 34 (2) has not been obtained. 1960 Ker L J 1253 : (1960) 2 Ker L R 536 : 1960 Ker L T 1247.

——Ss. 34 to 37—Scope—Jurisdiction of Civil Court to entertain partition suit—If affected.

It is clear from a reading of Ss. 34 to 37 that they do not deal with the jurisdiction of the Civil Court to entertain a suit for partition by one or more members of a Nayar tarwad. There is nothing in those sections to show that the Court's jurisdiction in that matter is either expressly or impliedly barred. If a decree for partition has been passed ignoring the restrictions and limitations imposed by Ss. 34 to 37 the utmost that could be said is that it is a wrong decree; but it cannot be said that it is a decree passed without any jurisdiction and that the decree and all other proceedings in the suit are void ab initio. 1957 Ker L J 1206 : 1958 Ker L T 211 : A I R 1958 Ker 158 (160) (Pt B) (Pr 5) (DB).

——Ss. 34 and 36 — Partition of tarwad — Property allotted to Groups — Members of individual Groups do not take inter se as tenants-in-common.

Under Ss. 34 and 36 of the Nair Act a female descendant and her children can claim partition of their share of the tarwad properties with the consent of the female ascendant. A I R 1953 Trav-Co 436 (436) (Pr 2) (DB).

SECTION 35

——Ss. 35, 36 and 37, 34 — Sections whether deal with jurisdiction of Civil Court to entertain partition suit — (Civil P. C. (1908), S. 9)—Sections. 34 to 37 do not deal with the jurisdiction of the Civil Courts to entertain a suit for partition. See Travancore Nayar Act (2 of 1100 M E) S. 34. A I R 1958 Ker 158 (DB).

——S. 35—Applicability.

Section 35 has no application to a case in which there are more than one adult member in the tarwad at the time of the partition. The section applies only to a tarwad consisting of one adult member and minors. 1957 Ker L T 176 : I L R (1957) Ker 298 : 1957 Ker L J 177 : A I R 1957 Ker 69 (73) (Pt B) (Pr 7) (DB).

SECTION 36

——S. 36—Applicability to voluntary partition.

Section 36 applies only to compulsory partitions and not to voluntary partition. 1957 Ker L T 176 : I L R (1957) Ker 298 : 1957 Ker L J 177 : A I R 1957 Ker 69 (73) (Pt C) (Pr 8) (DB).

——S. 37 — Right of senior anandiravan of collateral thavazhi to demand outright partition of tarwad—Right ceases on his death and goes to next senior anandiravan — His widow and children do not succeed to the right — Suit for partition by senior anandiravan — Death of plaintiff — His wife and children cannot continue suit — (Civil P. C. (1908), O. 22, R. 3).

The right conferred by S. 37 on the senior anandiravan of a collateral thavazhi to claim an outright partition of property over which the tarwad has power of disposal on behalf of that thavazhi is a right conferred on him by virtue of his status as the senior anandiravan of that thavazhi. That right ceases with his death and is not one which will devolve on his wife and children. A I R 1952 Trav-Co 402 (403) (Prs 2, 3) (DB).

● ——S. 39—Tarwad — Partition — Share taken by female member — Nature of property — Does not retain character of tarwad property — Remains her absolute property even on birth of daughter to her (Majority view).

(Majority view, M. S. Menon, C. J. dissenting) :— In effect, S. 39 of the Travancore Nayar Act has declared that the share of a member, whether male or female allotted on tarwad partition, is alienable and heritable, and this is without any reservation, condition or limitation. In other words, such share constitutes his or her separate property descendible to the heirs on intestacy.

The property obtained by a Nair female towards her share under an outright partition in her tarwad, therefore does not any longer retain the character of tarwad property, and even on the birth of a daughter to her, it does not cease to be her separate property or become the property of her tavazhi so as to destroy her absolute powers of disposal in respect of that property. 1954 Ker L T 862 : A I R 1955 Trav-Co 55 (FB), Dissented from.

M. S. Menon, C. J. (Contra) : — Property has often been the vehicle of dormant rights and liabilities, apart from consent or contract ; and there is nothing incongruous in saying that the property that a female member obtains in tarwad partition becomes her tavazhi property on her becoming a mother. Two things coalesce to produce the result ; the antecedents of the property and the arrival of the child. Kalliyani Amma Bhavani Amma v. ● —S. 39—Suit for partition of tarwad — Written statement by member claiming share — Severance of status, if effected—(Malabar Law—Partition—Severance of status).

A claim in a written statement by a member of a Marumakkathayam community to whom the right to compulsory partition of his share in the family property has been extended by legislation, would effect a severance of status for him from the rest of the family. Section 40 confers on the person in management of the tarwad the right to get one-fourth of properties acquired during his management only if the acquisition was made by him with the help or aid of the income from the tarwad property and not when the properties were acquired by him with the help of the sale proceeds or of the funds raised by hypothecating or mortgaging tarwad property itself. If acquisition is of the second type it would not be a case of acquisition with the help or aid of income of tarwad property which is the condition prescribed by the section for entitling him to get one-fourth of the acquired property. SECTION 41

—S. 41 — Gift by father and his brother — Recital that property owned by them are given out of love and affection — There is no contrary intention contemplated by section — Presumption in section will apply even if it is gift by father along with his brother. 1959 Ker L T 1200 : 1959 Ker L J 1331.

—S. 41—Sale deed executed in favour of sister and brother — Sister minor and not mentioned as party to document — Recital to effect that properties have to be enjoyed in their right of management—Recitals do not amount to expression of contrary intention within section. 1959 Ker L T 1200 : 1959 Ker L J 1331.

—S. 41—Acquisitions made by Marumakkathayee woman — Character of—Presumption.

Formerly, it was held that under Marumakkathayam Law, the acquisitions of a woman, in the absence of the evidence to the contrary, were to be presumed to have been made out of funds supplied by her husband for the benefit of his wife and children. But it cannot be held that this presumption was intended to govern for all times acquisitions made by Marumakkathayam ladies. And this presumption cannot hold good in respect of acquisitions made after the customary law itself has been very much modified by statutes. In respect of such acquisitions the normal presumption under common law must prevail, ownership being determined in accordance with the apparent tenor of the title deed. Thus, the presumption recognised in the earlier decisions no longer holds good and cases of this nature have to be decided on the evidence adduced, without the aid of this presumption. TRAVANCORE PRIMARY EDUCATION ACT (8 of 1121 M. E.)

PREAMBLE

——Preamble—Travancore Primary Education Rules, R. 18—Education Code, if part of rules.

Rule 18 of the Travancore Primary Education Rules says that as a condition of recognition private school shall conform to the provisions of the Education Code as amended from time to time. It is difficult to understand how, by reason of this, the rules in the Education Code can be deemed to be rules made under S. 15 of the Act. The effect of the rule is not to incorporate the Education Code as part of the rules but to require conformance with it as a condition of recognition, and the rule itself contemplates the amendment of the Code from time to time by some outside agency. 1958 Ker L T 233 : 1958 Ker L J 357 : I L R (1958) Ker 558 : A I R 1958 Ker 290 (295) (Pt A) (Pr 14) (DB).

TRAVANCORE PROBATE AND ADMINISTRATION ACT (2 of 1105 M. E.)

——S. 16—Word "may" if to be interpreted as "shall" —Discretion of Court. See Succession Act (1925), S. 228. AIR 1951 Trav.Co 229 (DB).

——S. 16—Construction and scope—If mandatory—Discretion of Court to try question of genuineness or validity of will or to refuse grant, 'May' it means 'Shall'.

Section 16 of the Travancore Probate and Administration Act is an enabling section and is not mandatory. The word 'may' cannot be interpreted as "shall" so as to make it the duty of the Court in Travancore to make the grant mentioned in the section automatically on the production of a properly authenticated copy of a will with respect to which an application is made under the will merely on the ground that that will had been proved and deposited in a Court of competent jurisdiction situated beyond the limits of the State of Travancore. No doubt the word 'may' sometimes is used as meaning 'shall' but in the context in which it occurs in S. 16, it cannot be held that it has a compulsory meaning. The Court has a discretion to try or not to try the question of the genuineness or validity of the will, but the discretion is of the Court and a caveator cannot as of right claim to have such a question tried over again. Nor can it be said that S. 16 leave no discretion to the Court to refuse the grant asked for when the requirements of the section have been satisfied. I L R (1951) Trav-Co 126 : 1951 Ker L T 53 : AIR 1951 Trav-Co 229 (230) (Pt B) (Pr 8) (DB).

——S. 16—Scope—Application for and grant of probate — Legality — Power of Court—(Succession Act (1925), S. 228).

Section 16 of the Travancore Probate and Administration Act authorizes a Court to grant letters of administration with a copy of the will annexed and not to grant probate of the will. Probate can neither be applied for by the party nor granted by the Court under S. 16. I L R (1951) Trav-Co 126: 1951 Ker L T 53: AIR 1951 Trav-Co 229 (232) (Pt D) (Pr 15) (DB).

An express authorisation to the complainant to prefer a complaint is an essential requirement under S. 152.

TRAVANCORE PUBLIC SERVANTS (INQUIRIES) ACT (11 of 1122 ME)

——S. 1 — 'Our Government' — Means 'Council of Ministers' — (Words and Phrases)—(Constitution of India, Art. 166).

The expression "Our Government" in the Travancore Act means the Maharaja's Government, in other words, the Government of the State of Travancore. After the integration of the two States of Travancore and Cochin and the formation of the United State of Travancore-Cochin the expression "Our Government" has to be construed according to the new set-up of Government and when the Council of Ministers had come into being, it is obvious that the expression "Our Government" as adapted to fit in with the new Constitution means "The Council of Ministers." Under the Constitution, the Rajpramukh or the Governor as head of the State is in such matters merely a constitutional head and he is bound to accept the advice of his Ministers.

Where therefore, the order of the Government appointing the Enquiry Commissioner was issued after the council of ministers had passed a resolution to that effect, which must be presumed to have been communicated to the Rajpramukh in the normal course of business, it cannot be held to be ultra vires and without jurisdiction. P. Joseph John v. State of Trav-Co., (1955) S C J 221 : (1956) 1 Lab L J 235 : (1955) 1 M L J (S C) 134 : 1955 An W R (SC) 134 : 1955 S C A 85 : (1955) 1 S C R 1011 : 1955 Ker L T 351 : AIR 1955 S C 160 (165) (Pt C) (Pr 9).

——S. 2 — Satisfaction of Government — Enquiry— (Public Servants (Inquiries) Act (1850), S. 2).

The foundation for ordering a formal and public inquiry is the Government's satisfaction that there are sufficient grounds for making such an inquiry into the truth of any imputation of misconduct by a person in the service of the Government and not removable from office without their sanction. 1958 Ker L T 320 : 1958 Ker L J 752 : (1958) 2 Lab L J 724 : AIR 1958 Ker 374 (375) (Pt A) (Pr 1) (DB).

——S. 2—Enquiry cannot be ordered in case of 'irregularities'.

'Misconduct' of a servant comprises positive acts and not mere neglects or failures. It is a transgression of some established and definite rule of action, where no discretion is left, except what necessity may demand; it is a violation of definite law; a forbidden act. It differs from carelessness. 'Irregularity' is not misconduct. Where the notification under the Act, speaks of imputations not of 'misconduct' but 'Irregularity', the notification is defective. This is not cured by reading the notification along with the charges framed, since they do not form part of the notification and do not accompany it. 1958 Ker L T 320 : 1958 Ker L J 752 : (1958) 2 LabLJ 724 : AIR 1958 Ker 374 (375) (Pt B) (Prs 2, 3) (DB).

——S. 21 — Power of State Government to go behind findings of Enquiry Commissioner.

The contention that the State Government has no power to go behind the findings recorded by the Commissioner appointed to make enquiry under the Travancore Public Servants (Inquiries) Act, 1122, cannot be accepted, because under S. 21 of the Act power is given to the Government to finally pass such orders as it considers just and proper. There is no provision in the Act which debars the State Government when the report is received by them and acting under S. 21, from interfering with the findings of the Enquiry Commissioner. AIR 1963 Ker 92 (99, 100) (Pt C) (Prs 45, 46).

——S. 15 — Claim to have charge created over property by decree — Extinguishment of right over immovable property.

It is only a thing that exists that can be extinguished. When the plaintiff claims to have a charge created over a property by the decree or where the suit is one to enforce an alleged charge, but the Court decides that no charge existed, in either case it can hardly be said there is extinguishment of any right over immovable property. 1952 Ker L T 542 : AIR 1952 Trav-Co 454 (455) (Pr 5) (DB).

——S. 23 — Scope — Sub-Registrar at Headquarters of District — Powers of — Sale-deed comprising six items of property — Registration by Sub-Registrar in whose sub-district only one item (tree) alleged to exist — Validity of registration.

A sale-deed was registered in the office of the Sub-Registrar of Trivandrum; the deed was in respect of five items of immovable property which were not within that sub district but outside; the sixth item was a mango tree standing on a Trivandrum property alleged to belong to the vendor. It was contended that the sixth item was fraudulently inserted and the registration was thus a fraud on the registration law as the registration in Trivandrum was in contravention of the provisions of S. 20 of the Travancore Registration Act. It was also contended that a tree was not immovable property, that it was non-existent and that the property on which it was alleged to be standing did not belong to the vendor, and that the deed was therefore void and inoperative.

Held, that in view of the fact that the Sub-Registrar who registered the rale-deed was the Sub-Registrar at the headquarters of a District who could validly register without regard to the situation of the property under S. 23 of the Travancore Registration Act, it could not be held that the registration was invalid, irrespective of whether the mango tree was immovable property or not and whether its inclusion in the deed was fraudulent ane to evade the law of registration. 1952 Ker L T 436 : AIR 1952 Trav-Co 105 (108) (Pt A) (Pr 10) (DB).

An entry in the register of births and deaths cannot be acted upon without other evidence regarding the identity of the persons concerned when they were not sufficient indications in the entry regarding their identity. Section 17 of Travancore Act (7 of 1096) only obviates the necessity to produce the register itself to prove the entry, and it is only by invoking S. 35 of the Evidence Act that the entries in the register can be taken as furnishing proof of the truth of the facts stated in the entries. 22 Trav L J 28, Disting. Without some evidence or admission of the parties about the identity of the parents and the child mentioned in the Register of Births and Deaths, it is not safe to accept a mere entry in that register as proof of the age of the child concerned solely on the ground that there is a similarity in the mother's name and that the certified copy or the register itself has been produced as relating to the particular child by the party on whom rested the burden of proof regarding the child's age: AIR 1931 All 307 and AIR 1938 Cal 120; AIR 1949 Orissa 22, Rel. on. 1957 Ker L T 368 : 1957 Ker L J 358 : ILR (1957) Ker 408 : AIR 1957 Ker 106 (107) (Pr 4).

——Ss. 1 (c) 2, 5, 39—Revenue sale — Effect. (Travancore-Cochin Revenue Recovery Act (7 of 1951), Ss. 2 (c), 3, 6, 44).

For purposes of the Revenue Recovery Act, the registered holder for the time being of the property is the "land holder" and the defaulter contemplated in that Act is the landholder as defined in S. 1 (c). Even if the registered holder is not the real owner of the property, for purposes of the Revenue Recovery Act he, and he alone, can be treated as the land holder or owner, and a sale after notice to him will convey not merely the rights which he in fact has in respect of the property but the full ownership of the property which has to be deemed as vesting in him by virtue of the provisions of S. 1 (c). The combined effect of Ss. 2, 5 and 39 is that notwithstanding the fact that the pattadar has in fact no right at all to the property sold under a revenue sale for arrears of tax due on it, or has only a mortgage or lease-hold right in it, and the ownership of the property really vests in any other person, the revenue sale after notice to the pattadar would convey to the purchaser the full ownership over it, free of all encumbrances, and will be binding on the real owner also. By his default to have his name brought in the Revenue records as the registered holder, and by allowing the name of the person who has no right in the property or has only a mortgage or lease-hold interest in it to stand in the records as the registered holder, the real owner has put forward that person as the ostensible owner of the property; and having done so, he cannot be heard to say, after he has defaulted to pay the tax on the property and after the revenue sale for the arrears of tax that the registered holder was not the real owner of the property but only the ostensible owner and that the proceedings taken against the registered holder were not binding on him. 1956 Ker L T 313.

——Ss. 2, 39—Sale for arrears of revenue — Effect—Transfer of Property Act (1882), S. 52.

A sale held for arrears of revenue is valid and will extinguish prior encumbrances. Pending suits or decree based on mortgages or other charges created by a landholder would not in any way affect a revenue sale held under the Act for arrears of tax due from the land sold or from that land and other lands included in the same patta or Thandaper, and the auction-purchaser gets the land purchased free of all encumbrances. 28 T L J 226, Rel. on. ——Ss. 2 and 39—Scope and effect of — Revenue sale held pending execution of mortgage or charge decree — If affected by lis pendens — Title of purchaser.

The effect of Ss. 2 and 39 of the Travancore Revenue Recovery Act that buildings upon the land, and its products thereof are regarded as security for the public revenue on such land, and that all lands brought to sale on account of arrears of revenue due thereon shall be sold free of all encumbrances. A revenue sale consequently puts an end to all the charges on the land sold, whether those charges had merged in a decree of Court or not. The fact that the revenue sale is held pending execution of a charge decree in respect of the land sold is no ground for holding that the revenue sale is affected by lis pendens and will not affect the rights of the purchaser at the sale in execution of the charge decree. It has therefore to be held that pending suits or decrees based on mortgages of charges created by a landholder would not in any way affect a revenue sale held under the Travancore Revenue Recovery Act (1 of 1068) for arrears of tax due from the land sold or from that land and other lands of the defaulter included in the same patta or Thandapper and the purchaser at the revenue sale gets the land purchased by him free of all encumbrances. The revenue officers are bound to take note of a Civil Court's decision affecting immovable property and make the necessary alteration in the mutation registers. If instead of doing that they persist in going forward with the sale proceedings already initiated by them in the names of the Thandapper holders who have been declared by the Court to have no right over the property sought to be sold, the demand notices as well as other notices issued in respect of the sale to such Thandappar hodelrs cannot affect the rights of the tarwad to which it really belongs. Revenue Recovery Act are substantially same — But a notice under S. 23-A issued long after repeal of the Act cannot be treated as notice under S. 24 of T. C. Revenue Recovery Act. ——S. 23-A—Notice of demand— Service — Applicability of O. 5. R. 17, Civil P. C.

By a notice of demand, dated 2-7-1110, K was called upon to pay the prohibitory assessment and fine within seven days from the date of notice. This notice was served on him by affixure on 19-7-1110, i. e. ten days after the expiry of the period of seven days fixed in the notice. A subsequent notice issued under S. 23-A, Revenue Recovery Act, on 21-7-1110 was served by affixture on 27-7-1110 on the ground that K was not present in his house when the notice was taken to him and that he had gone out of station.

Held, that the notice of demand, dated 2 7.1110 could not be regarded as a proper notice. Further the service of notice under S. 23-A on K was not proper because under O. 5, R. 17, Civil P. C. which was applicable to such notices, it was the duty of the officer to use all reasonable diligence to effect personal service of the notice before substituted service was resorted to. Consequently there being no proper service of demand notice the revenue sale held on such notice was without jurisdiction and void: AIR 1953 Trav.Co 494 (FB), Rel. on. AIR 1957 Trav-Co 257 (258) (Pt A) (Prs 5, 6) (DB).

● —S. 23-A — Effect of non-compliance — (C. P. Code (1908), O. 5, Rr. 17 and 18.)

The provision contained in S. 23-A relating to the issue and service of demand notice is mandatory and a sale held without the service of such notice will be void.

A compliance with that provision is a condition precedent for conducting a sale under the Act. It is only if that condition is satisfied that the revenue authority will get jurisdiction to sell the immovable property of the defaulter under the Act. A sale held without the issue of a notice as prescribed by the section will, therefore, be void and not merely voidable. Case law ref.

If the issue of a written demand is a necessary condition for conducting a sale under the Act it necessarily follows that the service of that demand is an equally necessary condition. It is only if the notice is served in the manner prescribed in the Code of Civil Procedure that it can be said that the notice has been served on the defaulter. A sale held without such service of notice will therefore be a nullity.

In order to confer jurisdiction on the Tahsildar to conduct a sale under the Act it is necessary that the demand notice should satisfy the requirements mentioned in S. 23-A in all material particulars subject to the maxim 'de minimis non curat lex.'

But the only mandatory provisions relating to the service of demand notice that has to be strictly complied with is that relating to the service itself and not the one relating to the manner in which statutory proof of such service should be prepared. Any defect in the record prepared for that purpose cannot amount to non-compliance with the mandatory provision of the section and cannot, therefore, affect the jurisdiction of the revenue authority to conduct a sale under the Act. ILR (1953) T C 405 : 1953 Ker L T 802 : AIR 1953 Trav Co 494 (506 to 508, 513) (Pt C) (Prs 28 to 32, 34, 52) (FB).

● —S. 23-A—Service of notice.

When there are more than one Thandapper holders it is necessary that the demand notice should be served on all of them. Then only can it be said that there has been a service of the demand notice as provided in S. 23-A (2). ILR (1953) Trav-Co 405 : 1953 Ker L T 802 : AIR 1953 Trav Co 494 (514) (Pt I) (Pr 54) (FB).

● —S, 23-B—Immovable property must be attached before it is sold for arrears of revenue. See Travancore Revenue Recovery Act (1 of 1068), S. 24. AIR 1953 Trav-Co 494 (FB).

● —Ss. 24 and 23B—Scope — Sale without attachment—(C. P. Code (1908), S. 51 and O. 21, R. 11.)

The provision in S. 24 relating to attachment is mandatory and an attachment in the manner prescribed by S. 24 is a condition precedent for selling the property. Omission to attach the property under the section will therefore affect the jurisdiction of the revenue authority to sell it and a sale held without attachment will be null and void.

The main object of the provision is to give an opportunity to all persons who may have an interest in the property proposed to be sold to avoid the sale by paying the arrears of revenue within the appointed time. In view of the fact that a sale under the Act will extinguish the rights not only of the party to the proceedings, namely, the Thandapperholder, but also of all other persons who may have an interest in the property due importance has to be attached to the provision. There is also nothing in the Act which shows that the party to the proceedings, namely, the Thandapperholder, can waive the benefit of the provision so as to prejudice the rights of other persons who may have an interest in the property.

Section 51 (b) and O. 21, R. 11 (2) (j) (ii), Civil P. C. (1908), makes it clear that a sale may be held under the Code without attachment. But S. 23-B of the Revenue Recovery Act provides that if the arrear of revenue is not paid in terms of the demand notice "the immovable property of the defaulter may be attached and sold" implying thereby that it is necessary that the property should be attached before it is sold. There is nothing in the Act to show that a property may be sold under the Act without attachment.

The provisions contained in S. 24 relating to the particulars of the notice of attachment, and the publication of the same are mandatory provisions which should be complied with in all material particurlas in order that the revenue authority may have jurisdiction to sell an immovable property under the Act. But the last provision of the section which directs that "the publication shall also be reported to the Division Peishkar" cannot be said to be a mandatory provision. That does not relate to the mode of effecting the attachment. That is obviously a directory provision and failure to comply with it cannot in any manner affect the jurisdiction of the revenue authority to sell the property. Eravi Pillay Krishna Pillay v. Maluk Mohamed Sahul Mohd. ILR (1953) T C 405 : 1953 Ker L T 802 : AIR 1953 Trav-Co 494 (511, 513) (Pt E) (Prs 45, 52) (FB).

AIR 1957 Trav-Co 257 (259) (Pt B) (Prs 7, 8) (DB).

● —S. 32—Effect of non-compliance.

A revenue sale held without proclamation or in contravention of the notice of proclamation or against the provisions of sub-ss. (1) and (3) of S. 32 will not be a sale under the Revenue Recovery Act and will therefore be void. If the provisions of S. 32 (2) have been substantially complied with it can be said that there has been a proclamation. Failure to strictly comply with the requirements of the section relating to the publishing and the conducting of the sale may make the sale only voidable and not void.

The question whether in a particular case there has been a proclamation in the real sense will have to be decided on the facts of the case. If the requirements of S. 32 (2) as to the particulars of the notice of proclamation and as to the publication of the same have been substantially complied with it can be said that there has been a proclamation of the sale. But if they have not been even subsequently complied with and the so-called proclamation was in fact no proclamation at all as contemplated by the section the sale cannot be said to be one held under the Act and will be void. Section 35, Revenue Recovery Act, indicates only the procedure as to the steps to be taken before issue of the sale certificate to the purchaser. What is the extent of the right which is conferred on the revenue auction purchaser has to be gathered from the substantive provisions of Ss. 6 and 8, Estate Rent Recovery Act (IV of 1068), which provide that the sale of land made for arrears of rent due thereon, under the authority of the Act shall be 'free of encumbrances.' The term 'encumbrances' of which the revenue auction purchaser would be free comprehend the claims developed by the adverse possessor, in the property possessed and the purchaser gets his title under his revenue sale free from the prescriptive title which had not yet matured but is in the course of acquisition by reason of the adverse possession upto the date of revenue sale. 1955 Ker L T 198, Foll.; AIR 1938 Mad 835; (1938) 2 M L J 337 and (1947) 2 Mad L J 387, Distinguished. ——S. 39—Sale for tax due on property sold and on other properties of defaulter.

A sale held for arrears of revenue is valid and would extinguish prior encumbrances even though it was held for recovery of arrears due on the land sold as well as other lands belonging to the defaulter. If more amount than that actually due to the State, on account of arrears of tax and incidental expenses in connection with the realisation of the same, is realised by the sale, the effect of the provision under S. 39 that the sale will be free of all encumbrances, will not be taken away. The excess amount thus realised is directed to be paid to the Thandapper holder. Instead of paying that, if the Government appropriated that towards tax from that Thandapper holder on account of other properties belonging to him, the right and the immunity conferred on the auction purchaser would not be taken away because the sale was for something more than that was actually due from the land sold. Thus if the several revenue auctions were for tax due also on the property sold, the sales would wipe away all prior eucumbrance on the property. 28 T L J 226, Rel. on. ——S. 39 — Sale of property for land revenue due from other property—Setting aside of.

A property which belongs to A, but which is included in the Thandapper of B cannot be sold free of all encumbrances for arrears of state land revenue due, not from the property sold, but from other properties belonging to B. The sale is not binding on A and is liable to be set aside. 28 T L J 226 (FB), Foll. 1952 Ker L T 552 : A I R 1952 Trav-Co 450 (451) (Pr 7) (DB).

——S. 39—Sale of land for revenue due on that land as well on other land of defaulter—If free of all encumbrances—Valid sale — It should be for arrears of land sold alone.

There is no warrant for the view that the land sold in revenue auction could be free of all encumbrances only if such sale was for arrears of tax due on that land. A sale for arrears of revenue is a valid sale and will extinguish prior encumbrances even though the sale was held for recovery of arrears of revenue due on the land sold as well as other lands belonging to the defaulter. ● —S. 41—Provision is directory.

The provision contained in S. 41 is not mandatory and failure to comply with that provision will not make the sale void. The section is obviously meant only as a direction to the revenue authorities not to attach and sell more land than what is sufficient to discharge the arrears of revenue due from the defaulter. An omission to comply with this direction can amount only to an irregularity and cannot in any sense affect the jurisdiction of the revenue authority to hold the sale. Eravi Pillay Krishna Pillay v. SECTION 50

—Ss. 50, 34 (1) — Setting aside revenue sale — Powers of Board of Revenue — No period of limitation for revision petition.

So far as the power of the Board of Revenue to set aside a revenue sale is concerned that power is derived from S. 50. Section 50 gives wide jurisdiction to the revisional authority to set aside the sale on any ground it thinks proper. It is not restricted to grounds mentioned in S. 34 (1). This wide jurisdiction is intended to meet cases which do not strictly come within the restricted operation of S. 34 (1).

No period of limitation is prescribed and the Board is competent to entertain the revision petition even after expiry of a long period. A I R 1957 Trav-Co 284 and A I R 1957 Trav-Co 116, Foll. (1963) 1 Ker L R 36.

—S. 50 — Jurisdiction of Government to review prior decision dismissing revision petitions for cancellation of revenue sale — (General Clauses Act (1897), S. 21).

The Government has no jurisdiction to review its prior decision dismissing revision petitions under S. 50 for cancellation of revenue sale. The Act does not provide for review by any of the authorities having jurisdiction to confirm or set aside the sale. The power to review prior decisions does not exist where it has not been expressly conferred. A I R 1953 Trav-Co 439, Rel. on. As soon as the revision petitions were decided, the Government became functus officio and thereafter the only jurisdiction that could be exercised was one to correct any inadvertent slip or error in the order. The inherent power to rectify such errors does not include the power to reverse the former order in its entirety and to pass a fresh order. Such power can be exercised only by way of review. Section 21 of the General Clauses Act does not include the power of review in cases of this kind. Where on the strength of an order passed by the Government, without jurisdiction, setting aside the revenue sale in review, the owner obtains possession of the property sold, he will not be entitled to resist a suit for possession by the purchaser where the revenue sales have not been proved to be void. 1958 Ker L J 176 : 1958 Ker L T 25.

● —S. 50—T. C. Board of Revenue Ordinance (No. II of 1950), S. 6 —T. C. Revenue Recovery Act (7 of 1951), S. 55—Revision—Dismissal by Board as time-barred —Second revision to Government — Power to entertain.

After the integration of the States of Travancore and Cochin the general power of revision of the Dewan under S. 50 of the Travancore Revenue Recovery Act 1068 was transferred from the Government to the Board of Revenue under S. 6 of the U. S. T. C. Board of Revenue Ordinance (XII of 1124) which was replaced by T. C. Board of Revenue Ordinance (II of 1950) after the constitution came into force. On account of this transfer of revisional powers certain revision petition was transferred from the Government to the Board of Revenue and while the Travancore-Cochin Board of Revenue Ordinance (II of 1950) was in force the Board heard that revision petition and dismissed it as barred by limitation on 17-2-1950. The party however filed another revision petition on 7-9-1950 which was allowed by the Government and the order of the Board of Revenue was set aside. In an application under Arts. 226 and 227 against the order of the Government.

Held, that the revisional powers under S. 50 of the Travancore Revenue Recovery Act must be held to have been exercised by the Board of Revenue in the case and there was no scope for a further exercise of the same revisional powers on a subsequent occasion by the Government. (2) That the Travancore-Cochin Revenue Recovery Act (VII of 1951) which replaced the Travancore Revenue Recovery Act (I of 1068) after the Constitution came into force did not contain any provision conferring general powers of revision on the Government. Therefore the assumption of jurisdiction on a subsequent revision petition by the Government under the Revenue Recovery Act was clearly contrary to law and the order of the Government on the second revision petition purporting to have been passed in exercise of the revisional powers under the Revenue Recovery Act was passed without jurisdiction. SECTION 51

Section 51 of the Act in terms applies only to parties to sale proceedings from whom arrears of revenue are due or are alleged to be due.

Further S. 51 is only an enabling provision. The effect of S. 51 is to confer on person aggrieved by order passed or proceedings taken by Revenue officers under the Revenue Recovery Act the right to sue the State in respect of such orders or proceedings, and such right they will have even if the proceedings taken are for arrears of revenue alleged to be due from them while in fact no arrears were due and also in respect of proceedings which purport to have been taken under the Act although they are not sanctioned by the provisions of the Act. The right to sue to set aside a wrongful sale of one's property is an undisputed civil right which cannot be said to have been created for the first time by the provision contained in the section.

The suit to set aside a revenue sale is really a suit against the purchaser in the revenue sale. The Government may be a proper party in such a suit but the suit cannot be said to be a suit against the Government. Eravi Pillay Krishna Pillay v. Maluk Mohamed Sahul Mahd. I L R (1953) Trav-Co 405 : 1953 Ker L T 802 : A I R 1953 Trav-Co 494 (502) (Pt B) (Pr 15) (FB).

—S. 51—Applicability — Sale conducted without jurisdiction — Sale impeached by person whose title to property is not lost by such sale — Limitation for suit — (Travancore Limitatton Act (6 (VI) of 1110), Art. 130).

The period of one year prescribed by S. 51 of the Act applies only to a suit to set aside the revenue sale by a person who has been a party to the sale proceedings and not to a suit by a person who was not a party to such proceedings. That section has no application to cases where the sale itself was conducted without jurisdiction and where it is impeached by the plaintiff whose title to the property is not lost by such a sale. In the case of a suit by such a plaintiff, the suit is governed by the 12 years' rule prescribed by Art. 130 of the Travancore Limitation Act. 1948 T L R 131 and 1948 T L R 103 Rel. on. TRAVANCORE RULES REGULATING ENQUIRIES INTO CONDUCT OF PUBLIC SERVANTS (1072 ME)

——R. 1 — Public servant holding office during pleasure of Ruler—Dismissal of — Effect of rules on powers of Ruler—(Constitution of India, Art. 311).

The Rules of 1072, though termed as Rules, are not Rules made under the rule-making power in any statute but themselves constitute a primary and independent legislative measure and as a part of the statute law of the State are binding on the Sovereign as well as on the subject. In other words from the date of the enactment of the Rules public servants could not be dismissed at His Highness's pleasure. A I R 1937 P C 31 and A I R 1951 Mad 882, Disting. Further even assuming that public servants hold office at the pleasure of His Highness the Maharaja the exercise of such pleasure must be made by him and he could not delegate that power because if he could the pleasure would be not of His Highness but of the person to whom the delegation is made. AIR 1956 Trav-Co 35 (39, 40) (Pt A) (Prs 15, 16, 17).

TRAVANCORE SALT ACT (3 of 1088 ME)

——Ss, 11 and 14—Construction—Powers of Government under — Cancellation of licence of private owner — What vests in Government — Right to take over salt-factory and establish Government factory—Notifications closing salt-works of private person, cancelling his licence and establishing factory of Government — Ultra vires.

By a relinquishment or cancellation of a licence under the first part of S. 14, what is left at the disposal of the Government is only the "salt works" and not the salt factory. Salt-works and salt-factory are differently defined in the Act, in S. 3, Cls. (j) and (k). A salt-work is therefore a smaller unit included in the larger one "salt-factory." 'Salt-works" do not mean the same thing as a salt-factory. The proprietary right vests in the Government under S. 14 (a) and what is sought to be purchased by them is the proprietary right in the "salt-works" and not in the "salt-factory."

No statute can or will be construed as depriving the subject of his rights unless the language is clear in that behalf. Reference to a part can under no circumstances be held to be a reference to the whole. Nor can a person or an authority take possession of the whole in the name of a part or a portion. The Salt Act, throughout, makes a distinction between a salt-factory and a salt-work and when the statute states (in S. 14) that the salt-works shall be at the disposal of the Government or that it shall vest in them or that its value shall be paid in the prescribed manner it cannot be held that it refers to the salt-factory.

Hence Travancore Government Notification No. 1-2-2471/42, D. D. dated 10-12 1949, issued under Ss. 11 and 14 of the Salt Act, closing down the salt-factory of a private individual, not belonging to the Government, cancelling the licence or taking over the factory, is ultra vires the powers vested in the Government under Ss. 11 and 14. The cancellation of the licence is also without jurisdiction.

In the same way, the Notification of the Government, dated 15-12-1949, establishing a salt-factory in the premises or property in the possession of a private individual is also invalid and ultra vires. Under S. 11, the Government may establish a salt-factory only in land which is the property of the Government or other land in which the owner thereof shall permit such establishment, Where the licensee of a salt-factory or salt-works, has, under an agreement with the Government, the right to retain possession of the properties comprised therein with all their improvements for a term of years, and when lie has not committed any breach of the agreement so as to enable or entitle the Government to resume possession, and the licensee has not given any consent for the Government to establish salt-factory in the property, such a Notification establishing a salt-factory there, is without jurisdiction and unauthorised. Section 11 cannot enable the Government to establish a salt-factory in that property when the period of the licensee under the agreement has not expired and the agreement is still in force. 1950 K L T 159 : 1950 T C L R 162 : AIR 1952 Trav-Co 14 (19) (Pt E) (Pr 20).

PREAMBLE

——Preamble — Travancore Land Customs Act (2 of 1091 M.E.) — Notification under dated 7-1-1946 — Interpretation —Travancore Land Customs Act (1091).

Clause (1) of the notification, dated 7-1-1946 under the above Acts makes it clear that goods imported by land, sea or backwater into Travancore are exempt from customs duties if they are the produce or manufacture of British India or of the territories of the Cochin State : There is no justification for reading a further qualification into the provision to the effect that they should also be imported directly into Travancore from British India or the Cochin State and not through some other territory. The finality conferred on orders in appeal by S. 170 can possibly apply only to acts which are within the purview of the Act and not to actions which are not warranted by the Act or are prohibited by it. TRAVANCORE SERVICE INAM PROCLAMATION (1068 ME) ——Ss. 2, 3 — Applicability — Temple service.

The Proclamation deals only with cases where the grant had been made by the Government in connection with specific State services. Where it is not claimed that the temple service which was attached to the plaint property had anything to do with the State at any time, and it was a private Devaswom that had initiated the service such Devaswom service it continued to remain in spite of the State's assumption of management of the Devaswom. The power of the Government under S. 2 of the Proclamation to resume their service inams and their freedom from question by way of suit under S. 3 on exercise of such power, could not therefore apply in the circumstances. There was no bar to the maintainability of the suit for declaration that the proceedings started by the defendant for recovery of possession of the suit properties from the plaintiff were unsustainable and for issue of injunction restraining the defendant from taking possession of the property and for other appropriate reliefs, by virtue of the Service Inam Proclamation of 1068. ILR (1956) Trav.Co 684 : AIR 1957 Trav-Co 269 (270) (Pt A) (Pr 6) (DB).

——S. 3 — Temple service — Proclamation deals only with cases where the grant had been made by the Government in connection with specific State services — Power of Government to resume their service inams and their freedom from question by way of suit under S. 3 on exercise of such power could not therefore apply to temple service initiated by a Private Devaswom. TRAVANCORE SERVICE REGULATIONS

ARTICLE 1

●——Contravention of—Right of action—Executive orders passed after enquiry — Variation of—Effect—Birth date fixed for service book—Effect of—(Constitution of India, Arts. 300 and 310).

The Travancore Service Regulations have no statutory force ; they are mere rules of guidance for the Government and their officers and their contravention by Government do not give the person aggrieved by such contravention any right of action against the Government before a Civil Court. The mere fact that an executive order has behind it the approval of the Maharaja, does not clothe the said order with any statutory force.

Held, that the effect of the Government's order after enquiring was only that in respect of all future Government transactions the date entered in the Service Book would be considered to be the date of birth of the officer concerned. There was no rule or other provision of law enjoining any public authority to accept that date as the plaintiff's date of birth. The Department of Education was governed by its own rule and there was no rule making it incumbent on the department to alter the registers maintained by the department to conform to Service Book entries or to entries in Birth Registers. (2) That the executive Government could revise or vary its orders even when the original order was after an enquiry unless it was an enquiry as contemplated by any statutory provision, and hence the Press Note and the Government action pursuant thereto was not only valid but even non-justiciable. ARTICLE 252

——Art. 252—'Superior servant'—Position and status of—'Superior public servant'—Difference—(Travancore) Inquiry Rules (1896), R. 1.

The 'superior servant' of Art. 252 of the Travancore Service Regulations is an entirely different thing from the 'superior public servant' of the Inquiry Rules. The Travancore Service Regulations defines 'superior service' for the purpose of determining the two kinds of service qualifying for pension, and it does not pretend to lay down any rules as to the authorities competent to remove public servants. The Inquiry Rules make separate provisions for enquiries into the conduct of 'superior public servants' and of 'inferior public servants' and for that purpose, lay down that a superior public servant shall be a public servant not removable from the office without the sanction of His Highness the Maharajah. Those rules make no attempt to say who are the public servants not removable without such sanction. For that the rules or orders governing the removal of public servant have to be considered. 1958 Mad L J (Cri) 249 : 1958 Ker L T 106.

ARTICLE 352-F

——Art. 352 (F) (C) — Government Press note, dated 20th February 1950—Validity.

Article 352 (F) (C) of Travancore Service Regulations which states that the date of birth of a Government servant, which has been accepted and recorded in the service register shall form conclusive evidence on the same cannot bind the discretion of the state and a later decision as embodied in the Press note, dated 20th February 1950, to accept the date of birth in the College admission register as the correct age for purposes of superannuation is well within the competence of the Government. TRAVANCORE SOLDIERS LITIGATION ACT (7 of 1116 M.E.)

——Ss. 3 (b) (iii) and 11—Exemption from limitation on ground that plaintiff was serving under war conditions specified in S. 3 (b) (iii)—Proof.

A discharge certificate from army on account of demobilisation is not sufficient proof. That the particular unit to which the plaintiff belonged was in a state of mobilisation should be proved by production of proper certificate from the military authorities. See Soldiers Litigation Act (Travancore Act 7 of 1116 M.E.), S. 11. A I R 1958 Ker 228 (DB).

[Overruled on another point in A I R 1964 Ker 8 (FB).]

——Ss. 11 and 3 (b) (iii)—Scope — Exemption from limitation on ground that plaintiff was serving under war conditions—Proof of.

Where the plaintiff claims exemption from limitation under S. 11 on the ground that he was serving under war conditions as specified in S. 3 (b) (iii) i. e., serving with a unit which for the time being was mobilised, the question is one of fact which has to be proved by the plaintiff. A certificate of discharge from army on account of demobilisation is not sufficient to prove it. From the fact that demobilisation took place only on 7th August 1947, it cannot be assumed that the Unit in which he was serving was being mobilised throughout the whole period. 'Demobilisation' in the context only means discharge from the army and it cannot be assumed from the use of the expression demobilisation that the unit was in a state of mobilisation until that date. The meaning of the expression 'to mobilise' in relation to the Army means to make armed forces ready for war. A new recruit has to pass through different stages of training and even then the Unit may not be mobilised for war at all. That the particular unit to which the plaintiff belonged was in a state of mobilisation should have been proved by production of a proper certificate from the military authorities. TRAVANCORE TAXATION ON INCOME (INVESTIGATION COMMISSION) ACT (14 of 1124 M.E.) (1949)

PREAMBLE

● ——Preamble—Existing law — Section 1 (3) came into force immediately on the passing of the Act—The Act was therefore an existing law from the date of passing right up to 1-7-1949 and was consequently continued by Ordinance 1 of 1124. See United State of Travancore and Cochin Administration and Application of Laws Ordinance (1 of 1124 M.E.). A I R 1956 S C 246.

● ——Preamble—Keeping in force by Parliament Act (14 of 1124) by Act of 1950 not illegal. See Opium and Revenue Laws (Extension of Application) Act (1950), S. 3. A I R 1962 Ker 38 (FB).

● ——S. 1 (3) — Notification issued on 26th July, 1949, bringing the Act into operation as from 22nd July, 1949, is valid.

The notification issued on 26th July, 1949, bringing the Travancore Taxation on Income (Investigation Commission) Act into operation as from 22nd July, 1949, cannot be said to be invalid. In exercise of the power conferred by S. 1 (3) the Government surely had the power to issue the notification bringing the Act into force on any date subsequent to the passing of the Act. There can therefore be no objection to the notification fixing commencement of the Act on the 22nd July, 1949, which was a date subsequent to the passing of the Act. The Act has not been given a retrospective operation, that is to say, it has not been made to commence from a date prior to the date of its passing. It is true that the date of commencement as fixed by the notification is anterior to the date of the notification but that circumstance does not attract the principle disfavouring the retrospective operation of a Statute. A. Thangalkunju v. M. Venkitachalam, (1956) 29 I T R 349 : 1956 S C A 259: 1956 S C J 323; (1955) 2 S C R 1196: AIR 1956 S C 246 (258) (Pt D) (Pr 39).

● ——S 1 (3) — Commencement of Act — Existing law — Travancore and Ccohin Administration and Application of Laws Ordinance (I of 1124), Ss. 2 (b) and 3 (1).

Sub-section (3) of S. 1 of the Travancore Taxation on Income (Investigation Commission) Act, 1124 came into force immediately on the passing of the Act under S. 22 of Act VI of 1123 by His Highness the Maharaja of Travancore on the 24th Kumbhom 1124 (7th March, 1949), and the operation of the other sections of the Act alone was postponed to such date as the Government may by notification in the Government Gazette appoint. Hence sub-s. (3) of S. 1 will be an existing law coming within the definition of that term in S. 2 (b) of the United State of Travancore and Cochin Administration and Application of Laws Ordinance 1124 (1 of 1124), it will have its existence continued under the provisions of S. 3 (1) of that Ordinance, and it will have sufficient potency to bring the rest of the enactment into force on the 22nd July 1949 when the notification concerned was issued by the Government of Travancore Cochin.

The Government however had no right to notify a date anterior to the date of the notification (viz., 26th July, 1949), as the date on which the Act shall come into force. Thangalkunju Musaliar v. ● ——S. 1—If extant—Constitution of India, Art. 372 (1)—Opium and Revenue Laws (Extension of Application) Act, (1950), as amended by Central Act (44 of 1951), S. 3).

The Travancore Taxation on Income (Investigation Commission) Act, 1124 is still in force by virtue of Art. 372 (1) of the Constitution; it has been amended twice by the Central Legislature which after 26th January, 1950, is the competent Legislature as far as legislation regarding income other than agricultural income is concerned; as a result of the action of the Central Legislature the Act did not lapse on 16th August, 1950, or on any date subsequent thereto; and the Central Commission has all the powers this day that the Travancore Commission had under the enactment and no more. SECTION 3

● ——S. 3 (1)—'Existing Law' — Travancore Taxation on Income (Investigation Commission) Act 14 of 1124) was existing law for S. 3 (1). See United Estates of Travancore-Cochin Administration and Application of Laws Ordinance (1 of 1124), S. 3 (1), AIR 1962 Ker 38 (FB).

SECTION 5

● ——S. 5 (1) — Section 5 (1) is not discriminatory and violative of the fundamental right guaranteed under Art. 14. See Constitution of India, Art. 14. AIR 1956 S C 246.

● ——S. 5 (1)—Reference by Government in respect of evasion of tax for certain years—Power of investigation Commission to cover other period.

Under S. 5 (1) the Government could refer any case or points in a case. There is nothing in that subsection which requires that a 'case' referred thereunder must cover the entire period mentioned in S. 8 (2). Indeed, the Government might have reason to believe that an assessee evaded the tax only in, say two years and not in others and in such a case the Government could only refer the case for investigation of evasion during those two years only but could not refer any case for other years as to which they had no reasonable belief. Therefore in such a situation the reference must be limited to the particular years in which the evasion was believed to have taken place, it makes no difference whether one calls the matter referred a 'case' or 'points in a case'. It follows, therefore, that, in order to ascertain whether, in a given case the reference covers the entire period or only a shorter period, one has only to look at the order of reference. Where the operative part of the reference clearly records the fact that the Government had prima facie reasons for believing that the petitioner has to a substantial extent evaded payment of taxation on his income for 1942 and 1943 and that they considered that this was a fit case for reference to the Income-tax Investigation Commission under S. 5 (1), the Commission or the authorised official appointed by it has no jurisdiction to cover any period beyond those specific years 1942 and 1943. A. Thangalkunju v. M. Venkitachalam, (1956) 29 I T R 349; 1956 S C A 259 : 1956 SCJ 323; (1955) 2 S C R 1196: AIR 956 SC 246 (257) (Pt B) (Pr 34).

● —Ss. 5, 8 (2)—Reference in due time as provided in S. 5 — There is no limitation of time for making assessment. Mohammad Abdul Kadar v. Commissioner of Income-tax, I L R (1961) 1 Ker 517: 1961 Ker L J 529; 1961 Ker L T 558; AIR 1962 Ker 38 (43) (Pt E) (Pr 16) (FB).

—S. 5 — Quaere—Parallel proceedings under S. 47 of Travancore Income-tax Act and Taxation on Income (Investigation Commission) Act, 1124 if repugnant to good faith. See Travancore Income-tax Act (1921), S. 47. AIR 1957 Trav-Co 303 (DB).

—S. 5 — Scope of inquiry—Order for investigation relating to period 1120 — Direction to produce accounts in respect of period 1119-1123—Legality.

Where the order of the Government directing investigation under the Travancore Taxation on Income (Investigation Commission) Act, 1124, relates only to the evasion of payment of income-tax for the year 1120, the fact that the petitioner (assessee) was called upon to produce his accounts bank pass books and other such documents not merely in respect of that year but for the years 1119-1123 cannot possibly enlarge the ambit of the investigation directed by the Government. A I R 1957 Trav-Co 303 (304) (Pt A) (Pr 5) (DB).

● —S. 5—Scope of inquiry by Central Commission in cases referred to it — Constitution of India, Art. 226.

Where the only reference made to the Central Investigation Commission prior to the last day of Makarom 1125 (11th February, 1950), was the reference of Evasion Cases Nos. 1 and 2 of 1125 relating to evasion of income-tax by the petitioner in relation to years 1942 and 1943 pending before the State Commission, held, that the Central Commission had no jurisdiction to go beyond the years covered by those cases and any attempt to enlarge the scope of inquiry was without any legislative warrant and could be prohibited by a writ of prohibition under Art. 226. Thangalkunju Musaliar v. Venkitachalam Potti, 1954 Ker L T 23; I L R (1953) T C 1145 : 25 I T R 120; AIR 1954 Trav-Co 131 (134) (Pt D) (Pr 13) (FB).

● —S. 8 (2)—There is nothing in S. 8 (2) which justifies the contention that action may be taken thereunder only once. If an unauthorised direction is given under S. 8 (2) there is nothing in that provision which prevents rectification of that order. See Opium and Revenue Laws (Extension of Application) Act (1950), S. 3, Cl. (c). AIR 1961 S C 210.

● —S. 8 (2)—'Any Income-tax Authority' — It includes Chief Revenue Authority — (Words and Phrases).

In construing the provisions of S. 8 (2) of the Act, the words 'any income-tax authority' would include the Chief Revenue Authority which was an Income-tax authority under the Travancore Act (8 of 1096). It may also be noted that S. 4 of the Travancore Act (17 of 1122) continued all proceedings and petitions pending before the Chief Revenue Authority and provided that the same may be disposed of by the said authority or by such authority as may be appointed by the Government for the purpose as if the said Travancore Act (8 of 1096) had not been repealed. It, therefore, follows that the Chief Revenue Authority was included within the expression "any income-tax authority' in S. 8(2) of the Act and the assessment orders of the petitioner for the years 1942 and 1943 which were concluded by the Chief Revenue Authority could be affected or overridden by any order which might be passed by the Government under S. 8 (2) of the Act. A. Thangalkunju v. M. Venkitachalam, (1956) 29 I T R 349 : 1956 S C A 259 : 1956 S C J 323 : (1955) 2 S C R 1196 : AIR 1956 S C 246 (259) (Pt E) (Pr 41).

——Preamble — Kanyakumari District in Madras State — If forms part of Kerala State — (States Reorganisation Act (1956), S. 120)—(Kerala Adaptation of Laws Order (1956), S. 5 (2)).

In view of S. 120 of the States Reorganisation Act, 1956, and Cl. 5(2) of the Kerala Adaptation of Laws Order, 1956, the present Kanyakumari District of the Madras State does not form part of the 'State of Kerala' for the purposes of the Travancore Tobacco Act, and the purchases from the Kanyakumari District of the Madras State cannot be considered as purchases from A class or B class licensees 'in the State' and all movements of tobacco from the Kanyakumari District of the Madras State to the Kerala State can be considered only as 'import' as per S. 5(2) of the Kerala Adaptation of Laws Order, 1956. 1958 Ker L J 325 : 1958 Ker L T 743.

——S. 31 — Right of Maharaja of Travancore to absolutaly delegate legislative function — (Constitution of India, Art. 245).

In view of the words 'with our sanction' in the section it is difficult to cut down the section as invalid on the ground that there is an absolute delegation of legislative function. Even if the section amounted to such a delegation the Maharaja at the time he made it had on the basis of the sovereignty which he claimed and exercised had the sole and untrammelled discretion to delegate all or any of his powers to such person or persons as he deemed fit. He was an absolute ruler and the inhibition against the delegation of legislative power and the maxim, delegata potestas non potest delegare had no application to him. T. K. Abraham v. ——S. 31 — Licence fee under—Nature of—Effect of application of Central Excises and Salt Act to Travancore State from 1st April 1950—(Constitution of India, Art. 277 and Sch. VII, List 1, Item 84).

Taxes are compulsory contributions exacted by Governments from private individuals and groups for meeting the costs of public services. Although the licence fee levied under the Act being one imposed for the purpose of augmenting the revenues of the State is a tax it is not a duty levied upon a manufacturer or producer in respect of a commodity manufactured or produced. Therefore the levy cannot be said to be a duty of excise coming within the ambit of Entry 84 of the Union List and that it had become inoperative when the Central Excises and Salt Act of 1944 was extended to the Travancore State with effect from 1st April 1953. T. K. Abraham v. State of Trav-Co., 1957 Ker L J 1146 : ILR (1958) Ker 148 : (1957) Mad L J (Cri) 855 : 1957 Ker L T 1184 : AIR 1958 Ker 129 (133) (Pt E) (Prs 20, 23) (FB).

[Reversed on another point in AIR 1962 S C 922].

——S. 31 — Licence fee under — If tax on profession, trade, calling or employment—(Constitution of India, Art. 276 (2) and Sch. VII, List 2, Entries 60 and 62).

As the base of the levy under the Act is neither an occupation nor the income derived therefrom but the commodity concerned, namely the tobacco stocked by the license it is not a tax on occupation or its income which should be restricted to the annual sum of Rs. 250 under Art. 276 (2) of the Constitution. On the other hand the levy is a luxury as tax, a tax coming under Entry 62 of the State List. Both the motives which induce the State to impose tax on articles which are deemed to be luxuries; namely the desire to restrict the expenditure of money in certain directions or to tax the rich or that part of the expenditure of all classes that is regarded as a superfluity or as socially undesirable, have played their part in the taxation of tobacco in the State of Travancore. TRAVANCORE UNIVERSITY ACT (1 of 1113 ME)

——S. 28 (b)—Government servant working in institution under University — Power of University to take displinary action.

The petitioner was appointed to the service of the State on the advice of the Public Service Commission and he entered service in the Education Department. It was while he was employed in the pre-University School that the said institution was brought under the University and converted into the Intermediate College. The position of the petitioner was that of a Civil servant under the Government and he was governed by the rules applicable to employees holding appointments under Government by virtue of S. 28 (b), Travancore University Act. The petitioner was suspended from service for one year by an order passed at a meeting of the syndicate presided over by a Vice-Chancellor.

Held, that when the institution in which the petitioner was employed was brought under the control of the University, the petitioner also came under the disciplinary control of the University. Thus the University had the power and the jurisdiction to take appropriate action against the petitioner for misdeeds proved against him. Hence the order of suspension passed by the University could not be said to be ultra vires the University authorities. TRAVANCORE VAKILS ACT (3 of 1075 ME)

PREAMBLE

——Preamble—Rules under Act—R. 449—Scope—Duty of vakil to account for every cash received on behalf of client — Irregularity in the matter treated as professional misconduct. See Legal Practitioners Act (1879), S. 13. AIR 1964 Ker 192 (193) (SB).

——Ss. 13 and 14 — Vakil taking up permanent appointment under Government — Vakil ceasing to practice for 5 years continuously.

A clerk in a Munsiff's Court got special study leave to qualify himself to be a vakil and having qualified, got himself enrolled and after practising for four years, rejoined his permanent place in government service and after 14 years of further service, retired and started practice on the basis of the original sanad granted to him. The District Judge ordered that he should not practise and should surrender the original sanad under S. 13 of the Regulation as he had accepted permanent government service thereafter. A revision petition was filed.

Held, action was called for under S. 14 of the Regulation whereunder a vakil who has ceased to practice for 5 years may be ordered by the High Court to surrender the sanad to an officer or Court appointed by the High Court He can then apply for issue of another sanad if he is entitled to it. Such a remedy is not open if action is taken under S. 13.

Quaere.—If rejoining a permanent appointment, wherein a person had a lien, after enrolment, amounts to acceptance of a permanent appointment or not under S. 13. AIR 1952 Trav-Co 496 (497) (Pr 2) (DB).

SECTION 14

——S. 14 — Vakil wholly absenting from practice for five years—Action called for under S. 14—Vakil has to deliver up his sanad in compliance with an order made by High Court—In such a case he is entitled to apply for a fresh sanad if he is qualified to do so —No such remedy is open to party if action is taken under S. 13. See Travancore Vakils Act (3 of 1075 ME), S. 13. AIR 1952 Trav-Co 496 (DB).

TRAVANCORE WILLS ACT (6 of 1074 ME)

PREAMBLE

——Preamble — Will essentials — Registry in wrong book, effect —(Hindu Law —Wills —Succession Act (1925), S. 63).

A will is the legal declaration of the intention of a testator with respect to the property which he desires to be carried into effect after his death. A will need not to be in any particular form. It is sufficient if it contains the testamentary wishes of the deceased.

Under Travancore Wills Act no special form is required to constitute testamentary disposition. It is enough if the document is attested by two witnesses and it is registered. The circumstance that the registry is in Book No. 1 and not in the Book appropriate for the registration of a will is not one that would invalidate the document. 1953 Ker L T 749 : AIR 1954 Trav-Co 197 (197) (Pr 2).

——S. 15 — Muhammadan testator—Oral will—Validity of—After the enactment of the Travancore Wills Act, rules of Mohamedan law allowing oral wills must be deemed to have been abrogated by provisions of the Act so far as Muhamedens in Travancore area were concerned. See Succession Act (1925), S. 58. AIR 1955 NUC (Trav-Co) 6005.

——S. 15—Attestation of will—Proof—Deposition of one of the attesting witnesses that they saw executant sign the document and that both of them attested the same document is enough proof. See Succession Act (1925), S. 63. AIR 1952 Trav-Co 195 (DB).

TREASURE TROVE ACT (6 of 1878)

——Ss. 7 and 18—Enquiry by Collector — Nature of —Quasi-judicial—Procedure—(Constitution of India, Art. 226).

A Collector who proceeds to hear a case under the provisions of the Treasure Trove Act, acts in a quasi-judicial capacity and the procedure to be followed by him must be of a quasi-judicial character. He must follow the procedure prescribed by or under the statute by which the tribunal has been created or, in the absence of such procedure, by the procedure which has been devised by the tribunal itself. It is of the utmost importance, however, that the procedure should be consistent with the rules of natural justice, that the elementary and fundamental principles of a fair and impartial trial should be observed and that the positive provisions of the statute should be complied with. Notice of hearing should be given particularly if the statute so requires. The right to a hearing embraces the right to a reasonable opportunity to know the claims of the opposing party — the right to know the witnesses against him, the right to cross-examine those witnesses, the right to offer evidence in explanation or rebuttal, and the right to test, explain or refute. Requirement of a full hearing means one in which ample opportunity is afforded to all parties to make, by evidence and argument, a showing fairly adequate to establish the propriety or impropriety from the standpoint of justice and law, of the steps asked to be taken: (1923) 261 U S 184, Rel. on.

As the title to treasure trove belongs to the finder against all the world except the true owner, one of the important issues which always arises in such cases, is whether the person who claims to be the finder of the treasure is in fact the finder thereof. The strict or technical rules of evidence contained in the Evidence Act do not apply to proceedings, before administrative tribunals and failure to apply such rules does not invalidate such proceedings, provided the provisions of law are not departed from and the substantial rights of the parties are not violated. A tribunal has power to direct the course of the proceedings and the judicial or quasi-judicial officer is said to be biased or prejudiced when he has a leaning or inclination to or against a party which so sways his mind to one side as to prevent him from holding the scales evenly between the parties or deciding the case impartially between them. The personal interest, which disqualifies a judicial or quasi-judicial officer must be an interest direct, definite, capable of demonstration, not remote, uncertain, contingent, unsubstantial or merely speculative or theoretical. The fact that an administrative officer acts both as prosecutor and judge does not operate as a disqualification. (1910) 2 I R 271, Rel. on. An officer otherwise disqualified may still act, if his failure to act would nullify the law or close the doors of justice. The jurisdiction of the Collector to hear and determine a case under the Act is exclusive. Under S. 115, Civil P. C., or paragraph 34 of the Tripura Courts Order, the only remedy which, if still open, has been specifically laid down as barring revision is the remedy of appeal. That being so, where there is any remedy other than appeal open to a party, the question whether revisional powers should or should not be exercised should be decided on the particular facts and circumstances of each case. One such instance is whether the remedy by a separate suit was doubtful. Another circumstance which is taken into consideration in favour of the exercise of revisional jurisdiction, even though another remedy by way of suit be available, is that the alternative remedy by suit would not be equally prompt or certain and put the aggrieved party to additional expense. AIR 1956 Tripura 26 (27) (Pt A) (Pr 4).

TRIPURA STATE (ADMINISTRATION) ORDER (1950)

CLAUSE 5

—Cl. 5—Tripura State Cotton Cloth and Yarn Control Order (as amended in 1949) continues to be in force in Tripura — Extension of Essential Supplies Temporary Powers Act, 1946 to Tripura—Effect of—The Tripura State Cotton Cloth and Yarn Control Order (1358 T. E) is not repealed—It continues in force by virtue of cl. 5, Tripura State (Administration) Order (1950). See Tripura State Cotton Cloth and Yarn Control Order (1358 T. E.), Cl. 1. AIR 1952 Tripura 18.

TRIPURA STATE COTTON CLOTH AND YARN CONTROL ORDER (1358 T. E.)

—Cl. 1 (as amended in 1949) — Continuance in force even after merger—Merged State (Laws) Act, 1949, S. 5 and Sch.—Effect of—Tripura State Administration Order (1950), S. 5.

Tripura State Cotton and Yarn Control Order (1358, T. E.) is one anterior to the Tripura State Essential Supplies (Temporary Powers) Act (1358 T.E.) and the Order has not taken its origin from the latter Act. It is an independent law of the State by itself.

The Merged State Laws Act (1949), in its Schedule includes the Essential Supplies (Temporary Powers) Act 1946 and therefore it applied to the State and by virtue of the provisions of S. 5 of the 1949 Act any corresponding law in force in the State is no doubt repealed. Therefore the Essential Supplief Act (1358 T. E) is thereby repealed. But the Central Essential Supplies Act 1946, is an enabling Act. They have nothing in common and the Order in question is not repealed It continues in force by virtue of S. 5 of Tripura State (Administration Act) 1950. 1952 Cri L J 1642 : AIR 1952 Tripura 18 (20) (Pt A) (Prs 12, 13).

Act has no application to public or private religious or charitable endowment — Under Hindu Law trust can be created without registered deed — Trusts for erection of Goshala is a trust for charitable and religious purposes according to Hindu Law — Essentials for valid trust for charitable purposes under Hindu Law indicated—(Hindu Law—Religious Endowment —Dedication). 1953 All W R (HC) 77 : A I R 1953 All 449 (450) (Pt B) (Pr 10) (DB).

——Ss. 1 and 23 — Applicability — Public Trust — Manager of temple using temple funds in his business —Liability to pay compound interest — Rule of dam dupat—Applicability.

Though the provisions of the Trusts Act are not applicable to public trusts in view of S. 1 of that Act the principles underlying them being based on general principles and rule of English law can be applied to them. In matters which are not provided for, the Courts in India apply the principles and Rules of English law on the subject unless they are inconsistent with the rules and practice of this Court. A I R 1937 Bom 374 and 1 Bom L R 667, Rel. on. Where the trustees who were the managers of a public temple have used the funds of the temple in their business or have so mixed it with their own funds that it is impossible to say that they have not so used it they are liable to be charged compound interest with half yearly rests. In such a case even if the trustee be regarded as a debtor of the cestuique trust in the large sense, the debt would be ex delicto and not one founded on lending or contract, and, therefore, the rule of damdupat has no application. 62 Bom L R 308 : 1960 Nag L J 353 : ILR (1960) Bom

In order to determine whether a deed of trust is a valid public charitable trust, it is necessary to see what is the dominant intention of the testator namely who are the real objects of his bequest and secondly whether the purpose is a charitable purpose and whether the class indicated as the object of charity forms at least a section of the public. The proper approach is to take all the clauses of the deed together to read all the clauses, harmonize them with each other and to deduce therefrom namely from the whole document what is the paramount intention of the settlor and what is the object of the charity. Where the main and paramount intention of the settlor was to benefit the members of his family and thereafter the members of his caste who might need assistance from such funds there could be no public charitable trust created. A I R 1956 Bom 81 (83, 85, 86) (Pt A) (Prs 17, 23, 24).

——S. 1—Scope—Trust created before Act — If governed by Act—Applicability of S. 83.

Section 83 which is contained in Chap. IX of the Act would apply to trust created before its enactment. At any rate, the principles underlying that statutory provision would certainly apply. Those indeed were no new principles, invented or introduced for the first time in this country. Section 83 merely modified the law of the resulting trusts. Such trusts were no new innovations but were known and recognised in the law of trusts in this country—both Hindu and Mahamedan, and widely applied from long before the Act of 1882. 1. Scope.

● ——S. 3 — Difference between trust and charge — Intention of testator — Property bequeathed to heirs with direction to pay increasingly to charity on happening of certain contingencies — Last contingency taking place — Held direction created trust and not charge. See Will—Construction of. (1962) 2 S C R 28.

——Ss. 3, 6, 23 and 48—Creation of trust—Co-trustee — Breach of trust — (Negotiable Instruments Act (1881), S. 13—Deposit receipt)—Evidence Act (1872), Ss. 101 to 104.

Held, on facts that the Hundis issued by reason of the Rajinama must be taken to be part of the Rajinama in as much as they were referred to therein by description under the heading, "Details of the Hundis". The Rajinama and the Hundis were integrally one and must be read together. The entire set-up of the Rajinama and the subsequent actings showed that all the parties concerned including Periakaruppa himself had confidence in Chockalingam who was no other than the paternal uncle of Muthayi Achi, the mother of the minor. Undoubtedly para. 3 of the Rajinama indicated that the amount was to be deposited to the order of Periakaruppa as also Chockalingam and that both together were to have mel parve (supervision). But whatever might be the connotation of this provision, it did not appear reasonable to attribute to Periakaruppa the undertaking of the responsibility of a trustee on its basis. Trusteeship is a position which is to be imputed to a person on clear and conclusive evidence of transfer of ownership and of the liability attached to such ownership on account confidence reposed, and on such liability having been accepted by the alleged trustee. There was no clear and conclusive proof of any of these elements in the present case so far as Periakaruppa was concerned. By virtue of the direction to pay in paras. 1 and 2 of the Rajinama the compromise brought about between Periakaruppa on one side and Alagappa and junior Periakaruppa on the other the retationship of debtor and creditor. Until the hundis were realised that relationship would continue. There was no transfer of ownership till then. There was absolutely nothing to indicate that the provisional retention of the amount in Chockalingam's firm for that period was unreasonable or that Periakaruppa had any notion that Chockalingam was financially in embarrassed circumstances and that he made use of the funds. Under law, the investment of funds by a trustee with himself would constitute breach of trust. But before a co-trustee can be made liable therefor some kind of knowledge or connivance or gross negligence or the like contributing factor on his part has got to be made out. The burden was on the plaintiff, junior Periakaruppa to make out clearly that by the Rajinama Periakaruppa became a trustee for the minor's fund and incurred liability therefor for his co-trustee's breach. If he was anxious for the minor boy's welfare to the extent of taking responsibility for his money on himself though it be jointly with Chokalingam clearer and decisive language was to be expected. This had not been made out. 20 Bom 448 and A I R 1914 Bom 286 and A I R 1940 Mad 157 and (1902) 1 Ch 889, Rel. on. Ranganathan Chettiar v. ——S. 3—"Trust" — Essentials of—Trust and debt—Distinction—Deposit as security for performance of agreement — Interest payable on deposit—Deposit held, on construction of terms of agreement to be debt and not trust.

The essential quality of a debt is that the ownership of the debt amount is transferred to the debtor with complete dominion and control over the amount and a full right to spend it in any manner he likes without being liable to render accounts to the creditor. In the case of a trust, the trustee is always liable to render account to the trust and is not free to spend that amount in any manner he likes. On the other hand he has got to spend it and utilise it only for the specific purposes for which the trust was created. The payment of interest is a paramount consideration for determining whether or not a particular advance is a debt or a trust.

Held, that the deposit constituted a debt and not a trust. The deposit money came to the mills as their own money. They had full control and dominion over it. AIR 1942 All 119 (FB), Foll. I L R (1962) 1 All 865 : A I R 1962 All 370 (371, 372, 374) (Prs 2, 3, 12) (DB).

——S. 3—Deposit of sum for specific purpose—Condition of payment of interest attached — Obligation in nature of trust.

Per Chakravarti C. J.—The test as to whether there is a loan or a trust in the case of a deposit of sum for specific purpose appears to be this. Where money is paid merely on condition of repayment and payment of interest till then, there is only a loan; but where the main condition on which money is paid shows that the corpus of the fund is being handed over in confidence to be held for the benefit of some person or object the provision for payment of interest is only a provision for an increase or improvement of the fund and there is no loan but a trust despite such provision which does not in any way negative a trust. 59 Cal W N 891 : (1955) 25 Com Cas 357 : A I R 1956 Cal 188 (191) (Pt F) (Pr 11) (DB).

Certain agriculturists who had received loan from the Government, entrusted certain amounts of money to a Government agricultural overseer, for payment into treasury on their behalf towards discharge of their loan. Part of the amount so collected was paid into the treasury and rest was detained, being kept with the respondent, another agricultural overseer.

Held, that till the money was paid into the treasury and accepted by Government towards the discharge of the loan, the ownership therein remained with the loanees themselves. Further by the entrustment of money to the Government Overseer no trust as defined by S. 3, Trusts Act was created. The entrustment of money by the loanees was in the nature of an entrustment to an agent, the legal title remaining with the loanees. The Government could lay no cause of action under the provisions of S. 63, Trusts Act. 60 Mad L J 355; AIR 1931 Mad 251, Rel. on. AIR 1962 Orissa 4 (6, 7) (Prs 4, 5) (DB).

Where under one of the terms of a bilateral agreement the company (one of the parties) binds itself in express terms to hold the deposit of a sum belonging to the other party for the specific purpose of due performance by the other party of its obligations, the obligation does not create an obligation in trust but an obligation in contract. 59 Cal W N 891 : (1955) 25 Com Cas 357 : AIR 1956 Cal 188 (195) (Pt D) (Pr 22) (DB).

Held, on facts that the amount lent by the plaintiff was impressed with the character of a trust. The money was earmarked for a particular purpose of purchase of property which was agreed to be mortgaged and it was incumbent upon the defendant to carry out that undertaking and the money in the circumstances could not become his, but it was money intended for a particular purpose. Because the property could not be purchased, though it may be due to circumstances beyond the control of the defendant, the right of the plaintiff to this money could not be considered to be taken away. In the circumstances, the right of the plaintiff to this money on the failure of the purpose continuing, the defendant is in the position of a trustee and the property in the amount could not be held to have passed to the defendant and the amount was not liable to be proceeded against by his creditors in execution of the decrees against him. 1956 Mad W N 288 : (1956) 2 Mad L J 101 : 69 Mad L W 289 : AIR 1956 Mad 574 (576) (Pt A) (Prs 8, 9).

——Ss. 4, 5, 6, 94 — Composition deed — Some of properties earmarked for payment of debts being immovable properties — Deed not registered — Section 94 held is attracted — Debtor holds property for benefit of creditors.

Where the debtor has executed a composition deed, has earmarked the properties (some of which are immovable properties) for the payment of debts and has also named the persons to whom the payment is to be made, as some of the trust properties are immovable, the deed ought to be registered. Excluding the lack of registration, the composition deed possesses all the features of a trust. In the circumstances, it is what is known to Equity, a constructive trust. A trust does not fail because no trustee has been named. If the debtor retained the property after the execution of the composition deed he must be deemed to be a trustee. The case attracts the application of S. 94. Thus it would be in consonance with justice, equity and good conscience to hold that debtor who has been holding the property mentioned for the benefit of all creditors, must satisfy the just demand of the plaintiff which is one of the creditors. ——Ss. 5 to 8—Credit entries in favour of employees in employer's accounts of amounts payable as dearness allowance and bonuses — Trust if created in favour of employee.

Where the employer has credited the employees in his account books with the dearness allowances and bonuses and represented to the Income-tax Department that those amounts so set apart have been paid over to the employees from year to year it would certainly constitute a trust in favour of the employees especially when loans to the employees have been debited, and repayments of loans and also salaries have been credited in such accounts. The cash has been sufficiently allocated and separated from the general funds of the employer. The principle embodied in Ss. 5 to 8 of the Trusts Act will come into operation in such a case. There was either a trust or a relationship of depositor and depositee created. 1952 Mad W N 717 : (1952) 2 M L J 308 : AIR 1953 Mad 16 (18, 19) (Prs 7, 8, 9).

——Ss. 5 and 6 — Movable property — Valid trust — Condition to be fulfilled.

When the subject-matter of a trust is movable property, the property can be transferred to the trustee by the physical act of handing it over. But in order that a valid trust may be created even in such a case, the provisions of S. 6 must further be satisfied. ('52) 1952-21 ITR 169 (181) (Cal) (DB).

——Ss. 5 and 6—Creation of trust—What amounts to transfer to and vesting in trustees—When effected—All emblems of ownership and entire dominion over property vested in trustees—Effect.

A trust in respect of movable property is created by a declaration of the intention creating such a trust, the purpose of the trust, the beneficiary and the trust property, and by transfer of the trust property to the trustee or trustees. If after the creation of the trust the author of the trust has no interest in the trust property except under certain rules and conditions and the entire dominion over the trust property is to all intents and purposes vested in the trustees, it has to be held that there is a transfer of interest in favour of the trustees, especially when all the emblems of ownership are all vested in the trustees, and none else has any control over it. 1. Scope.

——S. 6—Scope—Wakf Alalaulad—"Trust property" —Difference between trust held under Mussalman Wakf Validating Act and Trusts Act stated. See U. P. Agricultural Income-tax Act (3 of 1948), S. 9. A I R 1958 All 38.

——S. 6 — When the subject-matter of a trust is movable property the property can be transferred to the trustee by the physical act of handing it over. But in order that a valid trust may be created even in such a case the provisions of S. 6 must further be satisfied. See Trusts Act (1882), S. 5. ('52) 1952-21 I T R 169 (Cal) (DB).

——S. 6—Deed—Construction — Entry in Goshwara Register.

An entry in a Goshwara Register was to the following effect :

"Mutation is effected in the name of Dharamsala under the management of B with the following condition attached : That produce of the land shall be used for the Langar (free Kitchen). In case it is not used for Langar the property shall revert to L or her daughters."

Held, that the entry did not evidence any unconditional 'Shankalap' or dedication by L. The effect of the arrangement evidenced by the Goshwara appeared to be no more than that L constituted B her agent, for the purpose of realising the income of the land and spending it on a particular object, subject to the cardinal condition that that agency will terminate and possession of property will revert to the owner, the moment the income was diverted to some other use. 9 J & K L R 89 : A I R 1951 J & K 6 (8) (Pt B) (Pr 13) (DB).

——S. 6—Validity — Non-execution or non-performance of a condition—Effect of.

A trust is nonetheless a valid trust notwithstanding that one of the conditions is not executed. I L R (1950) Cut 374 : A I R 1951 Orissa 132 (135) (Pt C) (Pr 8) (DB).

——S. 6 — Validity — Immediate existence of legal estate—If essential.

A trust of property does not depend on the immediate existence of a legal estate in a trustee to support it. A trust may be constituted without communication to the trustee or to one cestui que trust, nor is a trust affected by the fact that no trustee is named or by the fact that the trustee who is named either refuses or is unable, through death or otherwise unable to act. I L R (1950) Cut 374 : A I R 1951 Orissa 132 (136) (Pt E) (Pr 10) (DB).

——S. 6 — Validity and completeness — Question of intention that might go to determine the nature and extent of the trust is not entirely foreign to the consideration of its validity and completeness where the trust is the result of a series of negotiations between two parties. A I R 1951 Orissa 132 (138) (Pt J) (Pr 21) (DB).

——Ss. 6, 7—Income-tax Act, S. 66 (2) — Question of law and fact—Question as to creation and validity of trust. See Income-tax Act (1922), S. 66 (2). A I R 1960 Punj 219 (DB).

2. "Indicates with reasonable certainty".

——S. 6—Charitable trusts—Trustees left with absolute discretion to choose specific charitable objects and to apply fund at such time as they think fit— Trust not invalid for uncertainty — (Charitable and Religious Trusts Act (1920), S. 3) — (Income-tax Act (1922), S. 4 (3) (i)). ——S. 6—Trusts — Property capable of being ascertained—A trust will be raised. A I R 1951 Orissa 132 (137) (Pt I) (Pr 17) (DB).

3. Declaration of intention.

——S. 6—Will—Interpretation — Division based on another will is of no assistance—Intention of testator is to be gathered from language used—Will construed —Half property held should be held in trust — (Will —Construction)—(T. P. Act (1882), S. 8). A I R 1955 N U C (All) 1704 (DB).

——S. 6—Creation of—Admission and mere entries.

The mere fact that the property has been treated by the District Court as a trust property cannot amount to dedication in favour of the trust. Mere entries in the account books by themselves cannot also amount to dedication. Similarly, the admissions based on mistake of fact or law will not be of any avail to make the property dedicated in favour of the temple. (1953) 2 Mad L J 42 : 1953 Mad W N 285 : 1953 Cri L J 1441 : A I R 1953 Mad 787 (789) (Pt A) (Pr 10) (DB).

——S. 6 — Credit entries in defendant's books — Do not create trust. See Master and Servant — Bonus— Right to. A I R 1953 Mad 433.

——S. 6—Creation of—Oral declaration to depositee to hold deposit for another—There is trust—Transfer as contemplated by Transfer of Property Act is not necessary.

A valid oral declaration to a depositee that the money should be held thenceforward for the benefit of another person would constitute a trust. It is not necessary in such a case that there must be a transfer, such as is contemplated under the Transfer of Property Act of the actionable claim. A depositee if directed to hold the property in trust for the benefit of another holds it thereafter as owner and quatrustee and gives effect to the trust embodied in the declaration. 1952 Nag L J (Notes) 33 (DB).

——S. 6 — Creation and validity — Essentials — Acceptance by trustee of position as such—Necessity — Declaration of trust by settlor and latter constituting himself trustee — Sufficiency — Trust — If fails for want of trustee or for refusal or willingness of trustees to act — Principles.

A trust in the accepted sense of word is the creation of an obligation by the owner to the intent that he may hold the property for the benefit of some other person or object. As soon as the trust is declared according to the requirements of the law the legal ownership passes to the trustee and he is bound to apply the income arising out of the property to the use and benefit of the cestui que trust. In order to make a voluntary declaration of trust binding upon the author of the trust, he must completely part with all his interests in the property to the trustee or declare himself to be a trustee of the property for the benefit of the cestui que trust. If therefore the settlor has done everything that is required to be done under the law, the trust takes effect at once, if nothing in fact remains to be done by the settlor or donor. A trust does not fail for want of a trustee and if a trustee refuses to accept before the trust takes effect, the person in possession becomes a constructive trustee. Even a disclaimer by the trustee does not avoid the trust. When the settlor constitutes himself the trustee the question of acceptance of the position of trustee does not arise. A trust may be constituted without communication to a trustee, and the validity of a trust is not affected by the fact that the trustee is unable or unwilling to act. ILR (1950) Cut 374: AIR 1951 Orissa 132 (134) (Pt A) (Pr 6) (DB).

4. Purpose.

——S. 6 — Charitable trust — Trustee left with absolute discretion to choose specific charitable objects and to apply fund at such time as they think fit—Trust whether invalid for uncertainty — (Trusts Act (1920), S. 6) — (Charitable and Religious Trusts Act (1920), S. 3)—Income tax Act (1922), S. 4 (3) (i). (1956) 29 I T R 781 : AIR 1956 Cal 164 (165 to 168) (Prs 4, 7, 9, 12, 14) (DB).

——S. 6 — Trust — Dedication in form of charity — Directions to pay certain amounts to settlor's relatives from income of dedicated property — Deed remains deed of dedication. ILR (1964) 2 Mad 832: AIR 1967 Mad 175 (177, 178) (Pt A) (Pr 11) (DB).

——S. 6—Validity — Charitable or religious purpose —Gift to University for teaching of karumakanda — Validity of.

A study of karumakanda is as much a charitable purpose as the study of physical sciences. A gift to the general public use which extends to the poor as well as to the rich is a charitable gift. The teaching of karumakanda is a charitable purpose and when a gift of property is made in trust for the purpose of teaching karumakanda it is not a gift for the performance of any particular ritual. It cannot therefore be said that a trust for objects which include the teaching of karumakanda, is a religious endowment, and when made in favour of a University, is invalid or ineffective. ILR (1950) Cut 374 : AIR 1951 Orissa 132 (134) (Pt B) (Pr 7) (DB).

——S. 6—Validity — Postponement of particular application of charitable gift — If renders gift void — Principles — Intention and understanding of parties —Relevancy in deciding validity.

The fact that the particular application of a charitable gift in trust is postponed does not render the gift void, when the gift, as distinguished from its application, is immediate.

If the purpose itself were to fail, the Court will none the less apply the cy pres doctrine and give effect to the object of the trust. The settled principle is that if the donor declares his intention in favour of defined objects which happen to fail from whatever cause the general purpose being charity, such purpose will be carried into effect notwithstanding the indefiniteness or failure of its immediate object. Ray C. J.: In the case of a trust which is the result of a series of negotiations between two parties, the question of intention and common understanding between them that might go to determine the nature and extent of the trust is not entirely foreign to the consideration of its validity and completeness. ILR (1950) Cut 374 : AIR 1951 Orissa 132 (136, 137) (Pt H) (Prs 12, 15) (DB).

5. Beneficiary.

——S. 6 — Uncertainty as to beneficiaries — Held on facts — Beneficiaries could not be said to have been indicated with reasonable certainty. See Income-tax Act (1922), S. 10 (2) (v). AIR 1953 S C 476.

——S. 6—Beneficiary.

Section 6 has reference to the stage at which the trust is being created. The beneficiary defined by S. 3 and contemplated by S. 6 is not the person who may come to be in actual receipt of the benefit at some future point of time, but the person who is intended by the trustee to be benefited at the creation of the trust, and to whom the benefit goes under the provisions of the trust itself, whether immediately or in a certain contigency, but without the aid of a further choice at someone's discretion. ('52) 1952-21 I T R 169 (180, 181) (Cal) (DB).

——S. 6 — Trusts — Private — Adverse possession — Failure of line of trustees — Trust reverts to donor's widow — Adverse possession of trust property by another — Next heir can sue for possession on widow's death — (Hindu Law — Widow — Adverse possession) — (Limitation Act (1908), Arts. 142 and 144).

In the case of private trust of endowment created by the donor for the benefit of himself and his family, the donor and his heirs have a beneficial interest therein. It may be that such interest may not entitle them to enjoy the income from the property. The spiritual benefit accruing to them under the family trust would certainly create sufficient interest in them. The trusteeship is not merely bare right of management without any kind of benefit whatsoever. There is a benefit, namely, the spiritual benefit in the person who performs the mandagappadi prescribed under the trust document. If that is so the trusteeship would be analogous to the shebait office in Northern India. When therefore the widow of the deceased donor takes possession of the property as a trustee on the failure of the line of the trustee, she takes it back as one of the founders and she purports to act as a trustee, such trusteeship combining in itself the right of management as well as the right to the beneficial enjoyment e. g. the spiritual benefit conferred on her by virtue of the performance of the mandagappadi. This would entitle her to act as if the trusteeship belonged to the family of the donor and that she was only having an interest of a Hindu widow. Under the substantive principles of Hindu law adverse possession against her would not amount to adverse possession against the reversion. The only right which the person who was appointed as trustee by the widow, can prescribe against her is her 'right i. e., a limited right as a Hindu widow and the adverse title acquired by him would not subsist beyond her lifetime. The next heirs of the donor would be entitled to maintain the suit after her death. (1964) 72 Mad L W 646.

8. Trust for the benefit of creditors.

——S. 6—Creation of trust — No indication to vest property in trustees — No transfer of ownership—Power of management or collection of income not given to trustees—Trust not created.

A businessman, who was heavily indebted, appointed a 'Niptara Committee' for paying off his creditors and with that intention executed a deed in favour of the committee. There was nothing in the document which would constitute vesting of the property in the committee. Although the debtor had stated that he was giving possession of the property and the account-books to the committee, there was no indication that he was transferring ownership to the committee or divesting himself of his title to it.

He had no doubt promised that he and his muneems would co-operate with the committee and the members of the committee agreed to help him. But neither the power of management or disposition of property or collection of income or removal and appointment of servants was given to the committee, nor was there any undertaking given by him that he would not deal with the property so long as the committee was in existence.

Held, that under circumstances no valid trust was created and the ownership of the property did not vest in the Committee. AIR 1938 Cal 818, Distinguished. Madh BLR 1956 Civil 427 : 1956 Madh BLJ 984 : AIR 1956 Madh B 236 (238) (Pt A) (Pr 24) (DB).

It is one of the cardinal rules governing execution of charitable trusts that the intention of the donor must be observed and cy-pres principle has been evolved as an auxiliary to this rule and is never allowed to defeat it. ——S. 13—De facto trustee — Right to sue on behalf of institution.

When trust property is without a de jure trustee owing to any defects in the machinery for the appointment of trustee or owing to the unwillingness of the de jure trustee to act, a de facto trustee, who is in possession and management of the institution for the time being, may be allowed to maintain a suit on behalf of the institution for the recovery of trust property held adversely by a stranger so long as the action is for the benefit of the real owner, namely, the institution. The right of a person other than a de jure trustee to maintain a suit for possession of trust properties cannot be decided in the abstract and must necessarily depend on the facts of each case. The same rule is equally applicable to wakf and Hindu religious endowments. Case-law discussed. 1955 Andh WR 462 : AIR 1956 Andh 19 (21) (Pr 11) (DB).

——Ss. 13, 80 and 82—Position of benamidar — Conflict among real owners — Benamidar's right to take steps to preserve property.

It is true that under Ss. 80 and 82 of the Trust Act a benamidar holds the property for and on behalf of the real owner in consequence of which there would be resulting trust in respect of the property in favour of the real owner. But then it would be falacious to urge from those sections that the legal ownership in such property vests in the benamidar as it does in the case of a trustee. What those sections really mean is that benamidar is in fiduciary relationship with the real owner and, therefore, has all the obligations of a person in such fiduciary position towards the real owner. A benamidar is no more than an ostensible owner of the property he holds benami though his acts in certain circumstances would be binding upon the real owner. That is because the real owner holds kim out to third parties as an owner of the property. It is, however, impossible to say as in the case of a trustee that any rights in the property either vest in him or that under S. 13 and the sections following thereafter of the Trusts Act any obligations therein set out fall on him. Where there is a conflict amongst the real owners, the benamidar would not be entitled fo take action for preservation of the property, nor can he file a suit or proceeding when he is not supported by the real owners and where they are opposed to maintaining it. 60 Bom L R 740 : A I R 1959 Bom 102 (104) (Pt A) (Pr 11).

Where a person purports to act as a trustee of the property of a deity on the authority of a will executed by a person who had no authority to execute a will devising his right of management to any one, the former must be regarded as a de facto trustee and his son, who manages the property after him must also be regarded as a de facto trustee and he is entitled to file a suit to recover possession of the property of the deity in the hands of the defendants who deny the title of the deity. The fact that the plaintiff while pretending to make a claim for and on behalf of the deity was in substance seeking to advance his own interests is no ground for non-suiting the plaintiff, the interests of the deity being capable of being protected by proper directions such as by putting the plaintiff on terms. Where the madrasa, library and musafirkhana which were attached to a mosque had ceased to exist when the trustees appointed by a scheme framed under S. 92, Civil P. ——Ss. 13, 15, 19, 23—Applicability.

If a trustee acts in such a manner that his action can be fettered by some body else in the discharge of his duties then the trustee becomes responsible for any loss that is occasioned in such circumstances. A trustee must not lodge the money in such a manner as to put it out of another. (1835) 6 E R 1354, Rel. on. Where the defendant undertakes to encash a bank-draft belonging to the plaintiffs from his (defendant's) bank without remuneration, the defendant acts as the plaintiff's agent. But when the draft is encashed in the bank the defendant becomes taustee for the amount and he is under a liability to pay the amount to the plaintiff. It is his duty to act diligently. Delay in obtaining a check-book to withdraw the amount and his allowing the money to remain in the bank longer than is necessary would make the defendant liable for the amount, if the bank in the meanwhile goes into liquidation and suspends payment. I L R (1959) 9 Raj 1186 : AIR 1960 Raj 166 (168) (Pr 7).

——S. 13 — De facto Trustee — Protection of Trust property—Right to sue.

In the matter of trusts it is the de facto trustee who has the right to take steps for the protection of the trust. If the taking of the management of the trust by the plaintiffs is in any way defective, that is a matter which can be agitated separately between the persons really entitled to the management thereof and the persons who have, so to say, usurped that management. But so far as the third party is concerned, it is the de facto trustee who has a right to take steps for the protection of the trust property. 1958 Raj L W 461 : ILR (1958) 8 Raj 456,

——S. 13 — De facto trustee — Competency to bind trust property (Hindu Law—Religious Endowments) —Religious Endowment).

A de facto trustee or trustee de son tort is a person who without title, chooses to take upon himself the characteristics of a trustee. Where certain leases executed by the duly appointed trustees, were sought to be renewed by persons who were not trustee while the previous leases were outstanding and the properties were in possession of those lessees, the renewals did not secure any benefit for the trust and were the result of dissensions in the village and consequent scramble for possession of trust properties :

Held, that the deeds renewing the lease were invalid documents not binding on the trust. I L R (1954) T C 81 : AIR 1954 Trav-Co 254 (256) (Pr 7) (DB).

SECTION 14

● ——Ss. 14 and 19—Trustee not to mix private property with trust property.

A trustee must not mix private property with trust property, because if he does so, he undertakes a heavy burden of proving that any particular property is his, as distinct from the trust. Narayan Bhagwantrao v. Gopal Vinayak. (1960) 1 S C R 773 : (1960) 2 S C A 153 : 1960 S C J 263 : AIR 1960 SC 100 (114) (Pt J) (Pr 43).

——S. 14 — Trustee — Duty of — Mixing up of trust property with own funds—Effect—Purchase of property by trustee out of blended fund—Presumption—Right of beneficiary to claim as trust estate—Claim by trustee as own — Burden of proof—Inquiry as to purchase being out of corpus or income — Propriety.

A trustee wherever the trust property may be placed, must always be careful not to amalgamate it with his own; if he does so the cestui que trust will be entitled to every portion of the blended property which the trustee cannot prove to be his own. If he does not conform to the law or to the provisions of the deed of trust he would be guilty of a breach of trust. If he mixes up the trust property with his own, and uses the mixed fund in the purchase of any property, he has first to make good to the trust estate whatever has been utilised out of the same. The beneficiary or the cestui que trust would be entitled to go against the whole of that property as having been purchased out of the trust fund mixed up with the trustee's own property. Unless and until the trustee establishes successfully before a Court of law that no part of the trust property formed part of the consideration for the purchase of the property and that he had purchased it out of his own separate properties, the presumption should rightly be in favour of holding the property as having been purchased out of the trust fund and the beneficiary or cestui que trust would be entitled to that property and the trustee cannot claim it as his own. The burden is on the trustee or the person or persons deriving title from him (by transfer or purchase) to prove that the property had been acquired out of his separate property. Further once it is proved that there was a mixed fund made up of the trust properties as well as of the personal properties of the trustee, it is not open to the Court to inquire as to whether the property was purchased out of the corpus or from the income. 48 Mad 597, Foll. ILR (1952) Bom 226 : 53 Bom L R 883 : AIR 1952 Bom 106 (110) (Pr 4).

——S. 14—Adverse possession by person in fiduciary capacity—Title against cestui que trust or his representatives cannot be claimed unless trust is discharged — Art. 142, Limitation Act does not apply.

No one who is in the position of a trustee and has acquired property in that capacity can be permitted to assert an adverse title on his own behalf either to the trust or to its representatives until he has obtained a proper discharge from the trust by re-delivery. I L R 34 Mad 257 (PC) and I L R 34 Mad 211 and (1854) 5 De G M and G 78 and (1848) 2 De G and Sm 122, Rel. on. It would not make any essential difference that it is not cestui que trust against which the plea of adverse possession is being raised but against the heirs-at-law or successor of that beneficiary. AIR 1935 All 458 (1), Foll.

The principle does not imply that there is any perpetual bar against the pleading of adverse possession by a person in possession under such circumstances. What is implied is that the foundation of it must be the assertion of an hostile title, by a redelivery of the property obtained on a fiduciary basis, or at least some clear declaration which has that effect.

The principle of Art. 142 of the Limitation Act will not have any application. A person in such possession which had its foundation in a fiduciary obligation, without discharge of it by re-delivery to the trust or its representative, cannot plead that it is for that representative to show that within 12 years of his suit, he was in possession. 76 Mad L W 619 : 1963 Mad W N 549 : AIR 1963 Mad 353 (355) (Prs 8, 9) (DB).

A holder of trust property cannot be permitted to set up a title for himself in it. SECTION 17

——S. 17 — Trustee refusing to act or dying before exercising the power—Court will execute the power.

If the trustee has an imperative power committed to him, his non-execution of the power will not prejudice the cestui que trust and the Court will execute it if by any possibility, it can be done. In such cases the law regards the trustee as the instrument to execute the intention of the testator and if he refuses to act or dies before exercising the power, the Court assumes the office. 1956 Andh W R 582.

——Ss. 17, 18 — Discretionary power of trustee nature of — Interference by Court — When permissible.

Where a power which is purely discretionary is given to a trustee, the Court cannot exercise such power or compel the trustees to exercise such power in any particular manner, but can restrain them from exercising it in any improper manner. If, however, there is a duty coupled with the power, then the Court can compel the trustee to perform that duty. If the trustees refuse to exercise their discretion at all, the Court will treat it as a trust, and direct an inquiry how much ought to be allowed for maintenance and the Court if it considers that the trustees were acting capriciously, can interfere. But if, by the instrument creating the power, the discretion is made absolute and uncontrollable, the Court cannot interfere. The power may be conferred upon the donee either beneficially or in trust. In the latter case the power is merely part of the machinery of the trust. Thus, if property is conveyed to trustees upon certain trusts, with power of sale, the power is a trust-power, and must be exercised, if at all, solely for the purposes of the trust, but the trustees have a discretion as to exercising it, with which the Court will not interfere, so long as the trustees in fact exercise their discretion in good faith. The Court will interfere if trustees refuse to exercise their discretion, or do so capriciously. But there is an intermediate class of cases, where a power of selection is given to a donee who is not otherwise a trustee, and such a power is said to be a 'power in the nature of a trust', since the Court understands the donor of the power as creating a trust for the objects, subject only to the donee's power of the objects although the power has not been exercised, and although the Court cannot directly enforce its exercise. When a trustee of a public religious trust retains trust money in his own hands univested, interest can be allowed to be charged thereon on equitable grounds only. The Indian Trusts Act does not apply to public or private religious or charitable endowments and, therefore, the provisions of S. 23 thereof cannot be used for charging interest from the trustee. The Charitable and Religious Trusts Act has no provision which provides for charging the trustees with interest. Unless a trustee is expressly otherwise authorised or required under the terms of his trust he must duly and promptly invest all capital trust money coming to his hands, and all income which cannot be immediately applied for the purposes of the trust. Therefore, when a trustee in breach of his duty retains the trust money in his own hands uninvested or mixes it with his own money or property, he, besides being required to account for the principal trust money, becomes liable to pay interest thereon. ——S. 34—Suit for administration of trust — Nature of—Court's power to make new trust—Calcutta High Court Original Side Rules, Chapter XIII.

The nature of a suit for administration of a trust is the same as that of a suit for administration of an estate with the only difference that instead of the estate of the deceased, a trust estate has to be administered for the purposes of the trust. In a suit for administration of trust, the Court has no power to make a new trust, by directing certain alteration to be made in the old trust deed by a new deed. Far less does it possess such power in a proceeding started under Chapter XIII of the Original Side Rules of the Calcutta High Court, read with S. 34 of the Trusts Act. Possessing both jurisdiction and power to make a particular order, if it passes the order in a case, where it should not have been done, the order does not become a nullity. 48 Cal 138, Foll.; 63 C W N 467, Dist. (1961) 65 Cal W N 649 : I L R (1962) 1 Cal 159.

It is permissible for the High Court in a suit for administration of the trust relating to a private trust to frame a scheme for the proper management of the trust. The law does not empower a single trustee to transfer property so as to bind other trustee or the cestui que trust. SECTION 36

——Ss. 36, 37—Right to trustee to sell trust property —Succession Act (1925), S. 307.

A trustee as such has no right to sell the trust property unless the deed of trust confers such a power. There is no such express power conferred by the Act upon the trustee. The limitation imposed by S. 36, Trusts Act on the power of a trustee to lease the trust property is suggestive of this fact. A trustee no doubt is a legal owner of the property, the beneficial ownership in the same vesting in the beneficiary or the cestui que trust. Merely because the property is vested in the trustee or the legal owner the trustee is not entitled to sell the same.

When the testator expresses his confidence in an executor whom he appoints under the terms of his will that the executor will continue to manage the properties in the same manner as he (the testator) was doing during his lifetime, it predicates the care and caution as also the prudence in the management of the properties of which the testator himself was capable. He expects that the executor will manage the properties as prudently and with the care same and caution as he himself was managing the same. That does not, however, import a power to sell of the type which the testator as the owner of the properties

——S. 41 — Fund applicable to maintenance of children at discretion of trustees — Power of Court to control discretion in guardianship proceedings.

——Ss. 43 and 48 — Reference to arbitration by one trustee without concurrence of co-trustees — Competeacy—(Arbitration Act (1940), S. 21).

It is not within the competence of a trustee to refer a matter in which the trust is interested to the arbitration without obtaining the concurrence of the co-trustees for in view of the provisions of S. 21, Arbitration Act it is necessary for a valid reference that all the interested parties should join the application for reference. When two or more trustees are appointed for the administration of a trust, they all form but one collective trustee and they must exercise jointly all those powers that call for their discretion and judgment unless the instrument of trust authorises a sole trustee to execute the trust and the powers thereof. It is open to the body of co-trustees to authorise one of them to perform acts which have been agreed to by all and which cannot conveniently be performed by them all, but the trustee who is so authorised is considered to be an agent of all co-trustees and not as an individual trustee. ——Ss. 44, 76 — Deed providing for certain number of trustees and filling up vacancies—Death of trustee —Serviving trustees—Right of to represent estates.

The existence of a provision in a trust deed for a particular number of trustees and a provision for filling up vacancies in their places does not, in law, necessarily or merely by itself, debar the surviving trustees from representing the trust estate, in case there is any outstanding vacancy in the number of trustees. Where their number does not fall below the minimum number of trustees required under the deed, the surviving trustees would be quite competent to represent the trust estate. 1932 M W N 297 : AIR 1917 Mad 730; AIR 1941 All 387; 60 E R 499 and A I R 1949 Mad 654 ;(1949) 1 Mad L J 291, Rel. on. 64 Cal W N 488 : I L R (1960) 2 Cal 900: A I R 1960 Cal 489 (491) (Pt B) (Pr 13) (DB).

——S. 47 — Delegation of duties by trustee — Term requiring two trustees to act under one—Validity.

No trustee can delegate his powers and duties to another trustee. An agreement to do so is illegal and void.

Where therefore the provisions of original will creating the trust appoints three trustees and does not provide for the delegation of duty by them, a term in a subsequent settlement requiring two trustees to act according to the directions of the third who is to be the managing trustee, thus making them merely his agents, violates the fundamental principles of the law of trustees and is not covered by any of the exceptions noted in S. 47. 89 Cal L J 224 : I L R (1954) 2 Cal 41 : A I R 1952 Cal 763 (767) (Pt B) (Prs 28, 29).

——S. 47, Explanation — Guardian of minor appointing special attorney in regular course of business — Attorney can borrow money, when negotiation and terms of loan are done at instance of guardian.

Where the guardian a pardanashin lady appoints a special attorney in the regular course of business and the appointment is necessary for the proper managment of ancestral business of the minor, the delegation is perfectly authorised by S. 47 of the Trusts Act. The guardian can legally delegate power to borrow money to her Mokhtarkhas and the loan incurred by him is valid and binding on the minors, the act of the special attroney being simply an act of ministerial nature requiring no exercise of any discretion on his part when the guardian herself negotiates and settles the terms of the loan and everything is done at her instance and with her knowledge. AIR 1922 P C 209, Distinguished. 1959 B L J R 769 : AIR 1960 Pat 271 (280) (Pt B) (Prs 70, 71).

——S. 47 — Trustee—Powers of, to appoint another as trustee.

Trusteeship by its very nature is not transferable or alienable. The trustee of a property has no power whatsoever to appoint another as trustee of the same property. Such a deed of trust created by the trustee is void ab initio. 3 I C 549, Rel. on. ('49) 1949 T C L R 70 (DB).

SECTION 48

● ——Ss. 48 and 34 —Co-trustees—Joint execution — Trust 'otherwise provides'—Co-trustees — Discretion in trust deed to trustees to act according to unanimous or majority decisions—Construction—Clause held did not provide for exception to S. 48 — Conveyance of trust property — All trustees not joining in execution — Conveyance invalid and passed no title to alienees.

Under S. 48, all acts which the trustees intend to take for executing the trust must be taken by all of them acting together. If one of the trustees refuses to join in the execution of the trust, Section 34 provides for the remedy. But S. 48 also contemplates that if a trust deed under which more trustees than one are appointed expressly provides that the execution of the trust may be carried out not by all but by one or more, then of course the matter would be governed by the special provision of the trust deed.

Held, in the instant case that, reading the clause as a whole, it did not allow two of the three trustees to act without joining the third trustee in the actual action to be taken in the execution of the trust. Thus read this clause conforms to the statutory provisions contained in S. 48 of the Trust Act and was not intended to provide for an exception to the said provisions at all. Therefore, where only two out of three trustees had joined in the execution of the sale deeds of the trust properties in the administration of the trust, the sale deeds must be held to be invalid and could pass no title to the alienees: (1945) 1 Mad L J 97; AIR 1945 P C 23, Rel. on., L. ——S. 48—Term of settlement requiring two trustees to act under one — Validity.

Where the instrument of trust appoints three persons to at as trustees, it is the duty of every one of them to exercise and give the benefit of his individual judgment and discretion in respect of all matters concerning the trust. Where therefore a subsequent settlement provides that one of the trustees called as a managing trustee should be the supreme trustee and the other two trustees should act according to his directions, such a provision is illegal as it contravenes S. 48. 89 Cal L J 224 : ILR (1954) 2 Cal 41 : AIR 1952 Cal 763 (767) (Pt C) (Prs 30, 31).

——S. 48 — Several trustees—Powers of — Power of beneficiary trustee to consent to splitting up of division of rent.

When there are trustees more than one, it is essential that they must join together in the performance of any duty which the trust deed imposes upon them. When a settlor has made a settlement with the trustees, each one of the trustees has got to exercise his individual judgment and discretion on every matter. The exceptions which exist with regard to this principle are well settled. If there is a direction to the contrary in the deed of settlement all the trustees need not join in any particular act, they also need not act together in the matter of receiving the income of the trust estate or in regard to other affairs where delegations of the trustees' duties is permissible under the law. In the absence of a direction to the contrary in the deed of settlement, it is not competent to one of the trustees, even though he was a beneficiary trustee, to consent to the splitting up of division of the rent. ('49) ILR (1949) 1 Cal 165 (175) (DB).

——S. 63 — Applicability — Doctrine of tracing property or receipts thereof.

Paragraph 2 of S. 63, Trusts Act, only recognises the right of the beneficiary to follow up property whatever shape it might take and in all its transmutations. A cestui que trust can seize upon the fund or property into which it has been converted. But this doctrine cannot be extended to cases where the trustee transfers his own properties (which are not traceable to the funds of the beneficiary) to third parties. The right of the cestui que trust or beneficiary is only to claim the specie or its equivalent in whosesoever hand it be. The property of the trustee which was not purchased with the trust money cannot answer that description. Where an executor under a will, who is in the position of a trustee, amalgamates the trust estate with his own managing it as one unit, and subsequently purchases new property out of such mixed estate in his own name, the presumption is that the property has been purchased by the trustee out of the trust fund mixed up though it may be with his own property. Unless and until the trustee succeeds in establishing before a Court of law that no part of the trust property formed part of the consideration for the purchase of that property and he had purchased it out of his own separate property or properties, he would not be able to claim the property as his own, and the beneficiary or the cestui que trust would be entitled to that property.

If the trustee transfers such property to a third person and the beneficiary brings a suit against the transferee for recovery of such property, the onus of proving that the property in suit was purchased from the mixed fund is not on the plaintiff but the onus is on the defendant to prove that the property had been acquired by the trustee from his self-acquisitions. Once it is proved by the plaintiff that there was a mixed fund made up of the personal properties of the trustee as well as the trust property, the plaintiff's part of the case is established and it is not open to the Court to enquire as to whether the property was purchased from the corpus or from the income. 48 Mad 597, Applied. 53 Bom L R 883: ILR (1952) Bom 226 : AIR 1952 Bom 106 (110 to 112) (Pt A) (Pr 5a) (DB).

——S. 63 — Trusts — Administrator of Mills diverting its funds to personal use — Company (mills) in liquidation — Doctrine of tracing trust monies — Trust pursuit rule — Doctrine of Election — Principles of application.

Two applications were filed before the High Court by the Official Liquidator one on behalf of the company K in liquidation for directing the second respondent — Trust to pay certain liquidated sum out of the amounts in its hands belonging to T the first respondent, and to retain the balance pending settlement of accounts between the company in liquidation and the first respondent. The second application was also by the Official Liquidator for an injunction restraining the Alagappa Textiles (Cochin) from paying to any party or otherwise disposing of a sum in their hands to the credit of first respondent or directing them to pay the sum to the Official Liquidator. The High Court held that the sole remedy available to the Official Liquidator was to take possession of all shares purchased by first respondent from and out of the funds of K mills in liquidation, while he was the managing administrator of the company, as 20,000 shares had been already sold under orders of Court and moneys realized, the remedy still available to the Official Liquidator, was only to proceed against first respondent for criminal breach of trust, and deliberate flouting of the Court's orders concerning his utilization of the certain funds of the K mills which were entrusted to him. Upon the doctrine of election, the High Court was of the view that the Official Liquidator had elected to pursue the property of the beneficiary, K mills wrongfully converted to other uses by the fiduciary, first respondent, in the form, of the shares. Having done this the Official Liquidator could not pursue the moneys retained by the trust or the moneys standing to the credit of the first respondent with the Textiles. The Official Liquidator was also entitled to proceed against the remaining 13,500 shares. The Board of Directors administering the K mills as a going concern, in succession to the Official Liquidator filed appeal against the High Court decision.

Held, that in the context of the incontrovertible facts it was impossible to hold that the doctrine of election estopped the Board of Directors from further progress under the Trust pursuit rule. That doctrine implied a knowledge of alternative, and a choice of one of two alternatives. The trust was undoubtedly a transferee for valuable consideration, without notice of the claim of the beneficiary as far as the moneys received by it from the first respondent were concerned. Hence it would not be equitable or justified to permit the Board of Directors to pursue moneys in the hands of Trust any further under the trust pursuit rule. The shares were 'goods' within the meaning of S. 2 (7) of the Sale of Goods Act. The delivery of share certificates with blank transfers signed by the transferor, amounted to conveyance of good title in the shares to the purchaser; and registry of shares was not necessary for vesting title. ——Ss. 63, 64 — Company — Liquidation — Administrator appointed by Court to carry on affairs — Later flouting orders of Court and committing acts of misappropriation and diversion of funds of company to private uses — Right of liquidator to proceed against transferees of funds and property of company — Extent of and limits to — Election — Doctrine of — Principles — Trust pursuit rule — Essentials — Bona fide transferee without notice — If protected — Shares in company — If 'goods' — Transfer of scrip with blank transfers — If conveys title without registry — Sale of Goods Act (3 of 1930), S 2 (7).

Where, in liquidation proceedings of a company, an administrator is appointed by Court directing him to do certain acts and giving him powers to act in a specified manner, but he disobeys the order and directions of the Court and commits acts of misappropriation and diversion of the funds of the company (in liquidation), the liquidator can proceed against such funds in the hands of the transferees. The doctrine of election implies a knowledge of alternatives and a choice of one of two alternatives. When applying the doctrine to the trust pursuit rule, i. e, pursuing trust property in the hands of transferees from the trustee, if there is a clear and sharp conversion of trust moneys into other forms of property, the pursuing beneficiary, having knowledge of such conversion and a choice of alternatives, has the right to elect either to take the property purchased or to have a charge on it for the amount of the trust money, but not both. But this principle cannot be applied to a case, where, for instance, there has been a partial conversion, to a limited extent, and the beneficiary seizes the property so made available under the trust pursuit rule; that does not imply that his claim to the balance of funds, not embodied in some other form of property, is also extinguished or lost, so as to estop the beneficiary from further progress under the trust pursuit rule. Where the party in whose hands trust moneys are sought to be pursued is a transferee for valuable consideration without notice of the claims of the beneficiary who seeks to pursue them, the beneficiary must stop short of such pursuit in respect of such moneys. The beneficiaries cannot recover moneys whether obtained by fraud or misuse by a fiduciary which are in the hands of persons who are alienees for valuable consideration, without notice of the fraud on the trust, as such a transferee is protected under S. 65, Trusts Act. If the claimant's moneys are handed over by way of transfer to a person who takes for value without notice of the claimant's equity, the claim (like all equitable claims in like circumstances) is extinguished. Equity will follow the trust money only to the extent to which it can be identified; where there is a mingling which makes identification impossible, tracing cannot be further pursued. 78 Mad L W 214 : ILR (1964) 2 Mad 244 : (1965) 1 Comp L J 89 : (1965) 1 M L J 234.

——S. 66—Right of beneficiary to preferential payment — Trust money mixed up with family business in Burma—Fund not traceable in India—Beneficiary held not entitled to charge over properties of trustees in India.

In order to entitle beneficiary to a preferential payment, there must be a fund to which the trust money is traceable which is still available. Where the fund is not there, no question of tracing can arise.

Stridhana moneys of A were invested by her husband V in the family business in Burma. V's creditors in India applied for adjudicating him as insolvent and in a composition scheme certain sum was brought from Burma to India for distribution to creditors. The composition scheme failed and A applied for a charge for her stridhanam moneys over P's Indian assets in lieu of the amount brought from Burma.

Held, that beyond the sum which was received at the time of the composition and paid over to the creditors, no other sum of money from that place was traceable in any of the Indian assets. There were no doubts other properties in Burma over which A could continue to have a charge or a right to preferential payment therefrom. It may also be that by reason of the fact that the composition had failed, she could take appropriate proceedings to get back the sum paid to the creditors. But in liue of what was paid to the creditors, A could not have a charge over other Indian assets to the acquisition of which no part of the money from Burma could be traced. 1880-13 Ch D 696, Rel. on; A I R 1930 Mad 24, Disting. 1962 Mad W N 298 : AIR 1962 Mad 406 (409, 410) (Prs 9, 10) (DB).

—Ss. 70, 71, 73 and 10 — Bankrupt trustee can act as trustee—(Presidency Towns Insolvency Act (1909), Ss. 10, 103-A and 119).

A bankrupt trustee can act as a trustee after his order of adjudication and when his order of adjudication is in operation and has not been annulled, he is competent to sell as trustee the trust property.

The insolvency of a trustee will not ipso facto discharge him from his office of a trustee. The mere fact of insolvency of a trustee will not discharge him but some further step will have to be taken to effect his discharge. The further step is the appointment of a new trustee in his place. Until, therefore, a new trustee is appointed in the place of the bankrupt trustee, the bankrupt trustee must be held to continue his office of trustee.

This result appears to follow from the construction of Ss. 70, 71 and 73 of the Trusts Act. Chapter V of the Trusts Act dealing with the disabilities of trustees in Ss. 46 to 54 does not affect this result.

This view is also fortified by the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act and its relevant section on the point.

Implications of Ss. 103-A and 119 of Presidency Towns Insolvency Act considered.

Section 10 of the Trusts Act cannot be construed as having the effect that the moment a trustee becomes insolvent he ceases to be a trustee by the very order of his adjudication. SECTION 71

—Ss. 71 and 72—Extinction of trust by fulfilment—Trustee is automatically discharged — District Judge has no jurisdiction to order discharge in sense to release trustee from obligation to render accounts.

The District Judge cannot under Ss. 71 and 72 give a discharge to the trustee in the sense of a release from his liability to render account. When a trustee has ceased to be a trustee by the fulfilment of the object of the trust he is under a liability to render account to the beneficiaries. As the settlement of accounts cannot be done by the District Judge, his discharge or release from liability cannot be ordered by him. Sections 71 and 72 therefore, when they authorise the District Judge to discharge a trustee refer a case in which a trustee wishes to go out of his office during the subsistence of the trust when another person may be appointed in his place. The District Judge therefore has no jurisdiction to discharge a trustee when he has been discharged automatically by the extinction of the trust and even if there is such jurisdiction there is no jurisdiction to release him from his liability to render accounts. SYNOPSIS

1. Scope.
2. Clause (a)—Purpose is fulfilled.
3. Clause (b)—Purpose becomes unlawful.
4. Clause (c) — Fulfilment of purpose becomes impossible.

1. Scope.

—S. 77—Discharge of trustees — Does not result in extinction of trust — Order does not bar beneficiaries from setting up validity of trust in subsequent action. ILR (1964) 2 All 191.

2. Clause (a)—Purpose is fulfilled.

—S. 77 (a), (c)—Execution of trust in 1932 — Trust not extinquished by coming into force of U. P. Encumbered Estates Act—Debt Laws — U. P. Encumbered Estates Act (25 of 1934), Ss. 18, 19, 35.

On the 29th August 1932 one Raja Bishwanath Saran Singh Bahadur executed a deed of trust appointing himself and eight other persons as trustees. One of the main purposes of this trust was the liquidation of the huge debts incurred by the author of the trust :

Held the effect of the provisions of Ss. 18, 19 and 35 of the U. P. Encumbered Estates Act (25 of 1934) was to extinguish all rights of secured creditors in the landed property, and to vest such property in the debtor free of all encumbrances. The purpose of the trust deed also was a similar one—The Encumbered Estates Act only provided a machinery whereby the purpose of the trust could be achieved more expeditiously. The debts due from Raja Bishwanath Saran Singh had not been liquidated, and the proceedings under the Encumbered Estates Act closed prior to the date of the institution of the suit concerning the trust. Under the circumstances it could not be said that the trust was extinguished as a result of the coming into force of the U.P. Encumbered Estates Act or the institution of proceedings thereunder. In the present case the purpose of the trust had not been completely fulfilled. On the other hand the purpose was in the course of fulfilment. It cannot be said that the Encumbered Estates Act has resulted in the destruction of the trust property. Therefore neither Clause (a) nor Clause (c) of S. 77 of the Trusts Act could be invoked in support of the argument that the trust which came into existence by virtue of the trust deed stood extinguished as a result of the coming into force of the Encumbered Estates Act. ILR (1964) 2 All 191.

——S. 77 (a) (c)—Execution of trust in 1929—Trust not extinguished by coming into force of U. P. Act 1 of 1951 and U. P. Act 15 of 1953 — U. P. Zamindari and Land Reforms Act (1 of 1951), Ss. 27, 65 — U. P. Zamindars Debt Reduction Act (15 of 1953).

Trust executed on the 29th August 1932 by a Zamindar — One of the main purposes of this trust was the liquidation of the huge debts incurred by the author of the trust.

Held, that as a result of the passing of the U. P. Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act, the property which was the subject matter of the trust deed would be replaced by two kinds of properties. The first would be the properties which might be said to be the vestige of the old landed property, and the second would be compensation. As to the first, these would be interests in land like bhumidhari rights and other rights remaining in the landed property. This would be immovable property, The trust, instead of operating on the estate which was the subject matter of the trust deed in 1932, would now operate on these new properties which had taken the place of the old properties. It could not, therefore, be said that the replacement of the new properties for the old ones had resulted in the complete fulfilment of the purpose. Section 77 (c) also could not be invoked because it could not be said that the purpose had become impossible as a result of the replacement of the old rights by the new ones. Further, it could not be said that the trust property was completely destroyed. These properties remained existing, although the rights therein had been modified and had assumed a new form and title. The debts which were payable from the estate would now be realisable from the compensation money.

The U. P. Zamindars Debt Reduction Act, 1952 (U. P. Act No. 15 of 1953), was promulgated for the purpose of meeting a situation that was created by the U. P. Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act (1 of 1951). The trust could not be said to have been extinguished either under cl. (a) or cl. (c) of S. 77 of the Indian Trusts Act as a result of the coming into force of the U. P. Zamindars' Debt Reduction Act. Far from making it impossible, this Act gave a practical shape to the possibility while saving some amount to the holder of the land in case of secured debts. ——S. 77—Provision in trust deed that trust to come to end on wife's death or son's attaining certain age, whichever later — Trust is extinguished upon death of wife or son's attaining that age whichever is later —Trustee stands discharged but liability to render account remains.

After making provisions for the wife and sons the trust deed declared, "this trust will come to an end at the death of Mrs. D (wife of the executor) provided K. D. (one of the sons of the executor) has also attained the age of 23 years. It is also provided that when this trust comes to an end as provided above, the trust property or the sale proceeds thereof, as the case may be, shall be divided in equal shares among my said two sons."

Held that the words of the deed were absolutely clear that the trust was to come to an end at the death of Mrs. D or when K. D. attained the ege of 23 years, whichever was later and the property was to be divided after the trust had come to an end. The trustee, therefore stood automatically discharged from his office upon the death of Mrs. D and on K D's attaining the age of 23 years. But this discharge did not mean that the trustee was relieved from his duty of renderlng accounts and delivering the trust property to the beneficiaries. 1952 All L J 259 : 1952 All W R (H C) 345 : ILR (1953) 2 All 872 : AIR 1952 All 825 (827) (Pt B) (Pr 7) (DB).

3. Clause (b)—Purpose becomes unlawful.

——Ss. 77 (b), (c), 83 — Trust deed providing for liquidation of debts of author of trust and entailment of property— Entailment not legally possible— Purpose regarding payment of debts would not be affected — Trust not extinguished—Tenancy laws— Oudh Settled Estates Act (5 of 1917), Ss. 3, 15.

One of the main purposes of this trust was the liquidation of the huge debts incurred by the author of the trust. There was a provision in the trust deed for entailment of property within a year after liquidation of the debts.

Held, that the entailment of the estate by the trustees would not be legally permissible or possible. It could not be said that as a result of the impossibility of entailment of the estate, the trust itself had failed altogether. The two purposes were clearly severable and independent of each other. The second purpose began only after the first one was achieved or had ended. In case there was a failure of the purpose at the second stage, under the Trusts Act a resulting trust would follow for the benefit of the author of the trust or his legal representatives. It could not be said that the trust was extinguished under cls. (b) and (c) of S. 77 of the Trusts Act, 1882, because of the legal impossibility of entailment of the estate under the Oudh Settled Estates Act. ——S. 77 — Cypres — Doctrine of — Scope.

The cypres doctrine broadly stated would connote that when a general charitable intention is expressed by the donor it would not be permitted to fail on the ground that the mode, if specified, cannot be executed, and, the law would substitute another mode as near as possible to the mode specified. But when the particular mode of application is the essence of the donor's intention and that mode becomes incapable of being performed then the Court cannot possibly have any power to direct any other charitable application in place of the one which has failed.

Petitioner who claimed to be a trustee in respect of certain religious institution situted at a place in Pakistan, claimed from the Government property under the compensation law to enable him to establish an institution of which he should be allowed to act as a trustee on lines similar to those on which the previous institution used to be run in village in West Pakistan by seeking application of cypres doctrine.

Held, that the petitioner was not entitled to any allotment of property on the basis of doctrine of cy pres. ILR (1963) 1 Pun 385.

is taken into consideration in India in determining whether the transaction is benami or not, and the criterion in these cases is to consider from what source the money is paid. In such a case the onus is not on the plaintiff to prove that the intention was not to acquire the properties for the benefit of the wife in whose name they are acquired, rather, they clearly indicate that, unless there is any evidence to show the intention of the acquirer to acquire the properties for the benefit of the wife, the acquisitions in the name of the wife are for the benefit of the acquirer. 1965 BLJR 800 : AIR 1966 Pat 110 (125, 126) (Pt D) (Prs 51, 53) (DB).

——S. 82—Benami—Transaction partly benami.

There can be a sale deed in the name of two persons, one of whom is a benamidar for a third person. AIR 1944 All 130 and AIR 1922 Bom 107, Dist. 1951 All W R (H C) 428 : 1951 A L J 449 (DB).

—S. 82 — Benami—Nature of transactions—Words and phrases — Benami.

Word 'benami' is popularly used to denote two classes of transactions even though each differs from the other in the legal character and incidents. In one sense, it means a transaction which is sham or unreal. In the other sense it is used for the transaction which is genuine but the real purchaser is not one who is shown to be such. The ostensible purchaser is a mere name lender and the beneficial interest in fact rests with the real owner. When a dispute arises as to whether a person named in the deed is the real transferee, one has to enquire into the question as to who paid the consideration for the transfer. This practice of putting property into a false name, that is, in the name of a person other than the real owner, is not uncommon. (1963) 47 I T R 516 : ILR (1963) Andh Pra 636 (DB).

● —Ss. 82 and 88 — Applicability and scope — Benami Sales — Nature of, effect of — Section 66, Civil P. C — Applicability — Suit by plaintiff against defendant (an auction purchaser) on the ground that defendant was only a benamidar falls within S. 66, Civil P C. (1908), irrespective of the fact that the certified purchaser happened to be agent of the plaintiff even before the particular transaction took place. Section 82 applies to all sales of benami nature. Section 88 applies when the person making use of fiduciary position buys some property and that would enure for the benefit of the beneficiary. It does not cover benami purchases. See Civil P. C. (1908), S. 66. AIR 1962 Andh Pra 49 (FB).

—S. 82 — Applicability—Transaction not benami.

Section 82, Trusts Act, contains only the principle of benami. It does not apply to a transaction which cannot in any sense be described as a benami one. (1957) 2 An W R 573 : AIR 1958 Andh Pra 329 (330) (Pt B) (Pr 9).

—S. 82 — Benami — Law, relating to — Applicability to movable property and to carrying on business in benami — Business in co-partnership with one's own benamidar — Valid — Partnership Act (1932), S. 4 — Rights of benamidar.

The law of benami is applicable generally to all kinds of properties including movable property. The share in the partnership is a property and the ostensible partner may very well be not the real partner but only a benamidar of the real partner.

Benamidar has all the rights of the ostensible owner and he can institute suit in his own name and the defendant is not entitled to non-suit him on proof that he is nothing more than a benamidar. When two persons enter into a partnership agreement, there is an agreement between two real persons even though one is benamidar of the other. It satisfies all the conditions laid down in S. 4 of the Partnership Act. It would be a good partnership in the eye of law.

Having regard to the accepted law that a benamidar can sue and be sued against, the third party cannot question the existence of partnership. Whether one of the partners holds the share for the benefit of the other partners, is no concern of anybody else. In determining the relationship between the partners one of which is the benamidar of the other, and in adjusting their rights inter se, there is no reason why the rules regarding benami transactions cannot be made applicable. There is nothing inconsistent in this.

There is nothing in the law of partnership to prevent the plaintiff from making a case that apart from having a share in his own name he was holding a further share in the partnership in the benami of his son. AIR 1962 Cal 569 (575) (Pt A) (Pr 20).

—S. 82 — Benami transaction by alien — Immovable property — Alien claiming it as his own — Not valid — A non-state subject cannot be permitted in J. and K. State to purchase immovable property in the name of benamidar and then claim it as his own. See J. and K. Transfer of Property Act (42 of 1977), S. 139. AIR 1965 J and 83 (DB).

—S. 82 — Benami — What constitutes—A associating himself with others, so called benamidars in acquisition of property — This is fundamentally opposed to the concept of benami — Acquisition cannot be held to be made in the names of others benami for A. 1960 Ker L J 44 : 1960 Ker L T 1366.

—S. 82 — Scope.

A darkhast grant of a site by the Government without any consideration does not come within the scope of S. 82. 1954 Mad W N 298 : ILR (1954) Mad 1195 : (1954) 2 M L J 35 : 67 Mad L W 315 : AIR 1954 Mad 811 (812) (Pt A) (Pr 9) (DB).

—Ss. 82 and 88 — Suit for declaration of title and recovery of possession alleging that defendants were benamidar in Court-auction purchaser — Section 66 (1) is attracted and hence suit not maintainable — Section 82, Trusts Act, excludes from its scope S. 66 (1), Civil P. C. See Civil P. C. (1908), S. 66 (1). AIR 1965 Pat 384 (DB).

—S. 82 —Benami —Sale deed in favour of A and B —Suit by A for declaration that B was only nominal party — Transaction can be declared partly genuine and partly benami.

One type of benami transaction arises where two persons combine to jointly purchase a property and one of them is the real purchaser and the other is a nominal one. In such a case there would not be anything wrong if the Court holds that of the two purchasers of the property, the one was the real purchaser and the other was only a nominal one. When the Courts come to a conclusion like that, they do something in the nature of holding that a transaction is partly genuine and partly unreal. For, the attack in such a case is not as regards the genuineness or otherwise of a transaction but is only with reference to some of the parties thereto. AIR 1944 All 130, Diss. from; AIR 1922 Bom 107, Disting. 1963 Raj L W 92 : ILR (1963) 13 Raj 377.

2. Intention and presumption.

● —S. 82 — Benami transaction in order to circumvent Service Rules—Benami arrangement not tainted with illegality as service rules were not shown to be statutory rules. See Contract Act (1872), S. 23. AIR 1965 S C 1364.

—S. 82 — Benami — Tests.

In order to decide whether a sale deed is benami for another it is necessary to consider the following relevant factors : (1) Motive for taking the sale deed in the name of another, (2) custody of the sale deed and the connected vouchers, (3) passing of consideration and (4) possession of the property. (1961) 2 Andh W R 271 : 1961 Andh L T 974 : ILR (1962) Andh Pra 413 : AIR 1962 Andh Pra 226 (228) (Pt A) (Pr 6) (DB).

—S. 82—Benami—Test of—Evidence.

The essence of a benami is the intention of the parties. The source of sale-price also plays a large part in the determination of the nature of the transaction.

Thus where a sale-deed alleged to be benami did not disclose any intention on the part of the vendor to benefit persons other than the vendee and the money required for the purchase was found by mortgaging the very properties which were the subject-matter of the sale and the debt was discharged by sale of some of the properties covered by it :

Held, that the essential elements of a benami transaction were lacking. 1956 Andh W R 943 : A I R 1956 Andh 225 (227) (Pt A) (Prs 10 to 12) (DB).

——S. 82 — Benami sale in name of daughter — Possession with father and his joint family — Presumption of daughter's ownership.

Where the consideration for a certain promissory note was paid by A but the sale deed executed by the debtor in discharge of his debt was executed in the name of A's daughter B and it was contended by C, B's husband, that the property belonged to B.

Held, that it had to be proved that A intended to provide the consideration for the benefit of his daughter, but there was no evidence to show that A who lent joint family moneys and obtained the promissory note in the name of his daughter intended to make a gift of those moneys to her or that he wanted the properties purchased in her name to belong to her exclusively.

(2) that the fact that possession was not delivered to B but continued with the joint family was conclusive evidence that A treated it as joint family property belonging to himself and his sons and that no beneficial interest was intended to be given to B.

(3) That no valid gift from A to B could therefore be inferred from the facts. AIR 1955 N U C (Andhra) 5835.

——S. 82—Benami—Determination—Decision should be based on legal evidence and not on suspicion. AIR 1955 N U C (Cal) 1542 (DB).

——S. 82 — Benami — Evidence of—Source of consideration.

The best criterion for determining whether a transaction is or is not benami is the source of purchase money. A I R 1931 Lah 419 and AIR 1949 F C 88, Rel. on. AIR 1955 Him Pra 2 (3) (Pt B) (Pr 7).

——S. 82 — Benami — Test of — Factors to be taken int consideration stated.

In order to find out whether a transaction is benami, one must have regard to the following facts, viz., (i) the source from which the purchase money was derived; (ii) the possession of the property, i. e., (a) the party in possession, and the nature and character of his possession; (b) whether possession was taken after the alleged gift or purchase—if not taken, why not; (iii) the position of the parties and their relation to one another; (iv) the circumstances, pecuniary or otherwise, of the alleged transferor; (v) his motive in making the alleged transfer; (vi) the custody and production of the title-deed, and (vii) the previous and subsequent conduct of the parties. But it must be noted that each of these circumstances taken by itself is of no particular value and affords no conclusive proof of the intention to transfer the ownership from one person to the other. But a combination of some or all of them and a proper weighing and appreciation of their value would go a great way towards indicating whether the ownership has been really transferred, or where the real title lies. AIR 1955 Mad 648 (649) (Pt A) (Pr 19) (DB).

——S. 82 — Benami — Gift of property by husband in favour of his wife — Wife taking no steps for mutation in her name — Husband declared insolvent subsequently - No inference about benami character of gift transaction could be drawn merely from such non-mutation or from payment of municipal taxes and rent of the property through her husband. ——S. 82 — Benami Transactions — Essentials of benami —Nature—Consideration of motive, relationship between parties and source of consideration necessary—Transaction in question held benami.

To determine whether a transaction is of a benami nature, the actual points to be considered are (i) was there any motive for a benami; (ii) was the alleged benamidar so connected with the alleged principal as to render it probable that he should be selected as a benamidar; (iii) in whose possession and custody was the document of title; (iv) who was in possession; and (v) from which source did the consideration come.

Thus where it was admitted that the source of money for the Fixed Deposits and cash certificates was the plaintiff's savings Bank account with the Bank; that the relationship was of brother and sister as between the 1st defendant and the plaintiff, and that of aunt and nephew as between the plaintiff and the other defendants; that the possession and custody of the documents was with the plaintiff and as regards motive it was clear that the plaintiff never really intended to part with monies, and the idea of an out and out gift was never in her mind; the transactions in question namely the fixed Deposits and Cash Certificates, though standing in the name of the defendants, were all benami, the real owner in respect thereof being the plaintiff herself. ILR (1962) Cut 625 : A I R 1962 Orissa 74 (77, 78) (Pt B) (Pr 9) (DB).

——S. 82 — Benami — Tests to decide the nature of transactions indicated — The onus of proving the allegation is on the person alleging the benami character of the transaction. See Evidence Act (1872), Ss. 101-103. AIR 1955 N U C (Orissa) 715.

——S. 82—Benami—Tests—Question of fact—Second appeal.

In determining the question of benami, motive for the transaction, relationship between the parties, payment of consideration, custody of the document and possession over the property are the main tests. The decision on all these points is a decision on questions of fact. 1958 B L J R 330 : 1958 Pat L R 143 : I L R 37 Pat 658 : A I R 1958 Pat 434 (436) (Pt A) (Pr 3) (DB).

——S. 82 — Property purchased in joint names of husband and wife the former contributing money — Presumption of advancement — Onus — Rule in India — Husband in affluent position and no motive for entering into benami transaction — Transaction held for advancement of wife—(Husband and wife — Advancement) (Benami transactions)—(Evidence Act (1872), S. 114).

The general principle of equity, applicable both in England and in India, is that in the case of a voluntary conveyance of property by a grantor, without any declaration of trust, there is a presumption of a resulting trust in favour of the grantor, unless it can be proved that an actual gift was intended. But the presumption may be rebutted in either of two ways.

The principle applies in India. Section 82 of the Trusts Act recognises that money may have been contributed by another person towards the purchase with the intention of giving beneficial interest to the person in whose name the purchase is made. In this context the relationship of husband and wife, between the person who contributes money and the person in whose name it is taken will be very important factor in determining whether the transaction was really meant for the benefit of the wife or not.

The onus lies in the first instance on the defendant who pleads that these transactions are benami The mere suspicion that the purchases might not have wholly been made with the lady's money will certainly not suffice to establish that the purchases were benami, nor even the suspicion that money belonging to the husband whether in a small measure or a larger measure, must have also contributed to these purchases. Even in cases where there is positive evidence that money had been contributed by the husband and not by the wife, that circumstance is not conclusive in favour of the benami character of the transaction though it is an important criterion. AIR 1933 Mad 8, Rel. on.

Where the purchase of the house was made in the joint names of the husband and wife and there is evidence to indicate that at the material time the husband was in an affluent circumstance and there was no motive why he should enter into benami transaction, and it was therefore impossible to suggest that he was involved in debt at the time or that there was any motive on his part for entering into benami transaction with view to defeat or delay creditors.

Held that the transaction of the purchase of the house was not benami and that the husband made the purchase for the advancement of his wife. —S. 82—Benami—Test—Intention of husband — (Husband and wife).

The fact that purchases were made by the husband who paid the price out of his own funds is not itself a conclusive test for determining whether the transaction was benami or not. This depends upon the intention of the parties. Thus, where the intention of the husband when he made the purchases in favour of his wife was to benefit the wife who he expected would continue to live with him as his wife throughout his natural life the transactions cannot be held to be benami. AIR 1952 Trav. Co 426 (426, 427) (Prs 4, 7) (DB).

3. Advancement.

—S. 82—Benami — Purchase of property by wife —Thongh consideration for sale transsction proceeded from husband his subsequent conduct showing his admission that title to property vested in wife — Purchase by wife cannot be held to be benami for husband but she is herself the owner of the property — Fact that the husband was in possession and management of the property or that he was receiving the rents does not affect the position — In ordinary Hindu families property belonging exclusively to a female member would also be normally managed by the manager of the family. Kanakarathanammal v. Lognath. (1964) 6 SCR 1 : (1964) 1 S C W R 565 : AIR 1965 S C 271 (274) (Pt A) (Pr 8).

—S. 82—Advancement—Deposit by Hindu in Bank in joint names of himself and another— Amount payable to either or survivor — Death of depositor— Resulting trust—Money becomes absolute property of deceased and is payable to his heirs in absence of contrary intention. See Banker and Customer. (1962) 1 Andh W R 51 : AIR 1962 Andh Pra 260.

—S. 82 — Presumption of advancement does not apply in India—Wife having her own funds—Acquisition by her out of them—There is no resulting trust in favour of husband.

The theory of presumption of advancement under the English Law is not applicable to India. There is no presumption in India that what stands in the name of the wife belongs to the husband. Before any presumption of a resulting trust in favour of the husband is sought to be raised, it must be shown that the husband purchased the properties from his funds in the name of the wife.

Where the wife was possessed of her own funds and acquisitions in her name were made out of them, and the husband treated the acquisitions as belonging to her, there is no resulting trust in favour of the husband. The rule laid down in AIR 1925 P C 181 is limited to cases where the acquisition in the name of the wife is unexplained by either proved or admitted facts. AIR 1962 Andh Pra 173 (184) (Pt D) (Pr 31) (DB).

—S. 82—A depositing his own money in bank in joint names of A and B— Deposit payable to either or survivor— Deposit does not constitute gift to B on A's death—Burden of proof lies on B to prove that gift was made. AIR 1961 Andh Pra 320 (321) (Pt A) (Pr 4).

—Ss. 82, 83—Benami—Purchase of property in the name of near relation —No presumption of advancement in India — Evidence nevertheless to prove intention to make near relation beneficial owner admissible— Purchase of shares in the name of son— Son becoming working director of company by virtue of those shares—Remuneration received as director —Son entitled to retain such remuneration though not the shares and dividend.

A benami transaction is one when one buys property in the name of another, or gratuitously transfers his property to another without indicating an intention to benefit the person in whose name the property is purchased or to whom the property is transferred. When the person in whose name the property is purchased is an outsider, this intention not to benefit is presumed in law. When, however, property is purchased in the name of a near relation, as for example, wife or son, in England, in such cases, there is a presumption of advancement and it is presumed that the nominal owner was intended to have beneficial interest in the property as well. But there is no such presumption in India and a Hindu or a Mahomedan purchasing property in the name of wife or son is never presumed to intend that the wife or the son would have beneficial interest in the property. In India he is held to be a mere benamidar having no beneficial interest in the property.

If it is proved that the purchase money is paid by one different from the person whose name appears as purchaser in the conveyance, the person paying the purchase money is considered in law to be the beneficial owner, unless the contrary is proved. Evidence may be adduced that the person advancing the money to purchase in the name of the wife or son intended the wife or son not merely to be the nominal owner but the beneficial owner as well. So also, evidence may be adduced that the transfer to the wife or son though without monetary consideration was intended to be a real transfer whereby the transferee was intended to be beneficial owner of the property transferred.

Where the consideration money for the purchase of shares in the name of the son was paid by the father and the evidence tendered did not indicate that the father intended that the beneficial interest in the shares should be in the registered holder (son), it must be held that the registered holder (son) was nothing more than a benamidar of the father in respect of those shares and after the father's death, those shares were divisible amongst his heirs according to the law of inheritance. The father's estate was beneficially entitled to the shares and also all dividends paid and payable in respect of those shares.

But there is no inflexible rule of law that a director of a company is not entitled to retain his remuneration as director for services rendered to the company as such director merely because he had no beneficial interest in the holding—he was only holding the shares as the trustee of a trust. View of Warrington, J. in (1907) 2 Ch 76, Foll.; View of Harman, J. in 1948 Ch 284, Dissent. from.

Where the intention of the settlor-cum-beneficiary (father) is clear that the son in whose name the shares in a company are purchased, would be a working director of the company which was a potentially remunerative office, the rule embodied in S. 88, Trusts Act, does not stand in the way of the son retaining the director's fee for his own benefit and the remuneration is not to be treated as part of the estate of the father, to be divisible as such amongst his heirs. AIR 1962 Cal 569 (576, 579, 580) (Pt B) (Prs 43, 44, 48, 49, 50).

There is no reason why the rule of advancement as in vogue in England should not be applied to Indian conditions particularly in the changed and changing circumstances of the Indian Society. (1956) 60 Cal W N 886.

——S. 82 — Benami — Advancement — Practice in Hyderabad State — Burden of proof—(Evidence Act (1872), Ss. 101 to 103)—(Benami).

The law of benami in India is not a branch of Hindu or Mohammadan Law. It is merely an application of equitable general rule which is laid down in the Trusts Act. The Hyderabad High Court has followed the rule with due recognition of the exception known to English Law that if the father or husband purchases any property in the name of his son or wife though with his money, benami cannot be necessarily presumed unless such intention is made out by any circumstances. So far as the general practice in the Hyderabad State is concerned benami purchases or sales are not made without any sufficient cause. Any such transaction is always made with some motive and set purpose and unless such purpose is apparent from the record, the transaction in the name of a child or the wife cannot be presumed to be benami. The initial burden therefore lies on the person alleging benami.

In order to displace the doctrine of resulting trust gift must be proved. But the evidence may not be direct or even documentary but only of circumstances. It should however, be sufficient to show that advancement or gift was intended. Possession of the property, custody of the title deeds and conduct of the parties and the motive behind the transaction are the most effective circumstances of proof in this regard. ILR (1956) Hyd 282: AIR 1956 Hyd 52 (55) (Prs 18, 26 to 28) (DB).

——S. 82—Benami—Practice of— Is prevalent among Mahomedans — Doctrine of advancement not applicable in India — Cases under Marumakkathayam Law —Are an exception to the principle of benami — There must be further proof that the father did not intend to benefit the wife and children in whose name the sale deed was taken. See Marumakkathayam Law. 1958 Ker L T 902.

——S. 82 — Deposit in bank by father in name of himself and son payable to either or survivor — Principle of advancement does not apply in India — Survivor is intended to take it merely as trustee — It is not benami transaction.

The doctrine of advancement, which is recognized by the English Law, has no place in India. Accordingly when the owner of the property directs that another's name should be included, he does not give him anything by way of advancement. He continues to be the owner, and if the other nominal holder does take the money he is answerable as a trustee to the heirs of the original owners: AIR 1928 P C 172, Foll. AIR 1932 P C 13, Disting.

In the case of 'either or survivor' deposits, it is directly intended that the survivor should take it. In fact, this is often the purpose of making such a deposit, enabling somebody on behalf of the real owner's estate to collect the moneys without the delay or difficulty that might otherwise be experienced. But it is equally clear that when he does take it he takes it as a trustee and nothing more. "Benami" properly so called, is not a case of both the names i. e., of the real owner and the resultant trustee appearing together, but of the latter alone being shown while the former stays in the background. In such a situation it is always X, the nominal holder, and Y, who is not named but who is the real holder or the beneficiary. Thus, it is never intended in a benami transaction that the nominal holder should at all take the property. However, in certain circumstances it might turn out that he has taken the property. In that event he will hold it as a trustee. 1965 Jab L J 1196: AIR 1965 Madh Pra 107 (111, 112) (Pt G) (Pr 53) (DB).

——S. 82 — Benami — Advancement — Doctrine of advancement in favour of wife or son, has no application in India—Title deed in favour of wife — Consideration paid by husband—There is strong presumpthat property was acquired benami — Presumption can be rebutted by showing that husband gifted the property to wife — Subsequent conduct of relations, held led to inference that it was advancement — Presumption — Rebuttal. ——S. 82 — Benami — Advancement — Purchase in name of wife — The presumption is that it was benami — No presumption of advancement — The presumption is rebuttable. AIR 1951 Orissa 22 (Pt C) (DB).

——S. 82—Advancement — The doctrine of advancement does not apply in India but the relationship is a circumstance which is taken into consideration in India in determining the benami nature of the transaction and the criterion in these cases is to consider from what source the money is paid. In such a case the onus is not on the plaintiff to prove that the intention was not to acquire the properties for the benefit of the wife in whose name they are acquired, rather, they clearly indicate that unless there is any evidence to show the intention of the acquirer to acquire the properties for the benefit of the wife the acquisitions in the name of the wife or for the benefit of the acquirer — See Trusts Act (2 of 1882), S. 80. 1965 B L J R 800 : AIR 1966 Pat 110 (DB).

——S. 82—Benami—Source of consideration not conclusive—Purchase of house by Hindu father in son's name — Purchase money advanced by father— Held on facts purchase was not benami—Trusts Act (1882), Ss. 81, 83 — Nature of transaction — Hindu Law — Acquisition—Benami. (1965) 67 Pun L R 31.

——S. 82—Nature of transaction—Source of purchase money is principal criterion in deciding whether transaction is benami or not — Property purchased in the name of near relations of person paying the purchasing money— Doctrine of advancement which assumes that the property should be deemed to have been intended to be absolutely conveyed to the relations does not apply in India— Burden of proving an advancement or gift lies upon the setting up the case. 6 Moo Ind App 53 (PC) and 49 Mad L J 109 : AIR 1925 P C 181 and AIR 1928 Lah 397 and AIR 1932 Lah 193 (1) and 1960 S C J 1072; AIR 1960

——S. 82— Benami — Burden of proof—Conveyance in wife's name—Presumption.

As benami purchases in the names of wives are very frequent in India, slight evidence would be required to show that the purchase was made really for and on behalf of the husband, the wife being a mere benamidar. The exception of English law that when a purchase is made by a person in the name of his child or wife, though with his own money, the transaction is presumed to have been made by way of advancement is not recognised in India. Indeed, in this country, where a purchase is made by a person with his own money it is prima facie assumed to be for his benefit, whether it is made in the name of a child, wife or a stranger. The criterion in these cases in India is to consider from what source the money comes with which the purchase money is paid. (1952) 54 Pun L R 193.

——S. 82—Benami — Property acquired by father — Name of minor son also shown in 'Putta' of property —Title in property whether conferred on son.

The doctrine of advancement is not followed in India. The fact that minor's name is included in the document of title does not confer any title in him unless it is proved that the minor had any independent source of income and the minor's money was utilized in the acquisition of the property. 6 Bom 717 ; AIR 1936 Nag 185; 35 Ind Cas 12, Ref. 1951 Raj L W 377 : ILR (1951) 1 Raj 417 : AIR 1952 Raj 28 (29, 30) (Pt B) (Pr 6) (DB).

The plaintiff was the concubine of the defendant. She filed a suit for declaration of her title to the suit property and recovery of possession. The property was in the possession of the plaintiff and she had been paying the kist. Title deeds were also with her. The only fact proved was that the consideration was paid by the defendant. In second appeal by plaintiff:

Held, that though there was a finding that consideration was paid by the defendant, it was still necessary to consider the surrounding circumstances. If these surrounding circumstances indicated that the payment of consideration though by paramour, was with the intention to benefit the concubine, surely that will justify the finding of title in favour of the plaintiff.

The judgment of the Lower Appellate Court involved an error of law in giving a decision about the benami title. The finding of benami had therefore to be set aside. SECTION 83

——S. 83 — Applicability of provisions of section to public or private religious and charitable trust — Doctrine of cy pres — Donations of money on condition that female hospital to be built through agency of donor—Death of donor—Money is to be refunded —Case not remanded.

The plaintiff's father advanced an amount of Rs. 30,000/- to Government of U. P. for construction of a female hospital. The Government also agreed to contribute an equal amount for the construction. The amount by the donor was advanced on the understanding that the hospital would be constructed on the approved site, according to the approved plan and at an early date through his agency. His efforts failed to start construction work and he died subsequently. The Government however undertook to construct a female hospital on another site and also in different circumstances.

Held, that the conditions were essential terms of the agreement and the object of the Trust had failed because a female hospital in the proposed name could no longer be constructed on that site, through the agency of the donor who had already died. Hence the plaintiff became entitled to get back the money subscribed.

It is true that the provisions of the Trust Act are not in terms applicable to private or public religious and charitable trusts, but nevertheless the general principles underlying S. 83, are attracted in analogous circumstances. The doctine of cy pres is generally applied to trusts created by wills and not those created by deeds or words of mouth. The doctrine can have no application; here there is no general intention for charity. A I R 1934 Oudh 329; A I R 1921 Cal 605 and 1960 A P 605, Rel. on.

——S. 83—Cy pres Doctrine — Applicability to gifts inter vivos—Money collected for specific purpose — Purpose failing—Application of money.

The preponderance of authority is in favour of the application of the doctrine of cy pres to wills and not to deeds or gifts inter vivos. In gifts inter vivos where the moneys have been raised for a particular purpose it is incumbent upon the trustee to apply the money specifically for that object and if that object cannot be fulfilled there would be a resulting trust in favour of the donor or contributor. Where the donor's intention can be given effect to, the court has no authority to sanction any deviation from them on the ground of any expediency. Where donations are collected for construction of a hospital at a certain place, there being no general charitable intentions by the donor the moneys cannot be applied cy pres if the object fails. ——S. 83—Resulting trust—Cy pres application.

On the failure of the object of the trust, there is what is called the resulting trust in favour of those who had given the property. It is equally well established that equity treats trust for charitable purposes as an exception to this rule of resulting trusteeship. In charitable cases the rule is that where a person makes a valid gift, whether by deed or by will, and either particularises no object or declares a trust in favour of particular objects which fail, or does not exhaust the subject-matter of the gift, the Court, if it can find a general intention in favour of charity, will not suffer the property or the surplus after giving effect to the charitable trust, to result to the giver or his estate but will execute the general intention of charity by a cy pres application of the trust property. (1959) 1 Andh W R 357 : A I R 1960 Andh Pra 35 (37) (Pt A) (Pr 7) (DB).

Section 84 contemplates the transferee being in possession of property belonging to the transferor. If he comes into possession of any such property, he is to hold it in trust. This section constitutes an exception to the doctrine embodied in the maxim, in 'pari delicto potior est conditio possidentis'. The maxim has no application to cases falling under S. 65 of the Contract Act but only to cases falling under this section. The maxim — it is expressed in two or three ways—only protects a party in actual possession of an advantage; it cannot be the foundation of an enforceable right. A defendant may, in certain circumstances, retain the benefit which he has received. A plaintiff cannot seek the aid of this maxim AIR 1960 Andh Pra 190 (Pt E) (Prs 12, 13).

(Trusts Act (1882), S. 88.)

1. Scope.
2. Partner.
3. Agent.
4. Director of Company.
5. Other persons bound in a fiduciary capacity.
6. Gains any pecuniary advantage.
7. Hold for the benefit of such person.

1. Scope.

——S. 88—Scope.

Section 88 embraces all dealings entered into by a person occupying fiduciary position under circumstances in which his own interests are or may be adverse to that of the beneficiary and a benefit thereby accrues to that person. S. 88, however, is not exhaustive of all cases of fiduciary relationships, and a trustee, executor, partner, agent, director of a company, legal adviser are all instances of persons occupying a fiduciary character. 1956 Andh L T 720 : 1956 An W R 911.

——S. 88—Scope—Applicability to persons who have agreed to enter into partnership.

Section 88, Indian Trusts Act, is attracted in the case of claims by one partner against another and such trust may arise either from actual fraud (as indicated in Ss. 89 and 90) or from constructive fraud (referred to in Ss. 91 to 93) as also from some equitable principle independent of the existence of any fraud as indicated in S. 94 of that Act.

Where there was no subsisting partnership but an agreement to enter into partnership which, if entered into, would have cast certain duties and resposibilities upon each of the parties.

Held, that it was doubtful whether in the peculiar circumstances of the case the provisions of S. 88 would be attracted. 95 Cal L J 230 : AIR 1956 Cal 41 (44) (Pt B) (Pr 21) (DB).

——S. 88 — Trustee and beneficiary — Doctrine of unjust enrichment—Origin and scope of—Burden of proof of good faith of transaction—Trust—Contract Act (1872), Ss. 69 and 70.

Constructive fraud is a creation of Courts exercising equity jurisdiction, directed against conduct which might be free from moral turpitude or actual evil design, but which might cause injury in a confidential relationship, or of the public interest. The principle has received recognition in S. 88 of the Trusts Act. A transaction of purchase by a person occupying a fiduciary position under circumstances in which his own interests are or may be adverse to those of the person who owns the property and whose interests he is bound to protect, is always regarded by the Courts with the utmost jealousy. If such a transaction is impeached by the beneficiary whose interests have been adversely affected the purchaser must show that there has been no fraud, or concealment or advantage taken by him of information acquired by him by virtue of his position. He must also show that the beneficiary had independent advice, and every kind of protection in connection with the transaction of purchase. 1956 An W R 911, Rel. on.

The doctrine of unjust enrichment was originally based in English Law upon the principle of assumpsit or 'had and received'. It underwent certain changes through judicial interpretation, and came to be based more and more on the doctrine of restitution. In India the principle was developed under Ss. 69 and 70 of the Contract Act, and it is generally recognised that these sections (Ss. 69 and 70) are wider in scope than the doctrine as applies in England and go far beyond it. ILR (1960) Mad 407 : (1960) 2 Mad L J 401 : AIR 1960 Mad 410 (418, 419) (Pt A) (Prs 25, 26) (DB).

——S. 88 — Applicability—Adult members utilising family funds on business venture of partnership firm —This does not make the joint family a partner of the firm — The other members of the family would be entitled only to recover from the business assets of the partnership under S. 88, Trusts Act their shares of the joint family funds invested with interest thereon or their share of profits earned by those investments. See H. L.—Joint family. AIR 1954 Mad 282.

——S. 88—Adverse dealings.

For the application of the latter part of S. 88 of the Trusts Act the question whether the trustees were guilty of any sharp practice or lack of good faith is not material. ('57) 23 Cut L T 301.

——Ss. 88, 90—Right of beneficiary to claim equitable relief—(Civil P. C. (1908), S. 11).

Until an advantage was actually gained by the constructive trustee against the interests of the beneficiary the right of the beneficiary to ask for equitable relief under the principles of either S. 88 or S. 90 of the Trusts Act would not arise.

Held, that when the mortgagor judgment-debtor's objection petition under S. 47 of the Civil Procedure Code was rejected by the executing Court the mortgagee decree-holder gained some advantage by the principles of res judicata inasmuch as the judgment-debtors were precluded from re-agitating the matters which had been disposed of by the order of the Court. But that advantage arising out of the principles of res judicata during the progress of the execution case would not be the advantage referred to either in S. 88 or S. 98 of the Trusts Act. That was merely a step in the whole process which culminated in the purchase of the mortgaged property by the mortgagee decree-holder, and it was then that the advantage in derogation of the rights of the beneficiary accrued to the mortgagee decree-holders. 19 Ind App 107, Dist. ('57) 23 Cut L T 301.

C (1908), S. 66 (1) — Suit for declaration of title and recovery of possession alleging that defendants were benamidars in Court auction purchase — S. 66 (1) is attracted and hence suit not maintainable — S. 82, Trusts Act, excludes from its scope S. 66 (1), Civil P. C. — Section 88, Trusts Act has no application where purchaser is benamidar. See Civil P. C. (1908), S. 66 (1). AIR 1965 Pat 384 (DB).

——S. 88—Partnership Act, S. 37—Principle of S. 37 is that there exists a fiduciary relationship between the surviving partner and his former partner or the representative of that partner — The principle is recognised in S 88, Trusts Act. See Partnership Act (1932), S. 37. AIR 1954 Pat 53 (DB).

2. Partner.

● ——Ss. 88 and 90—Distinction and scope.

Whereas S. 88 makes a specific reference to partners and agents, etc., S. 90 in terms applies to a tenant for life, a co-owner, a mortgagee, or any other qualified owner of any property—Section 90 therefore, in terms cannot apply to the case of a partnership Gavararaju Chetty v. ● ——Ss. 88, 90—Scope—Partners—Renewal of lease by one partner—Effect.

Under English law there is no absolute rule of law or equity that a renewal of a lease by one partner, must necessarily enure for the benefit of all the partners. There is a presumption of fact, as distinguished from a presumption of law, that there is an equity in favour of the renewal of the lease enuring for the benefit of all the partners. But such a presumption being one of fact is rebuttable, and must, therefore, depend upon the facts and circumstances of each case. The Indian Legislature has substantially adopted the English law quoted above while enacting the rules laid down in the Trusts Act, particularly, Ss. 88 and 90 of the Trusts Act.

Held, on facts all facts and circumstances which pointed to only one conclusion namely, that the renewal of the lease was not intended to be for the benefit of all quandam partners. Those facts and circumstances amply rebutted any presumption of fact that the lease should enure to the benefit of all the parties. ——S. 88—Fiduciary relationship between parties—Principle recognised by S, 88 — It does not change nature of suit governed by Art. 106, Limitation Act.

The partners of a firm hold a fiduciary relationship towards their deceased partner's representatives as regards his interest in the partnership property. Section 88 of the Trusts Act, 1882, only gives a statutory recognition to this principle. And if the profits or the pecuniary advantage of gain can only be determined after taking the account of the dissolved partnership, then the suit for rendition of account would be governed by Art. 106 of the Limitation Act. By applying the provisions of S 88 of the Trusts Act, the nature of the suit does not change. AIR 1934 P C 138, Rel. on. AIR 1964 All 53 (60) (Pt F) (Pr 31).

—S. 88—Partner utilising partnership property for making profit for himself—Liability to account.

Section 88, Trusts Act, enjoins upon the partner who remains in possession of the partnership assets uberrima fides, as regard the interests of the other partner, that the former must account for the profits which have been accruing as a result of the working of partnership assets attributable to the share of the former partner. Strictly speaking a partner is not a trustee of the other partner, but there is no denying the fact, that the partners stand in a fiduciary relation to one another and in such a case equity will never permit the surviving partner to trade or to utilize the property of the other for his exclusive personal profit. If he makes a profit, it must be paid over to the owner of the property. the use of which produced the profit. Courts in England have always acted upon the above equitable principle. 59 Punj L R 372 : I L R (1957) Punj 1306 : AIR 1958 Punj 5 (10) (Pt E) (Pr 13).

—S. 88—Applicability of first part of section—"By availing himself of his character".

The first part of S. 88 obviously contemplates that the pecuniary advantage to be gained by a partner or other person in a fiduciary capacity must be in dealing with some third party, and the words "by availing himself of his character" clearly imply that at time when the transaction takes place which results in the pecuniary advantage, the partner must be purporting to deal with the third party as a partner acting on behalf of the partnership, and also that the third party must be under the impression that he is dealing as such. 58 Punj L R 11 : AIR 1956 Punj 49 (56) (Pt C) (Pr 33) (DB).

—S. 88 — Applicability — Secretary of Company managing the company — Secretary buying estate of Company after negotiating with shareholders of Company—Effect.

A fiduciary relationship may arise in the context of a jural relationship or it may not. Where confidence is reposed by one in another, and that leads to a transaction in which there is a conflict of interest and duty in the person in whom such confidence is reposed, fiduciary relationship immediately springs into existence. The fact that an adequate price was not paid, would certainly lead to the inference that there was an 'unjust enrichment' of the trustee. Independent advice need not necessarily be from a lawyer. But where a fiduciary relationship exists and a climate exists which was probably taken advantage of by the fiduciary, and there is an obvious element of 'unjust enrichment,' the absence of such independent advise does become a material factor in judging the case.

Held, on facts that in respect of the attempted sale of the estate the defendant-company was in a position of agents for sale of O. V. Estates Ltd. The defendant-company dealt with the plaintiffs knowing that they were the parties who had the power and the right to effect the transaction. The fact that the O. V. Estates Ltd., was a different jural entity made no difference in the context of this real situation. The defendant-company were secretaries exercising fairly wide powers and functions of looking after the estates under the directions and were not merely administrative assistants. The defendant-company were actively engaged in aiding the plaintiffs to sell the estates. They were conscious of the conflict between interest and duty, particularly when they themselves became possible competitors. It could not be doubted, upon those facts, that a fiduciary relationship existed between the plaintiffs and the defendant company. 73 Mad L W 330 : 1960 Mad W N 946 : ILR (1960) Mad 407 : (1960) 2 Mad L J 401 : AIR 1960 Mad 410 (419 to 421) (Pt B) (Prs 27, 29, 32, 33) (DB).

In a suit filed for a declaration that the property therein described constituted a public charitable trust and for setting a scheme for the proper administration of the trust and for other allied reliefs, the trial Court held that the land dedicated as 'Dharmadayam' does not possess all the characteristics of trust property on the grounds, among others, (1) that it was not defined anywhere as trust property; (2) it remained in the name of the grantor as the grantee; and (3) that the remission of cist alone is not sufficient to treat it as trust property. In appeal to the High Court :

Held, the description in the Inam Register and the title-deed makes it clear that the land was Dharmadayam, namely, public charity inam. The effect of the grant is that, the grantor, who was the original private owner of the land, with full powers, made a grant of the right and title in the land along with the trees, i. e., his tope, to a public charity, and, as a result, he began to hold the land as a trustee of the charity, which was to be permanent.

The grandson of the founder selling the trees could have been in his capacity as inamdar and a trustee of the charity tope. As such, he was bound to treat the income as the property of the trust. In fact, he was incurring expenses on behalf of the trust in taking steps to evict encroachers of the tope.

It is true that remission of the cist by itself would not be sufficient to convert the property into trust property, if it were not otherwise trust property. But, in fact, the remission of cist in this case was granted by the Government because the latter found that it was trust property namely, charitable inam. The resumption proceedings and the issue of patta did not affect the fact that the property belongs to the trust and did not have the effect of converting the trust property into private property. The patta issued in favour of the persons must be deemed to be held by them on behalf of and for the benefit of the trust. The alienations of property which were made on the basis that the property was private property of the alienors cannot bind the trust and does not affect the right, title and interest of the trust as regards the property so alienated. The right to recover money from a person who stands in a fiduciary relationship and which money has been received for and on behalf of another person, has been regarded as an equitable right.

Where certain millers were appointed by the Government under the provisions of the Madras Food Procurement Order, 1946, as licensees to act as their medium to purchase paddy from the producers and sell to such person and at such rates as directed by the Government and they were bound to pay to the Government the difference between the sale and purchase price but receive remuneration for their services.

Held, that a fiduciary relationship had been established between the licensees and the Government. 7. Hold for the benefit of such person.

—S. 88—Scope—Section not exhaustive—Principle embodied is wide enough to cover cases of transferees taking property with notice of transferor's defective title.

The principle underlying S. 88 is quite clear, in that a person who is in a fiduciary position and is bound to protect the interests of another person and who takes advantage of the same and makes profit or derives benefit or acts in any manner adverse to the interests of that person he would be liable to that person. The principle embodied in the section is wide. It embraces all cases of dealings entered into by the person under circumstances in which his own interests may be adverse to that of the beneficiary. This section also is held not to be exhaustive and is wide enough to cover the case of those transferees who had taken the property with notice of the transferor's defective title.

The plaintiffs being minors and inexperienced to carry on the management of the lands and bus service, the first defendant undertook the management on a fixed salary and executed a letter agreeing to render proper accounts to the plaintiffs. The first defendant set up a false claim to the properties of the minors and a day before a suit was filed by the plaintiffs for declaration of their title to and for possession of the properties, the first defendant transferred the buses to the second defendant who shortly thereafter, in his turn, transferred it to the third defendant. The finding of the Court was that the defendants acted in collusion with one another to deprive the plaintiffs of their property.

Held, that the plaintiffs would be entitled to follow the first defendant's property into whosoever hands it went provided those persons had knowledge and notice that the property was that of the plaintiffs and all those persons would be accountable to the plaintiffs. The defendants were not only accountable for the profits made out of the specified buses but also as to what had been done with those profits; and if any property had been purchased out of it, the plaintiffs would also be entitled to the property and the income made from out of it. —S. 88—Trustee not to take personal advantage.

He, who has the management of property either as an express trustee or in some fiduciary character, is not permitted to gain any personal profit by availing of his position. The rule goes so far that if the trustee sells the land to a bona fide purchaser without notice and afterwards becomes the owner of the land, though for good and valid consideration, the trust revives again and he is bound to restore the land to the trust. —S. 88—Claim by principal against agent for advantage gained by latter — Limitation — (Limitation Act (1908), Arts. 90, 120).

A was one of the directors and also the sole managing agent of certain company and was thus bound in a fiduciary character to protect the interests of the company. But availing himself of this character and utilising the premises and staff of the company as well as his credit with the company by reason of the position which he occupied, A gained for himself a pecuniary advantage in the sum of Rs. 8,510. The company sued to recover the amount claiming that A must hold that the advantage so gained for the benefit of the company.

Held, that in view of the nature of the claim, Art. 90, Limitation Act did not apply. This was a case where the basis of the claim was not neglect or misconduct but the advantage taken by a person in a fiduciary capacity of his position to make a gain under S. 88, Trusts Act. A was bound to give it up to the person to whom he owed the fiduciary duty. To such a suit there was no other article applicable and therefore Art. 120 applied. 1. Scope.

●—90—Practice — Pleading — Vires of Act challenged — Court is not restricted to pleadings of State —Court will consider whether validity can be sustained under any provisions of Constitution. M/s. Barrakur Coal Co. Ltd. v. Union of India, (1961) 2 S C A 523 : AIR 1961 SC 954 (956) (Pt F) (Pr 2).

—S. 90—Distinction.

Whereas S. 88 makes a specific reference to partners and agents etc. S. 90 in terms applies to a tenant for life, a co-owner, a mortgagee, or any qualified owner of any property. S. 90, therefore, in terms cannot apply to the case of a partnership. See Trusts Act (1882), S. 88. AIR 1959 SC 190.

See Oudh Estates Act (1 of 1869), S. 3. AIR 1952 All 6 (FB).

——S. 90 — Applicability — Conditions — Principle underlying.

The principle underlying S. 90, Trusts Act, is that no person who is in a fiduciary capacity or position can make a profit to the detriment of those interested. He must not utilise his position to obtain an advantage. In order to invoke this section it is essential that it should be proved that the person is placed in fiduciary capacity and secondly, that he gained an advantage by virtue of such position. (1957) 1 Andh W R 169: AIR 1957 Andh Pra 337 (339) (Pt B) (Pr 7) (DB).

——S. 90—Applicability.

Before the benefit of S. 90 is invoked it must be shown (i) that the party against whom relief is sought, availed himself of his position; (ii) that he gained an advantage by so doing; (iii) that the advantage was gained in derogation of the right of the person interested in the property. In other words, a person who is a limited owner by reason of his position must not utilise that position to obtain an advantage to the detriment of his co-owners. It is not necessary that the other persons should make out that the advantage was obtained fraudulently or by misrepresentation or by suppression of the true facts. All that the section says is that if there is a person in a fiduciary relation to another he cannot take advantage of his position so as to gain something exclusively for himself which otherwise he would not have obtained but for the position which he held. AIR 1957 Mad 472 (483) (Pt F) (Pr 34) (DB).

——S. 90—Principle of section.

Section 90 is based on the principle of constructive trust and is an extension of the principle that a trustee shall not be allowed to make profit out of the trust. AIR 1957 Mad 472 (482) (Pt H) (Pr 30) (DB).

——Ss. 90, 88—Contract Act (1872), S. 73 — Partnership between plaintiff and defendant in textiles dissolved — Deed of dissolution provided that in respect of licences for textile goods plaintiffs should be entitled to ¼ quota and defendanf ¾ — Plaintiff applying to export Trade Controller for his quota—Defendant objecting and defendant allotted full quota — Plaintiff suing defendant for declaration and damages —Defendant held could not be made liable as trustee for plaintiff in respect of plaintiff's quota after dissolution of partnership — Defendant, however, was liable for breach of contract — Measure of damages would not be profit made by defendant but would be loss sustained by plaintiff. See Contract Act (1872), S. 73. AIR 1950 Mad 289 (DB).

——S. 90—Purchase by mortgagee.

A mortgaged his property to B—A and B were joint debtors of C as principal debtor and surety respectively — C obtained money decree and in execution thereof put A's interest in property to sale — C purchased it himself but B obtains rights of C by assignment and took delivery of possession — Suit for redemption by legal representatives of A—Contention that B was only a trustee for A as he was the mortgagee and as such could not keep the benefit for himself—Held that assignment by B was not obtained by fiduciary relationship with mortgagor and case did not come under S. 90. 1953 Ker L T 85 : ILR (1953) Trav Co 388 : AIR 1953 Trav-Co 375 (376) (Pt A) (Pr 2).

—S. 90—Applicability to Travancore—Mortgage —Sub-mortgage — Advantage obtained as sub-mortgagee — If available to mortgagee and mortgagor.

The principles embodied in S. 90 are of general application and have been applied in Travancore.

Where A obtains the advantege of a puduval registry in his favour by availing himself of his position as possessory sub-mortgagee under B, A would hold such advantage as trustee for his mortgagors (B). That advantage will constitute an accretion to the mortgage property which would enure to the benefit of the mortgagor. 1951 Ker L T 7 : ILR (1951) Trav-Co 209 : AIR 1951 Trav-Co 109 (117) (Pt E) (Pr 19) (FB).

2. Co-owner.

——S. 90 — Co-tenants — On death of sole tenant name of defendant recorded as sole tenant in 1308F—Defendant belonging to family—Brothers of deceased living at time of death and succeeding to tenancy as co tenants — No evidence of adoption of defendant by deceased tenant — Possession of defendant held possession on behalf of all unrecorded co-tenants as well. ('52) 1952 R D (BR) 174.

——S. 90—Co-owner in possession of entire property — Liability of, to other co-owners — Nature of — (Co-owners).

The relationship of one co-owner towards another is not strictly of a fiduciary character in the sense that there is an obligation on the part of the co-owner to protect the interest of the other co-owner. The liability ordinarily of one co-owner in possession of the share of all is only to make over the share of the profits of the others to them. He is accountable only for the rents and profits actually received and not what he ought to have received. If he fails to pay the share it can only amount to a breach of the agreement to pay the share whenever it fell due. The possession of a co-owner of the share of the other co-owner cannot be regarded to be in derogation of the rights of the other co-owners within the meaning of S 90 of the Trusts Act. 1897 A C 180; AIR 1923 Mad 147 : 43 Mad L J 406, Rel. on. It is only in a case where it is established on the facts that the co-owner by his dealings derived a benefit or advantage to himself, that S. 90 of the Trusts Act would apply and he would be regarded as being in a fiduciary position. AIR 1934 Mad 686 : 67 M L J 563; AIR 1931 Mad 553 : 61 Mad L J 139, Rel. on. The test, therefore, would be as so whether the co-owner utilised the common funds or common property and derived a benefit therefrom. (1957) 1 And W R 169 : A I R 1957 Andh Pra 337 (339) (Pt C) (Prs 7, 8) (DB).

——Ss. 90, 94 and 95 — Tenants-in-common — Partition of joint family property — One member left in enjoyment of entire property without any agreement in that behalf—Separate account of income received out of share of other members not maintained — Subsequent acquisitions by member in possession cannot be regarded as acquired for family—Member not a trustee for other co-sharer members and S 90, Trusts Act does not apply. See Hindu Law—Tenants in common. AIR 1960 Bom 159 (DB).

——S. 90 — Applicability—Inquiry before Tehsildar regarding grant on darkhast of kumki land — Statement made by co-owner, on his own behalf and not on behalf of all, that he made all improvements and was, therefore, entitled to darkhast grant — Other co-owner not raising any objection to statements — S. 90 does not apply. AIR 1965 Ker 221 (221) (Pt B) (Pr 6)

——S. 90 — Scope — Mortgage of property to joint family — Partition — Sale of property by one brother — Sale if affected by section — Property if available for partition — (Hindu Law — Partition).

A property was mortgaged to the family of the plaintiff. The mortgagor wanted to sell a portion of the property in order to save the remaining portion to himself. But the family filed a suit on the mortgage and obtained a decree One A also obtained a simple money decree against the mortgagor and attached the equity of redemption. By this time the properties in the village in which the mortgaged property was situate had fallen to the share of the defendant as a result of a partition between the plaintiff and his brothers, the defendant being one of them. The defendant arranged to get the money decree assigned in the name of one V who purchased the equity of redemption in Court sale. Secondly the defendant entered into negotiations with the mortgagor who conveyed the property to the defendant. The defendant got the auction sale set aside by paying off V and also discharged the mortgage decree. There was no evidence to show that the defendant had utilised joint family funds for purchasing the property.

Held, that the purchase was made when the defendant was a tenant-in-common and he did not stand in a fiduciary capacity vis-a-vis his brothers. There was no feeling of trust or confidence between the brothers and therefore none of the ingredients under S. 90 was made out. The property was therefore the separate property of the defendant and could not be made available for partition amongst his brothers. AIR 1957 Mad 472 (487) (Pt J) (Pr 45) (DB).

——S. 90—M, B, and C were joint creditors of D—D executing bond in the name of M alone — Death of M — 'A' the son of M used to receive payments from D and pay B and C their share—D's estate taken over by Haisiat Court — A putting forward his claim and recovering the amount of debt — B and C suing A for their share — Obligation in the nature of trust was created between the parties when A representing himself and B and C got money from the Haisiat Court in full satisfaction of the bond — Limitation Act, Art. 62 applied. See Limitation Act (1908), Art. 62. 1952 Raj L W 501 : I L R (1952) 2 Raj 459 (DB).

——S. 90 — Co owners — Grant of patta in name of one — Rights of others.

The grant of patta to co-owner even in respect of kandukrishi lands would not deprive the other co-owners of their right over the properties and the transferee from the other co-owner of his interest gets the rights conveyed by the transfer. The case comes within the operation of S. 90 of the Trusts Act. AIR 1952 Tra-Co 571 (572) (Pt A) (Prs 3, 4) (DB).

——S. 90 — Co-owner in possession acquiring properties with joint funds — Nature of acquisition.

If a co-owner in possession of co-ownership property acquires other property even with the use of co-ownership funds in his possession the acquisition will not perforce become co-ownership property. The acquirer's obligation will not be to account for the co-ownership funds utilised by him. In this respect a co-owner's position is different from that of a manger of a Hindu family, whether father or not. 1955 Ker L T 440 : AIR 1955 T C 279 (279) (Pt B) (Pr 2) (DB).

5. "By availing himself of his position as such."

● —S. 90 and Illustration (c) to it — Applicability —Mortgagee of portion of holding paying almost the entire amount of rent but defaulting in not paying a trifling portion and mortgagor defaulting in payment of his entire portion of rent—Purchase by mortgagee in rent sale—If enures to benefit of mortgagor.

The mortgaged property was part of a larger holding and the mortgagee agreed to pay a portion of the rent of the entire holding and the mortgagor agreed to pay the balance rent payable in respect of it. The mortgagor defaulted in payment of the rent payable by them. The mortgagee paid almost the entire amount of the rent payable by him but defaulted in payment of a trifling sum. In the rent sale the mortgagee purchased the property. The mortgagor claimed that the purchase enured to their benefit.

Held, the portion of the rent which the mortgagee failed to pay was so small that it is impossible to say that the property was brought to sale for it or that his default was made mala fide or with the ulterior object of the property being put up for sale and his becoming the purchaser of it. The mortgagee did not gain any advantage by availing himself of his position as such or of a situation brought about by his own default. The real effective cause of the sale was the default of the mortgagor alone. In the circumstances, S. 90 of the Indian Trusts Act and Illustration (c) to it are not attracted and the purchase by the mortgagee does not enure for the benefit of the mortgagor. The rent sale and certificate sale extinguished the right of redemption. Sachidanand Prasad v. Babu Sheo Prasad Singh. (1965) 2 S C W R 825 : 1965 B L J R 841 : (1965) 2 S C J 458 : A I R 1966 S C 126 (127) (Pr 8).

● —S. 90—Applicability — Default to pay rent on part of both mortgagor and mortgagee— Rent decree and sale in execution—Mortgagee purchasing the land —S. 90 applies—Mortgagor is entitled to redeem.

Where both the mortgagor and mortgagees are liable to pay rent and rent decree and sale in execution of it are brought about because of the default of both of them and the mortgagee purchases the mortgaged land in execution sale, the fact that the mortgagor had made a default, does not alter the position that the mortgagee had also defaulted in paying the rent he was liable to pay. By his default he has contributed to the position that a suit had to be brought for arrears of rent and ultimately to the position that the property was put to sale in execution of the decree obtained in the suit. This contribution to the bringing about of the sale was a direct result of his position as a mortgagee. When, therefore, he purchased the property himself at the sale in execution of the rent decree he clearly gained an advantage by availing himself of his position as a mortgagee. Section 90 is applicable to such a case and the mortgagor is entitled to redeem the mortgaged property. This is the position in law even if the mortgagee's liability was to pay less than the major portion of the rent of the holdings. A. F. A. D. No. 1335 of 1952, dated 4th March, 1958 (Pat). Reversed. ● —S. 90—Applicability—Essential conditions.

The following three conditions shall be satisfied before S. 90 of the Trusts Act can be applied to a case : (1) the mortgagee shall avail himself of his position as mortgagee; (2) he shall gain an advantage; and (3) the gaining should be in derogation of the right of the other persons interested in the property. The section, read with illustration (c), clearly lays down that where an obligation is cast on the mortgagee and in breach of the said obligation he purchases the property for himself, he stands in a fiduciary relationship in respect of the property so purchased for the benefit of the owner of the property. The principle is comprised in the latin maxim commodum ex injuria sua nemo habere debet that is, convenience cannot accrue to a party from his own wrong. To put it in other words, no one can be allowed to benefit from his own wrongful act. Mrutunjay Pani v. —S. 90—Purchase by mortgagee—(Transfer of Property Act (1882), S. 76).

So long as the mortgagees were defaulters it was not open for them to contend that the revenue sale was not brought about by their default. The mortgage interest would continue to exist notwithstanding the sale brought about by the default of the mortgagor and the mortgagee. The mortgagees by availing themselves of their position as such gained an advantage in derogation of the rights of the mortgagors and they should be deemed to hold the advantage so gained, for the benefit of the mortgagors. —S. 90 — Applicability — Mortgagee deliberately committing default in payment of Government revenue—Property sold in revenue sale and purchased by mortgagee—Mortgagee holds the same for benefit of mortgagor — (T. P. Act (1882), S. 76) — (Kerala Revenue Recovery Act, S. 59).

When a person enters into possession of property as mortgagee and deliberately fails to pay the Government revenue and the property is sold under Revenue Recovery Act and is purchased nominally by a third person but for the benefit of the mortgagee, the purchase falls within the purview of S. 90, Trusts Act. The mortgagee is bound to hold the property with all its liabilities in relation to the mortgagors and the mortgagors would be entitled to redeem the mortgage.

To such a case, S. 59 of the Kerala Revenue Recovery Act has no application. There is no question of setting aside the revenue sale. 1958 Ker L J 565 : 1958 Ker L T 712 : AIR 1959 Ker 94 (96, 97) (Prs 21, 26, 30) (DB).

When a mortgagee defaults to make a payment which he was bound to make and the mortgaged property is consequently sold in execution of a decree or under the Revenue Recovery Act and the mortgagee either purchases it at the execution sale or the Revenue sale in the name of a benamidar for him or purchases it from a bona fide purchaser in execution, S. 90 of the Trusts Act would be attracted and the mortgagee has to hold the property for the benefit of the mortgagors and has to submit to redemption by them. Section 90 does not strike down every advantage gained by a mortgagee. For attracting it advantage should have been gained by him availing himself of his position as a mortgagee or because he was the mortgagee and it must have been gained in derogation of the right of the mortgagor. 1958 Ker L J 87 : 1958 Ker L T 869 : A I R 1958 Ker 230 (234, 235) (Pt B) (Prs 10, 12) (DB).

——S. 90, Illus. (c)—"With a view to".

When the breach of an obligation must necessarily result in the properties being brought to sale, it must be taken that the breach was made with a view to the properties being put up for sale, for a person must be taken to intend the natural and probable consequence of his act. Likewise, when that person purchases the properties himself at the sale, it is a legitimate inference to draw that it was with that intention that the properties were allowed to be brought to sale. ——S. 90 — Mortgagee committing breach of obligation.

Where there is a deliberate breach of an obligation contained in the mortgage-deed resulting in the sale of the mortgaged properties and the purchase is by the defaulting usufructuary mortgagee, the equity under S. 90 will fasten upon the property in his hands. There need not be something more than a mere breach of covenant and further it is not necessary that there should be fraud or unfair conduct on the part of the defaulting mortgagee such as suppression of notice to the parties concerned. A mortgage bond, inter alia, provided that "if for any reason the mortgagor does not pay the arrears of rent for which the landlord brings a suit and attached the property and puts it to sale, the mortgagee shall pay up the arrears to the landlord amicably and obtain receipt in acknowledgment of payment, or the mortgagee shall on behalf of the mortgagor deposit the arrears of rent in Court and release the property from attachment and sale".

The mortgagee who was put in possession of mortgaged property however made a default in the payment of arrears of rent on account of which the property was put to sale and was ultimately purchased by him. The sale was confirmed and possession was taken by the mortgagee through Court. More than six years after the confirmation of sale the mortgagor brought a suit for redemption of the mortgage.

Held, (1) that the recitals in the mortgage bond were not simply an embodiment of the rights conferred upon the mortgagee by the provisions of S. 72 (b), T. P. Act, but amounted to an obligation on the part of the mortgagee to make payment of arrears of rent; (2) that since the mortgagee was in possession of the property since the date of the mortgage which was not discharged and that mortgagee-purchaser was guilty of a serious breach of duty imposed upon him by the terms of the mortgage on account of which the property was put to sale, the case was well covered by the principles underlying the provisions of S. 90, Illustration (c), Trusts Act ; (3) that the mortgage was continuing and the plaintiff's right to redeem had not been destroyed or extinguished. ——S. 90 — Mortgagee taking advantage of his position, fraudulently purchasing equity of redemption in breach of agreement—Effect—Mortgagor entitled to redeem.

Where the mortgagee who holds an instalment decree against the mortgagor agrees not to execute the decree for the balance, but in breach of the agreement and trust which the mortgagor reposed in him, the mortgagee executes the decree with a view to extinguish the right of redemption of the mortgagor and actually by suppressing the process puts up the equity of redemption to sale and purchases the same himself at court sale, the provisions of S. 90, Trusts Act, clearly apply, and the mortgagee must hold the advantage gained by him for the benefit of the mortgagor, i. e., he cannot resist the claim of the mortgagor to redeem the property. Though S. 90 is not exhaustive and even if S. 90 were not applicable, the general equitable principle remains that if a person who is in fiduciary relationship with another has gained an advantage to the detriment of that person who is interested in the property he shall not be entitled to hold the benefit for himself. No man can take advantage of his own wrong. 1959 B L J R 805: A I R 1960 Pat 250 (252) (Prs 8, 9, 10).

——S. 90 — Applicability and scope — Rent sale of mortgaged property—Purchase by mortgagee—Right of redemption—Extinction of—(Transfer of Property Act (1882), S. 60).

In order that the principle of S 90, Trusts Act, should apply it must be shown that the mortgagees in possession by availing themselves of their position as such have gained any advantage.

Where, in execution of a decree for arrears of rent for the period prior to the execution of mortgage, the property was sold summarily and purchased by the mortgagee, and in a subsequent suit for redemption both the lower Courts had found that the mortgagors themselves were the defaulters and the mortgagees in possession did all what they could do as being such.

Held, that the mortgagees did not avail of their position as such for gaining any advantage. They purchased the mortgaged properties to save their own interest inasmuch as if they would have allowed the mortgaged properties to be sold in execution of decrees for rent, they would have suffered a loss as the sale would have been free from encumbrances. Section 90, Trusts Act, therefore, had no application. It followed that the mortgage was entirely extinguished by the auction sale and the right of redemption did not subsist. ——S. 90, Illus. (c) — Applicability — Purchase by mortgagee.

In order to avail oneself of the provisions of S. 90, Trusts Act, it must be shown that the mortgagee by availing himself of his position as mortgagee, has gained certain advantage in derogation of the rights of other persons namely, the mortgagors. In the absence of any collusion or fraud or employment of any unfair means by the mortgagees, in bringing about the sale of the mortgaged properties the question of resulting trust coming into being in favour of the mortgagors does not arise.

Held, on the facts of the case that there was no default made or any fraud practised or any unfair means used by the mortgagees in bringing about the sale of the holding a part of which had been mortgaged to them. ——S. 90 — Revenue sale—Purchase by mortgagee — Effect.

The mortgagee cannot be allowed to hold for himself the advantage gained by the default for which she was responsible. Section 90 applies only when the mortgagee by availing himself of his position as such gains any advantage. The expression 'by availing himself of his position as such' obviously signifies that in discharge of his duties he committed some act in breach of the terms of the mortgage. If the mortgagee made good the trust and did all that was enjoined upon him by the mortgage then no question of trust comes in. In other words, there must be some causal connection between the acts of commission or omission on the part of the mortgagee and the advantage which he gained. ——S. 90—Applicability — Purchase by mortgagee—(Transfer of Property Act (1882), S. 60).

Where the mortgagee in possession by committing default in payment of the landlord's rent suffers the mortgaged property to be sold and buys it himself, or in the name of his benamidar he cannot claim the property to be his own in derogation of the mortgagor's interest in the property. The mortgage interest will continue to subsist on account of the trust imposed on the estate held by the mortgagee. The property would be stamped with a trust in favour of the mortgagor. ——S. 90 — Mortgagee in possession committing default in payment of rent — Property sold in execution of rent decree obtained by landlord and purchased by mortgagee in name of benamidar — S. 90 applies—Mortgagor's interest subsists.

Where the mortgagee in possession by committing default in payment of the landlord's rent suffers the mortgaged property to be sold and buys it himself in the name of his benamidar, he cannot claim the property to be his own in derogation of the mortgagor's interest in the property. In other words, the mortgage interest will continue to subsist on account of the trust imposed upon the estate held by the mortgagee and the mortgagor will be entitled to redeem. The mortgagee cannot be allowed to take advantage of his own default. Fraud or misrepresentation or suppression of facts need not necessarily lead to the advantage gained; S. 90 does not contemplate the presence of these elements which by themselves are sufficient to vitiate all transactions. Different considerations would however arise where the interest in the property has passed on to a purchaser unaffected by the mortgage and thereafter the mortgagee whose mortgage is extinguished on account of the purchase buys the property from that purchaser and acquires an independent title through him just as much as any other transferee would do; provided always that the purchase by the third party and the subsequent transfer to the mortgagee is not found to be a mere artifice on the part of the mortgagee to acquire the property for himself. 10 M I A 540; 44 I A 30, 30 Pat 391, Rel. on. ——S. 90—Scope— Default by co-sharer in paying rent — Holding purchased by co-sharer in execution of rent decree—Property, if held by him on behalf of all—(Co-sharers) —(Landlord and Tenant).

If any co-sharer defaults in paying the rent or if any portion of the rent remains unpaid, the landlord can bring the entire holding to sale but that does not imply any obligation on the part of one co-sharer to pay the entire rent. Consequently, where such co-sharer purchases the holding in execution of the rent decree, he cannot be deemed to hold the property on behalf of all the co-sharers. A I R 1952 Pat 286, Distinguished.

Even if the other co-owners pay their share of the rent and the person who defaults in paying his share purchases the property in his name. Section 90 would not be attracted unless it is further shown that he by availing himself of his position as such, gained an advantage in derogation of the rights of the other persons interested in the property. There must be a relation of mutual confidence between the other co-sharers and the defaulter must also be shown to be guilty of some sharp practice. ——S. 90 — Purchase by mortgagee.

(Ramaswami, J.) :—The mortgagee clearly stands in a position of fiduciary relationship and he cannot avail himself of his position as such to gain advantage in derogation of the rights of the mortgagor; and if the mortgagee obtains a money decree against the mortgagor and purchases the equity of redemption in execution sale, the mortgagee must under the express provision of S. 90 hold the advantage so gained for the benefit of the mortgagor. It is not necessary for the application of the equitable principle that the mortgagor should sue for setting aside the money decree or the sale. His suit for redemption is in effect "to confess and avoid that sale, by imposing a trust on the estate which passed under it". It is not necessary therefore that the decree or sale should be set aside in order to grant to the mortgagor a decree for redemption. In the eye of law the sale certificate which mortgagees have obtained would enure to the benefit of the mortgagor and the property would be stamped with a trust in favour of the mortgagor. ——Ss. 90 and 94 — Suit for partition of Hidu joint family business — Defendant appointed receiver of business pendente lite — Defendant purporting to convert family business into personal business without leave of Court — Later on business purchased by defendant in his own right — Right of coparceners to obtain accounting could be founded on S. 90 and S 94 might also apply — Defendant was accountable up to date of his purchase.

In a suit for partition of a Hindu joint family business, the defendant was by the order of the Court, virtually appointed as a receiver of the family business pedente lite. However, the defendant on 4th July, 1954 purported to close the family business and declared his intention to run it on his own account on and from 10th July, 1954, without the leave of the Court. The parties then agreed that the best way out of the difficulty would be to sell the entire business. The sale was held on 5th November, 1954 on which date the defendant became the purchaser of the business in his own right. The suit was ultimately dismissed for default. In a subsequent suit by the plaintiff for accounts :

Held, that the date up to which the defendant was accountable was not 9th July, 1954 but 5th November, 1954. Up to 5th November, 1954, at least the rights of the other coparceners to obtain strict accounting with regard to the business could be founded upon the explicit terms of S. 90 and even upon the terms of the latter part of that section and the principles of S. 94 might also conceivably apply. The defendant could not unilaterally, without first releasing himself from his obligation to the Court by an order of the Court, terminate his responsibility and convert the joint family business into a personal business. Before the benefit of S. 90 can be demanded it must be shown that the party against whom relief is sought availed himself of his fiduciary position, gained an advantage, by so doing, and that the advantage was gained in derogation of the rights of the person interested in the property. Since the defendant had the benefit of an order virtually constituting him Receiver of Court, he was really continuing, the business, at least up to the date when he became the purchaser in his own right, in derogation of the other parties pendente lite, who presumably could equally have laid claims to the conduct of the business. Hence the principles of S. 90 will apply. (1964) 1 Mad L J 103 : 1964 Mad W N 107 : AIR 1964 Mad 205 (208) (Pt A) (Prs 8, 11) (DB).

She then executed hypothecation bonds for Rs. 1,400 in favour of the defendant. After losing the property to one who had a superior title, the defendant brought a suit against the mortgagor and recovered the full amount of mortgage-money. At the time of this suit he was aware that his hypothecation was subject to the rights of the plaintiff. In a suit brought by the plaintiff to recover her Rs. 1,000 under the gift ; —Rr. 4 and 22—Grant to Mosque — Alienation by mutavallies — Validity — Subsequent acquisition of land by State and substitution of cash grant — Right of alienee to question—Legality—(Civil P. C. (1908), S. 20.

On finding that the Mutawallies of certain Mosque had mortgaged the muafi land granted to the mosque, the State Government declared the alienation illegal, restored the land to the mosque and resumed the excess portion of land in possession of the alienee. As regards the land restored to the Mosque, the State (i. e. the former State of Udaipur) passed an order of acquisition of the muafi land and granted an annual cash grant as compensation. The mortgagee sued the State for declaration that the order of the State acquiring the land was illegal and for injunction.

Held, that in view of Rr. 4 and 22 of the Muafi rules which were in force in the former State of Udaipur alienation of Devasthani Muafi had been borbideen at all times and in any shape or manner whatsoever and, it was open to the State to hold it to be illegal and restore the muafi to the Devasthan concerned. The order of resumption was therefore in no way illegal. (2) that the second part of the order acquiring the land and paying cash compensation to the mosque pertained rightly and properly to the Mosque who could question it but it was not open to the mortgagee to question the order of acquisition by by suit. It being a matter between the State and the Mosque, the suit was not well founded and could not succeed. 1958 Raj L W 90: ILR (1958) 8 Raj 226.

—R. 22—Grant of land to mosque — Alienation by muttavallies — Validity — Subsequent acquisition of land by State and substitution of cash grants is in no way illegal. Alienee has no right to question the legality of the order. See Udaipur State Muafi Rules (1946), R. 4. 1958 Raj L W 90 : ILR (1958) 8 Raj 226.

UNITED STATE OF GWALIOR, INDORE AND MALWA (MADHYA BHARAT) HIGH COURT OF JUDICATURE ACT (8 of 1949)

■ —S. 2 (b)—'Arising in the said States'.

The words 'arising in the said States' do not refer to proceeding arising in a Princely State These words can well be taken to refer to a proceeding arising in the areas of an erstwhile Princely State subsequently included in the United State. So understood an appeal from the decision of a single Judge of the Indore High Court to the Division Bench of the United State is a proceeding arising in the areas of the erstwhile Indore State after the inclusion of that State in the United State for it was filed after such inclusion. It is therefore clearly a proceeding of the second kind mentioned in S. 2 (b). Gulab Chand v. Kudilal, (1959) 1 S C A 162 : 1958 M P L J 632 : 1958 M P C 641 : 1958 Jab L J 485 : 1959 S C J 173 : 1959 S C R 313 : AIR 1958 S C 554 (557) (Pt A) (Pr 9).

■ —Ss. 2 (b) and 25 — Retrospective operation — Proceeding pending before Act came into force—(Interpretation of Statutes).

The rule is clear that provisions which touch a right in existence at the passing of the statute are not to be applied retrospectively in the absence of express enactment or necessary intendment. Where the language of a statute plainly gives it a retrospective operation, the rule has no application. Section 25 does not contain any words to show that it was intended to have retrospective operation. It only provides for the future. It gives a new sight of appeal and such appeal can of course only be filed after the Act has come into force. But the language of S. 2 (b), applies S. 25 to a proceeding which was pending on a date before the Act came into force, and therefore gives a right of appeal from a judgment of a Divisional Bench passed in that proceeding whenever it may have been passed, that is to say irrespective of whether it was passed before the Act or after it. The necessary result of applying S. 25 to the proceedings mentioned in S. 2 (b) is to disturb vested rights and in order that a statute may have a retrospective operation it is not necessary to find words in it expressly stating that it will have such operation notwithstanding that will disturb vested rights : AIR 1951 Madh. B 1 (FB), Reversed. Gulab Chand v. Kudilal, (1959) 1 S C A 162 : 1958 M P L J 632 : 1958 M P C 641 : 1958 Jab L J 485 : 1969 S C J 173 : 1959 S C R 313 : AIR 1958 S C 554 (558, 559) (Pt B) (Prs 12 to 16).

—Ss. 2 (b), 23 — Retrospective effect — Civil P. C. (1908), Pre.

The right of appeal is governed by the law in force at the time of the institution of the suit. But this is subject to the limitation that the new statute does not alter the position either by express provision or by necessary implication. Gwalior was included in the United States on the 16th June 1948. Where a case was pending on that date and also pending on 18th January 1949 when the Madhya Bharat High Court of Judicature Act came into force, the Madhya Bharat High Court of Judicature Act applies to that case and the party is, therefore, entitled to claim benefit of S. 23, provided the essential conditions are satisfied. AIR 1951 Madh.B 165 (168) (Pt B) (Pr 12).

● ——Ss. 2 (b) and 25 — Applicability — Decision of Division Bench becoming final before the Act—Sections do not apply—No appeal lies to Full Bench.

There is nothing in the language of S. 25 either in express words or by the necessary implication to compel a Court to hold that the section is to apply also to decisions which are final the date of the coming into force of the Act and thus have a retrospective operation affecting the vested rights of the parties This section read with S. 2 (b) of the Act does not lead to any definite conclusion one way or the other. The combined effect of these two sections is to state in general terms that a decision given by a Division Bench of the Madhya Bharat High Court of Indore State in the proceedings mentioned in S. 2 (b) is, subject to certain conditions appealable to a Full Bench. This is not an express provision making the decisions of a Division Bench final at the date when the Act came into force appealable. Nor is it the necessary implication of the two sections that such decisions are appealable : AIR 1950 M B 112 (FB), Affirmed; Case law discussed.

Per Kaul C. J. — Section 25 of the Act confers a right of special appeal which did not exist previously, but being a right of appeal it is a matter of substance and not one relating to mere procedure. This new provision would, on general principles not be applicable to proceedings which finished before the new Act came into force and the decisions made wherein had become final. Before S. 25 is applied to the case, it must be shown that the statute has made the intention of the Legislature in this behalf clear either by express words or by necessary implication. Section 25 does not say that it shall have retrospective operation so as to be applied to cases which were finally decided by the highest Court in which appeals pertaining to them could lie under then existing law. There is also nothing in S. 2 (b) to suggest that the Act or any section thereof was to have retrospective effect.

Moreover, general provisions in an enactment cannot be relied on to give it retrospective operation so as to take away vested rights. Gulabchand v. Kudilal, ILR (1952) Madh Bha 15 : AIR 1951 Madh Bha 1 (9, 23, 24) (Pt C) (Prs 26, 27, 105 to 107) (FB).

[Reversed in AIR 1958 S C 554.]

● ——S. 2 (b)—'Pending proceedings' — Meaning—Whether retrospective.

Per Shinde J.—In order to give retrospective operation to a statute it is necessary that the statute should make an express provision or its language should convey a necessary and distinct implication to that effect. Examining the language of S. 2 (b) in the light of this canon there is no express provision in S. 2 (b) to the effect that proceedings pending on 16.6.1948, but determined before the Act came into force, are also to be included in the word "pending proceedings". The language of the section does not raise any such necessary and distinct implication either. The words "pending proceedings" therefore do not include cases which had been determined and had thus become final under the Ordinance before the Act came into force: 1905 A C 369; AIR 1949 All 225 (FB) and AIR 1927 P C 242, Referred. Gulabchand v. Kudilal. I L R (1952) Madh-Bha 15 : A I R 1951 Madh.Bha 1 (12, 13) (Pt F) (Prs 42, 47) (FB).

[Reversed in AIR 1958 S C 554]

● ——S. 2—Scope.

Having regard to the scope and object of the Act, S. 2 does no more than define the jurisdiction of the High Court, Sub-s. (a) of this section defines the jurisdiction in relation to persons and territory, while sub-s. (b) defines the jurisdiction in relation to subject-matter. Gulabchand v. Kudilal, I L R (1952) Madh-Bha 15 : A I R 1951 Madh.Bha 1 (8) (Pt H) (Pr 24) (FB).

[Reversed in AIR 1958 S C 554.]

■ ——Ss. 2 (b) and 25—Sections if retrospective.

There is no provision in the High Court Act which makes S. 25 retrospective so as to apply to judgment decrees, orders and sentences which are final at the date of coming into force of the Act and there is nothing in the wording of Ss. 2 (b) and 25 of the Act which would compel a Court to hold that they were intended to have such a retrospective effect. 1 Madh-B L R 229 : AIR 1950 Madh B 112 (116) (Pt A) (Pr 7) (FB).

SECTION 6

● ——S. 6 — Existing and current law binding on Madhya Bharat High Court.

The Indore High Court having ceased to exist, the Indore High Court Act, 1948, cannot be said to have survived — If the Indore High Court Act cannot be regarded as operative, it follows that it is not an existing or current law which the M. A party's right of appeal within the High Court itself is founded on the provisions relating to the jurisdiction and powers of the High Court and not an extension of the vested right already existing. Hence though the appellants had at the time of the institution of the suit no right of appeal from the decision of a Single Bench of the High Court, the appellants could take advantage of the right of appeal subsequently conferred under S. 23 of the High Court Act.

—S. 23—Certificate of fitness—(C. P. Code (1908), S. 109).

The test for determining whether a case is a fit one under S. 23 of the Act, is to see whether the point involved is one of great public or private importance or is of such a nature that the decision thereon might result in a precedent governing numerous cases or whether there are any other exceptional circumstances justifying the grant of a certificate. The mere existence of a substantial question of law is not sufficient. A question of private importance means private importance to both the parties to the litigation and not merely to one of them. The construction of Holkar State Revenue Circular No. 13 of 1908, Cls. (3), (4) and (5), has been decided by a series of cases of Madhya Bharat High Court. Held, that this was certainly not a matter of public importance because it affected merely the parties of the case, and not a large body of persons or community, and there was no reason to grant a certificate. ● —Ss. 23, 24, 37, 6 — Existing and current law binding on Madhya Bharat High Court.

Majority view : Madhya Bharat High Court is not a successor Court of the High Courts of the Covenanting States. It is a new Court and the powers and jurisdiction of the Court are those conferred under the Madhya Bharat High Court Ordinance No. 2 of 1948 and the Madhya Bharat High Court Act (8 of 1949), under which it has been established and is continuing.

The Indore High Court having ceased to exist, the Indore High Court Act, 1948, cannot be said to have survived. If the Indore High Court Act cannot be regarded as operative to-day, it follows that it is not an existing or current law which the Madhya Bharat High Court is required to apply under S. 6 of the Madhya Bharat High Court to civil, criminal and other proceedings. C. S. A. No. 354 of 1951, Uday Bhan v. Firm Shankar Lal, Relied on. Case law referred,

Per Khan J.—In ascertaining the jurisdiction of the Madhya Bharat High Court, it is not only S. 23 and S. 24 of the Madhya Bharat High Court of Judicature Act (which define its civil and criminal and appellate jurisdiction) that are to be looked at, but all the relevant sections of the Act have also to be considered. Thus S. 6 and S. 37 of the Act cannot be left out of account.

The scope of the jurisdiction of the High Court is widened by Ss. 6 and 37 of the Act. In so far as these sections enjoin on the High Court to apply the laws of the Covenanting State also, (including the right of appeal which may exist under some law of any of the Covenanting State) till such time as they were modified. In this view of the matter if the Indore High Court Act of 1948 had really provided for an appeal from the decision of a Division Bench then having regard to Ss. 6 and 37 of the Madhya Bharat High Court of Judicature Act, such an appeal was competent. A I R 1951 S C 252, Expln. and Rel. on. Gokul Das v. Mohan Kunwar Bai, ILR (1952) Madh B 557 : AIR 1953 Madh Bha 217 (219, 221) (Pt C) (Prs 6, 21, 22) (FB).

● —S. 23—Powers and jurisdiction.

When a new High Court is created then its powers and jurisdiction must be determined according to its own Constitution, and not the Constitution of the old Court, the pending cases of which have been transferred to the new Court for disposal. The Indore High Court having ceased to exist on the establishment of the Madhya Bharat High Court in 1948, the Constitution of the Indore High Court and the Rules of that Court cannot be said to have survived.

Hence, it is not the Constitution of the Indore High Court, but the Madhya Bharat High Court of Judicature Act, 1949 and the Rules framed by the M. B. High Court under that Act, that must be taken into consideration while considering the question of the powers and jurisdiction of the M. B. High Court, and the practice and procedure of the Court. (1949) M B L R 8; AIR 1951 S C 253. Rel. on. Udaybhan v. Firm Shankar Lal, ILR (1952) Madh B 536 : AIR 1953 Madh Bha 209 (211) (Pt B) (Pr 5) (FB).

—S. 23 — Appeal under — Concurrent findings of fact —How far binding—Civil P. C. (1908), S. 100.

An appeal under S. 23, Madhya Bharat High Court of Judicature Act not being an appeal from any court subordinate to the High Court S. 100, Civil P. C. will not apply to such appeal. This, however, does not warrant the High Court departing from the general rule which forbids a review of the evidence for the third time where there are concurrent findings of two lower courts on a pure question of fact.

Unless it is shown with absolute clearness that some blunder or error is apparent in the way in which the Judges have dealt with the fact, a review of evidence third time will not be justified. It is only when there had been any principle of evidence not properly applied or if there had been written documents referred to on which the appellants could show that the Courts below had been led into error or, when the existence of a document does not appear from the judgment of the First Appellate Court to have been appreciated by it, and no effect whatever is given to the statutory presumption arising from the document that the evidence can be re-examined. In fact, the question that has to be determined in such appeals is not what conclusion the High Court would have arrived at if the matter had for the first time come before it, but whether it has been established that the judgments of the two Courts below are clearly wrong. In appeals from the decree of a Judge on the Single Bench the onus lies heavily on the appellants to show that the conclusion arrived at by the Judge is legally erroneous. The High Court has also to pay respect to the opinion which a Judge who has watched and listened to the witnesses had formed as to their credibility. AIR 1947 P C 19; 14 I A 7; AIR 1940 P C 192; AIR 1937 Lah 644; AIR 1948 P C 20, Ref. AIR 1953 Madh Bha 184 (186) (Pt A) (Pr 10) (DB).

——S. 23(b)—"Appellate Civil Jurisdiction"—Letters Patent (Cal), Cl. 15.

Unlike the High Courts Act of 1861 and the Letters Patent of 1865 ot the Madhya Bharat High Court of Judicature Act has clearly conferred revisional jurisdiction on the High Court in S. 22. Section 23 that follows directly after, therefore, would not be silent with regard to the revisional jurisdiction if the Legislature had intended to provide an appeal against the decision given in revisional jurisdiction. An appeal lies under S. 23 from only that decree which is passed in exercise of appellate, as distinct from, revisional, jurisdiction by a single Judge. There is no reason to include revisions in appeals under the Madhya Bharat High Court of Judicature Act as both appellate and revisional jurisdictions have been separately mentioned. Omission of revisional jurisdiction in S. 27 does not lead to the irresistible conclusion that the words 'appellate jurisdiction' used in cl. (b) of S. 23 are used in a broad sense. Case law discussed. A I R 1951 Madh Bha 165 (167, 168) (Pt A) (Prs 8, 11).

——Ss. 23(b) and 2(b)—Order in revision by a single Judge — Appeal under S. 23(b), if lies — "Appellate Civil Jurisdiction" if includes "Revision" — Retrospective effect of S. 23 (b).

Where R applied in revision against an order of the District Judge holding his Court had jurisdiction in a certain suit before him and the revision was dismissed, he applied for a certificate under S. 23(b) proviso of the Madhya Bharat High Court of Judicature Act to prefer an appeal therefrom. It was opposed on the ground that no appeal from an order in revision by a single Judge is provided for and no appeal was provided for at the time of initiation of the proceedings.

Held, Unlike the High Court's Act, 1861 and the Letters Patent (Madras), the Madhya Bharat High Court of Judicature Act clearly confers revisional jurisdiction on the High Court under S. 22. Section 23 which follows immediately would not be silent with regard to the revisional jurisdiction if the Legislature had intended to provide an appeal against a decision given in revisional jurisdiction. The proviso to S. 23(b) lends support to the view. An appeal under S. 23 lies only from the decree passed in exercise of appellate, as distinct from revisional jurisdiction by a single Judge. There is no reason to include revisions in appeals under the Act as both revisional and appellate jurisdictions have been separately mentioned. Omission of revisional jurisdiction in S. 27 does not lead to the irresistible conclusion that the word "appellate jurisdiction" in S. 23(b) is used in a broad sense to include revisional jurisdiction. (22 Mad 68, discussed and explained. 14 All 226 and cases following Ref,)

No doubt the right of appeal is governed by the law in force at the time of institution of the suit; but it is not absolute and is subject to limitations that the new statute does not alter the situation by express provision or by necessary implication. In the instant case, S. 2(b) of the Judicature Act provides that the provisions of the Act are applicable to all proceedings pending at the time of the enforcement thereof. If otherwise appeal is permitted by the Act the objection, that the Act will not be retrospective in operation and hence no appeal lies, has to fail. AIR 1951 Madh Bha 165 (168) (Pt B) (Pr 12).

● ——S 25(2)—Conviction in the exercise of appellate jurisdiction—Appeal.

Per Dixit J.—The Judges of the Division Bench of the High Court in affirming in appeal the conviction and sentence of the accused for the offence of robbery cannot be said to have convicted the accused of robbery in the exercise of their appellate jurisdiction. As such so far as the conviction of the accused for the offence of robbery is concerned the accused have no right of appeal under S. 25(2), High Court Act. Fakirchand v. The State 1955 Cri L J 1073; M B L J 1955 H C R 316; A I R 1955 Madh Bha 119 (123) (Pt G) (Pr 29) (FB).

● ——Ss. 25 and 25-A—Jurisdiction — Appeal from judgment of Division Bench — (Indore High Court Act (IV of 1948), Ss. 21(c), 23).

Section 21(c) of the Indore High Court Act did not give right of further appeal in the High Court from a decision of a Division Bench; on the contrary, such an appeal was expressly prohibited by S. 23 of that Act.

Even assuming that S. 21(c) did confer on the appellant such a right, it is further clear from the opening words of S. 21(c) namely, "save as otherwise provided by any law for the time being in force" that if any other statute prohibits an appeal within the High Court from a decision of a Division Bench, then S. 21(c) would give way and the provisions of the other statute would prevail. Hence as the Madhya Bharat High Court Act, 1949, negatives the existence of any such right of appeal, the appellant cannot exercise the right said to have accrued to him under S. 21(c) of the Indore High Court Act.

Section 25 of the Madhya Bharat High Court Act, 1949, which repealed the Madhya Bharat High Court Ordinance No. 2 of 1948, no doubt, provided for appeals to a Full Bench in certain cases from decisions of a Division Bench. But on 25th January, 1950, by Ordinance No. (1 of 1950), a new S. 25-A was inserted in the Act and the new section took away the jurisdiction of that Court to hear and determine any appeal from a decision of a Division Bench given after 25th January, 1950.

It follows from this that whatever might have been the law prior to 25th January, 1950, the High Court has now no jurisdiction at all to entertain any appeal from a decision of a Division Bench given after 25th January, 1950. 25-1-50 — Jurisdiction of High Court to hear appeals against decisions — Constitution of India, Arts. 225 and 372.

Per Full Bench.—The Madhya Bharat High Court has no jurisdiction to hear and determine appeals from decisions of any Division Bench of that High Court given after 25-1-50 by virtue of the combined effect of S. 25A, Madhya Bharat High Court of Judicature Act read with Art. 225 of the Constitution of India. Consequently, a special appeal filed under S. 25 of the High Court of Judicature Act against the decision of a Division Bench of the High Court given on 16-5-51 rejecting the appeal filed by the convict against his conviction and death sentence must be rejected as incompetent. :Buldeo Singh v. The State, 52 Cri L J 1467 : AIR 1951 Madh Bha 149 (153) (Pt A) (Pr 21) (FB).

● —S. 25—Criminal appeal under—Interference in —Practice of High Court.

The right of special appeal under S. 25 of the High Court Act was provided when the Judicial Committee was abolished. Hence the Madhya Bharat High Court when exercising the powers under S. 25 can interfere with the decision of the lower Court only when substantial and grave injustice has been done. As a general rule, it cannot go into the question of evidence.

Held, in the circumstances of the case that, as no question of substantial and grave injustice was involved in the case, no interference was called for in the concurrent finding of conviction of the lower Courts. ● —S. 25 (1) — Scope—'Question of principle pertaining to law' — Meaning of — (C. P. Code (1908), S. 100).

Section 25 (1) of the Madhya Bharat High Court of Judicature Act 1949 is differently worded from S. 100, C P. Code. An appeal under S. 25 of the Act is not limited to questions of law or any other particular questions. The words 'Special appeal shall lie to the Full Bench of the High Court' as used in S. 25 (1) mean, in the context of that provision, no more than this ; that a person can go to the Full Bench in appeal from a decision of a Division Bench if the appeal satisfies the requirements stated in the two provisos to S. 25 (1) and the Full Bench shall have jurisdiction to entertain the appeal. If therefore, an appeal involves some question of principle pertaining to law, then it is open to the appellant to urge questions of law as well as of facts. The question whether in an appeal under S. 25 (1) the High Court should disturb a finding of fact, and, if so, under what conditions, is entirely different and does not in any way affect the competency of the appeal.

A principle of law means a rule of axiom of law, while a question of law is one which arises when a conclusion is reached on the application of the rules and principles of law to certain proved facts and circumstances. In the determination of cases, it is not the function of the Court to decide principles of law in abstract. They are considered when the question of their applicability to the facts and circumstances proved arises.

The expression 'if the appeal involves some question or principle pertaining to law' in the second proviso to S. 25 (1) of the Madhya Bharat High Court of Judicature Act, 1940, far from curtailing the right of appeal, makes it more liberal than in a case where it is provided that no appeal shall lie against any decree or order unless a substantial question of law is involved in the appeal. All that is necessary is that the appeal should 'involve some question of principle pertaining to law' no matter whether the principle of law is elementary and well-established or whether it is one lying in the field of divided and controversial opinion.

Where the appeal involves a considerations of the principles as regards construction of documents and of the principles embodied in and underlying S. 23 of the Contract Act the appeal is competent.

(It was also held that it was too late for the respondents to raise the objection to the competency of the appeal, when they had not raised it before the Full Bench of the Madhya Bharat High Court hearing the appeal for the first time, but after the case was remanded by the Supreme Court for disposal on merits. ● —S. 25 (1)—Questions of fact,

It is open to the appellant to raise questions of fact in an appeal under S. 25 (1). In dealing with questions of fact it would be proper to follow the practice always acted upon by the Privy Council in regard to findings of fact. There must be some justification for interfering with any finding of fact of the first appellate Court challenged by the appellant. Gulabchand Gambhirmal v. Kudilal Govindram. 1960 M P L J 334 : 1959 M P C 143 : 1959 Jab L J 78 : AIR 1959 Madh Pra 151 (158) (Pt B) (Pr 11) (FB).

● —S. 25 (1) — Question of law—Construction of contract—(C. P. Code (1908), S. 100).

The finding of the Division Bench that the agreement was void for uncertainty as regards price was based solely on the construction of the last clause itself of the agreement which had been misconstrued by the Division Bench. The construction put by the Division Bench, did not depend an any surrounding circumstances or extraneous evidence or on any meaning of a term as understood in common language. What the Full Bench, in appeal under S. 25 (1) did was to construe the deed as a whole and to consider the legal effect of certain terms and expressions used therein and arrived at the conclusion that the price was fixed.

Held, that it could not be argued that the construction of the agreement having been decided by the Division Bench on the document together with other circumstances or extraneous evidence and on what they meant by certain terms and words used in the last clause of the agreement, the question as to its construction was one of fact and and not of law and that no question arose of legal problems bearing on the construction of the document. Therefore it could not be said that the conclusion of the Full Bench involved a disturbance of any finding of fact. Gulabchend Gambhirmal v. Kudilal Govindram. 1959 M P C 143 : 1959 Jab L J 78 : 1960 M P L J

Finding that a certain agreement to sell a share in the managing agency to the plaintiff was a bribe to the plaintiff who was a member of an enquiry committee to enquire into a dispute in which the party was interested is one of fact which cannot be interfered with in appeal under S. 25 (1) unless there are special circumstances which would justify such a course.

The finding that the contract to sell two and a half annas share to the plaintiff was as a bribe to him is no doubt an inference from certain primary facts and circumstances specifically found but that does not make it any the less a finding of fact.

But where the finding is not based on evidence or is based on evidence which is not legal, the decision that there is no evidence to support a finding or that it is based on evidence which could not in law be considered is a decision of law. That being so, the Full Bench can consider whether the finding is based on legal evidence. Gulabchand Gambhirmal v. Kudilal Govindram. 1959 M P C 143 : 1959 Jab L J 78 : 1960 M P L J 334 : A I R 1959 Madh Pra 151 (163) (Pt I) (Pr 22) (FB).

SECTION 25-A

● —S. 25-A—'Notwithstanding anything contained in S. 25'—Meaning.

The words "Notwithstanding anything contained in S. 25" which occur in S. 25 (A) only override the provisions of S. 25. They do not limit the deprivation of jurisdiction only to appeals falling under S. 25. The words only mean that S. 25 shall be no impediment to the non-existence of the jurisdiction. If the intention had been to limit the taking away the jurisdiction of the High Court only to appeals under S. 25, then one would have found the qualifying words "under S. 25" after the words "any appeal" and before the word "from" in S. 25A. But as it is S. 25-A uses the unqualified words "any appeal" which mean that any appeal whether under S. 25 or under any other provisions of law. Gokul Das v. Mohan Kanwar Bai. A I R 1955 N U C (Madh B) 2389 (DB).

● —S. 27 — M. B. High Court Rules, Ch. I, Rule 1 (11)—Change in Rule—Appeal to be heard by Single Bench — Right of appellant—(Constitution of India, Art. 133)—(Civil P. C. (1908), S. 109).

In exercise of the powers vested by S. 27 of the M. B. High Court of Judicature Act, 1949, on 24th December, 1951, the Rules of the M. B. High Court were altered so as to provide inter alia that an appeal from an appellate decree of a District Court in which the value of the subject-matter in appeal or of the subject-matter in appeal and any cross-objection therein under O. 41, R. 22, Civil P. C., did not exceed Rs. 4,000 could be heard and disposed of by a Judge, sitting alone.

Held (1) that this new R. 1 (ii) of Chapter 1 of the Rules of Madhya Bharat High Court governed appeals arising out of cases instituted before the 24th December, 1951, that is, before the rule came into force.

(2) that on a consideration of the provisions of Art. 133, Constitution of India, read with Ss. 109 and 110 of the C. P. Code, the appellant against whom a suit for recovery of Rs. 2,893 had been filed had no right of appeal to the Supreme Court under sub-clause (a) or (b) of Cl. (1) of Art. 133 and that he would not be entitled to claim that leave to appeal under sub-cl. (c) must be given to him as a matter of right. That being so, the alteration in the rule about the jurisdiction of the Single Judge and the Division Bench did not affect any substantive right of the appellant to appeal to the Supreme Court. Udaybhan v. Firm Shankar Lal. ILR (1952) Madh B 536 : A I R 1953 Madh Bha 209 (211) (Pt A) (Pr 5) (FB).

● —S. 27—Extent of power to make rules.

The power to make rules includes the like power to vary, rescind and amend those rules. It is thus within the power of the M. B. High Court to provide by rules framed nnder S. 27 whether the jurisdiction in appeals to it under S. 23 of the M. B. High Court of Judicature Act, 1949, read with Ss. 96 and 100 of C. P. Code is to be exercised by a single Judge or by a Bench of two or more Judges. Such a rule would be one not affecting the right of appeal but exclusively regulating the procedure of the hearing of the appeal. And, therefore, if under the rules of the Court or under a statutory provision an appeal is to be heard by a particular member of Judges, it is not a vested right of any party. A litigant has no vested right in the procedure as such surrounding the hearing of appeal in the High Court. He has under S. 23 of the M. B. High Court of Judicature Act read with Ss. 96 and 100 of the C. P. Code a right of appeal to the High Court and not to any particular Bench of the High Court. SECTION 29

● —S. 29 (b) — Full Bench decision — Power of Single Judge to doubt and refer it for reconsideration—(Precedents).

In view of S. 29 (b) it is clear that a Single Judge can entertain a doubt in respect of a full Bench ruling and can write to the Chief Justice for reconsideration of it by a larger Full Bench. In the reference to the Chief Justice the Single Judge can express his doubts on the decision of the Full Bench but he is not authorised to state that that decision is erroneous. Chandulal v. ● —S. 29 (b) — Motion for reference to larger Bench—Should not come from counsel.

The motion to refer a matter to a Full Bench or to a larger Bench should normally come from the Judges themselves and not from counsel when they find that they are fettered by a decision in a previous case which appears to them to require further consideration. ——S. 25 (1)—Regulations under—Chap. 16, Regn. 7 —Scope.

The National Council of Education, Bengal, with its object to foster education on patriotic lines held three examinations, last being the Final School Standard examination. Calcutta University accepted this examination as equivalent to the Matriculation examination of the University. The petitioner a student of the Calcutta University had appeared at the School final examination and also at the final school standard examination of the Council as an external or private student. He failed in the former but passed in the latter but submitted an application through the College authorities of the Ashutosh College together with all necessary documents, migration fee and registration fee, in order to obtain sanction to his migration. He then got admission to the College. Meanwhile, the Syndicate decided that no student who has passed the final school standard can be admitted to any College if he has failed in any test examination or the School final examination of the Board of Secondary Education, West Bengal. The Registrar of the University issued circulars to the Colleges to the effect that any student who has passed Final School Standard examination may be admitted to College provided his guardian makes a declaration that the student has not failed at the test examination of any school or School Final examination of the Board and in case declaration is found false, admission shall stand dismissed. Principal of Ashutosh College asked petitioner's father to make the declaration against which this petition for mandamus.

Held, that this was not a bona fide case of migration. The University was entitled to take a view that the petitioner failed to come up to its own standard but somehow passed the examination of another institution whose examination has been recognised but held suspect and there was nothing illegal in it, because the facilities of mutual recognition extended to sister universities or educational institutions are not meant to be used as devices to circumvent the educational programme of the University, or to destory its own standards. In such an eventuality, the Syndicate has the power to refuse sanction and it must be allowed to use that power. High Court is not called upon to interfere.

The contention that even if the Syndicate has power to refuse sanction to migration, it has no power to ask the college to remove a student from the rolls is not tenable. Since the Syndicate can refuse its permission, there is no reason why it cannot impose conditions for granting such permission. Besides, since the admission was provisional, and the college was entitled to put an end to it, it was in the interest of the student himself since the admission was not capable of being sanctioned by the University.

Result of the relevant regulations, resolutions and circulars summarised. AIR 1953 Cal 783 (786) (Pt A) (Prs 12, 13).

——S. 25—Regulations under—Constitution of India, Arts. 14 and 19 (1) (g).)

If the Syndicate of a University makes special rules for students who migrate to it from another University that is not discrimination. All categories of students cannot be treated alike. To treat students migrating from another University as a separate class, from students passing the University's own examinations, is not an unreasonable classification and certainly has a rational basis.

Study in an University is not an "occupation" within the provisions of Art. 19 (1) (g). The dictionary meaning is "Employment, business, calling" none of which are applicable to academical pursuit simpliciter. A teacher may be said to have an occupation. A student cannot be said to be following any occution, in the generally accepted sense of the term. The regulations of the Calcutta University regarding the migration of students do not therefore violate Art. 19 (1) (g). AIR 1953 Cal 783 (787) (Pt B) (Prs 15, 16).

——S. 25—Writ against University — Duty of Board of Examiners to act judicially—Jurisdiction of Court to interfere—Universities Act, 1904, S. 25 — Regulations under, Chap. XXV Reg. 8. See Constitution of India, Art. 226. AIR 1952 Cal 594.

——S. 25—Calcutta University Regulations, Ch. XXV — Unfair practice by student at examination — Concellation of his examination—Power of Syndicate — Constitution of India, Art. 226.

Under the provisions of Ch. XXV of the Regulations of the Calcutta University, the body which has jurisdiction to consider cases of breaches of discipline arising in connection with examinations and to modify the results of such examination is the Examination Board. When it has considered the results of the examination and cases of breaches of discipline it is then under a duty to forward a report to the Syndicate. The Syndicate has no power to vary the findings of the Examination Board. It may confirm such findings or if it disagrees with them it may refer them back to the Board for reconsideration. It is clear from the above that the Syndicate is not empowered to consider questions of malpractices and breaches of discipline and that it is a matter for the Examination Board. Accordingly, a resolution passed by the Syndicate cancelling the examination of a student accepting a report made to it by a sub-committee of the Examination Board that the student was guilty of unfair practices at the examination without any finding or report whatsoever from the Examination Board itself, is clearly contrary to the Rules of the University, and has no legal effect. A writ of mandamus may be issued under Art. 226 of the Constitution directing the University to forbear from giving effect to the said resolution. (1952) 56 C W N 730.

UNIVERSITY OF BIHAR (BHAGALPUR AND RANCHI) AMENDMENT ACT (13 of 1962)

——S. 4—Master and Servant — Termination of services of college lecturer—Without previous notice—Provision for notice not made in statute — Termination held violated principles of natural justice and was therefore illegal—Bihar State Universities.

Held, that although S. 4 of Bihar Act 13 of 1962, did not expressly say that notice must be given to the teacher who is to be affected prejudicially by the order of the Chancellor, it is well established as a matter of law that in such a case a notice is necessary. As a matter of necessary legal implication the Chancellor was bound to act, in accordance with natural justice before exercise of the statutory power conferred by S. 4 of the statute. Therefore even on the assumption that S. 4 of the Bihar Act 13 of 1962, is intra vires (point not decided) the order of the Chancellor dated the 20th June 1962, without notice to the petitioner was ultra vires and illegal as it violated the principle of natural justice and was liable to be quashed by a writ of certiorari under Art. 226. S. 14 (5) — Vice Chancellor discharging administrative function—Fundamental rights not affected—No regular inquiry necessary—Action held competent—Natural justice—Principles of.

The Vice-Chancellor of Saugar University, acting under S. 14 (5) read with Ordinances Nos. 12 and 13, debarred a student from appearing in any examination of the University for two years. The student had earlier contravened an order of the Vice-Chancellor directing the students not to resort to any propaganda for or against the University.

Held, that though Ordinances Nos. 12 and 13, in so far as they purport to deal with the maintenance of discipline amongst students, would be ineffective, it was within the power of the Vice-Chancellor to make the impugned order under S. 14 (5). (2) That in making any order for the maintenance of discipline under S. 14 (5), the Vice-Chancellor discharged an administrative function. The very object of disciplinary action would be defeated if in such cases the giving of a notice, an opportunity of hearing and a regular enquiry was held to be essential before the taking of any action. ——S. 4 — Untouchability — Meaning—The word in the Act has been used in the same sense as in Art. 17 of the Constitution. See Untouchability (Offences) Act (22 of 1955), S. 3. AIR 1958 Mys 84 (DB).

——S. 4 (iv)—Applicability—Private well—Right of access to use of well by public — Proof — Permissive use by villagers — Not sufficient.

Section 4 (iv) of the Untouchability Offences Act does not apply to private wells. The owner of a private well being free to regulate the use of his well by co-villagers, the fact that such owner permitted other people in the village to draw water from the well, would not be a proof of the fact that every villager has a right of access to or right to use the well. The prosecution must affirmatively establish that the public had a right of access to or use of the well in question before the offence under S. 4 (iv) can be said to have been established. (1962) 28 Cut L T 157 : ILR (1962) Cut 256.

——S. 5 (b) and 12—Gist of offence under—Segregation of Harijan students into a separate division whether amounts to an offence — Discrimination — Meaning of—Constitution of India (1950), Arts 15, 16 and 29.

What is required by S 5 (b) of the Untouchability (Offences) Act, is the doing of any act which discriminates against any such person on the ground of untouchability. In other words, there is no requirement that the discrimination should only or solely be on the ground of untouchability. It will be noted that the section does not speak of any mens rea or intention with which the act should be committed. The section is entirely different from the wording of Arts. 15, 16 and 29 of the Constitution which says that the discrimination should only or solely be on the ground of untouchability. Under S. 5 of the Act even if the discrimination is not solely or only on the ground of untouchability and if untouchability is only one of the grounds of discrimination the person practising such discrimination would be guilty of the offence. So if one of the reasons for the segregation of the Harijan students is on the ground of untouchability the offence is made out. When the attempt of the accused to prove the contrary has failed the presumption arises and the Court would be justified in holding that the act was committed on the ground of untouchability. On the language of the Articles of the Constitution and on the language of S. 5 of the Act it is clear that every person who is singled out for differential treatment is the victim of discrimination and to that extent there is discrimination. Therefore by segregating the Harijan students into a separate division the accused has clearly committed the offence. (1965) MLJ (Cri) 32 : 1964 Ker L T 1015 : (1964) 2 Ker L R 226 : 1965 Ker L J 206; ILR (1965) 1 Ker 97.

——S. 6—Refusing to render service to a Harijan is offence — Joint trial of three accused persons—Legality—Cr. P. C. (1898), S. 239.

The applicants (barbers) who had a hair-cutting saloon were convicted for refusing to render service of cutting hair of complainant on the ground of his being a Harijan. They were sentenced to pay a fine of Rs. 100 each. It was contended that the accusations made in the complaint were against three persons and since each one of them refused to render service, separate offences were constituted and there should have been separate trials.

Held, that the trial was proper inasmuch as there was a positive allegation of all the accused having conspired not to cut the complainant's hair on the ground of his caste. A joint trial was permissible under S. 239 of the Criminal Procedure Code. The prosecution had only to prove that the complainant was ready and willing to pay for the service that he demanded to be rendered. 1963 M P L J (Notes) 52.

——S. 7—Offence under—Abolition of untouchability under Art. 17 of the Constitution — Effect—No right to use private well accrues—Refusal by owner to allow use of his well—No offence committed — Constitution of India, Art. 17.

——Ss. 12 and 8 — Balloting out 'one-fifth of elected fellows' — Meaning of — Powers of Vice-Chancellor —Second "balloting out"—Legality—S. 5 (6).

Per Das, C. J. and Panigrahi, J., Narasimham, J. ; dissenting : The one-fifth of the elected fellows under S. 12 of the Act is to be calculated on the number of "fellows" that could be elected under S. 8 (3) of the Act and not with reference to the elected fellows who had been returned on the first election.

(Per Panigrahi, J.) : Where the Vice-Chancellor discovers that he had committed a mistake in carrying out the "balloting out", which power was vested in him he has also the power suo motu to cancel the same and 'ballot out' a second time in accordance with the statute. If the law empowers any person to do a thing it gives the power to do everything for the purpose of carrying it out. The power subsists until the purpose is accomplished. In the absence of any specific provision to the contrary it cannot be held the second balloting out is void or illegal.

Per Das, C. J. : The power exercised in balloting out is executive and not judicial. In the exercise of an executive function the power to review or correct one's own act or decision is inherent unless there is a statutory prohibition against it. Judicial or quasi judicial 'acts alone cannot be so reviewed or cancelled except under the authority of statutory provisions. The Vice-Chancellor in correcting what is admittedly a mistake has acted within his powers and it could not be said that any vested rights were affected thereby. The result of publication has not given a finality to it. Even if it amounted to a "proceeding" of the University and fell within S. 5 (6) that would not prevent as a matter of law his exercising the power to correct the mistake by cancellation of his mistaken action. The power of correction of the higher authority does not preclude the power of correction of the original authority.

Per Panigrahi, J. :—The Vice-chancellor's action in cancelling the first balloting out and holding a second is not a "proceeding" falling within the purview of S. 5 (6) so that it can be annulled by the Chancellor. Even if it be so there is no authority against the Vice-Chancellor himself annuling it. AIR 1952 Orissa 359 (369, 379, 381) (Pt A) (Prs 20, 53, 61).

—Ss. 12 and 5 (6) — Vice-Chancellor can hold another balloting out, suo motu, on discovering the first to be wrong and irregular.

Per Panigrahi, J. — Where the Vice Chancellor discovers that the balloting out carried out by him was wrong he has power to hold suo motu a second balloting out. The principle of law that should be applied is that if the law enables something to be done it gives the power at the same time to do everything that is indispensable for the purpose of carrying out the object in view. That power subsists until the purpose is accomplished—Ubi aliquid conceditur, conceditur et id sine quo res ipsa esse non potest—When anything is granted, that also is granted without which the thing granted cannot exist. In the absence of any specific provision to the contrary it cannot be said that the act of the Vice-Chancellor in holding another balloting out is either void or illegal. Even if it be considered to have been an error it is an excusable error which could be rectified by the wrong doer himself and not a culpa gravis justifying the interference of the Court

Per Das, C. J. — The Vice-Chancellor is entitled to correct his own mistake, or review his own act, provided of course, such correction or review is bona fide, and not for any ulterior purpose or arbitrary, which is the pre-requisite for all valid exercise of statutory powers. In such matters, there is a broad distinction between the exercise of executive functions and the exercise of judicial or quasi-judicial functions. As regards the latter, it is beyond dispute that power of going back on or modifying a prior act or decision must be derived from a specific law or statute; but in the exercise of executive functions the power to review one's own act or decision or to correct one's own mistake, is inherent, unless there is some other statutory provision which limits or prohibits it; or unless as a result of such executive action, other present and vested rights are affected. If in the present case, either the balloting itself or the notification and the publication of the results of balloting can under the scheme of the Act and of the Statutes be held to interfere with any present and vested rights of the Fellows of the University, it could not be said notwithstanding that the balloting is an executive act, that the act is open to cancellation or review by the Vice-Chancellor. But the balloting conducted so much in advance of the elections cannot be said to have legally affected any vested rights at that stage.

Though balloting is a preliminary step for such election a notification of the results of balloting is not necessarily a notification issued under Cl. (2) of Law 9 of Chap. 15. If the Vice Chancellor has adopted the procedure of publishing the results of balloting in the Official Gazette, that was only a bona fide step taken to give publicity. Such publication cannot impart to the results of balloting any further legal consequence. Therefore the fact that the result of first balloting has been published by the Vice-Chancellor does not necessarily give it a finality so far as he is concerned.

Applicability of S. 14, Orissa General Clauses Act, considered.

Per Panigrahi, J.— The Vice Chancellor's action in cancelling the first and holding the second ballot is not a "proceeding" of the University which falls within the purview of the powers of the Chancellor under S. 5 so that it can be annulled by the Chancellor. Even assuming it to be so, it cannot be said that it was not in conformity with the Act or the Statutes as neither the Act nor the Statutes lay down how he is to perform the act. The power to annul is no doubt lodged in the Chancellor but there is no authority for the view that the University cannot annul its own proceedings.

Per Das, C. J.—Even if the balloting amounted to a proceeding, and fell within the scope of the powers of the Chancellor under S. 5 (6) that would not by itself, preclude, as a matter of law, the power of the Vice-Chancellor, if any, to correct his own mistake by adopting the form of cancellation of his previous mistaken action. The power of correction by a higher authority is not necessarily inconsistent with the co-existence of the power of the original authority to correct its own mistake. AIR 1952 Orissa 359 (370, 371, 372, 373, 382, 383) (Pt D) (Prs 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 63 and 64).

CHAPTER 9

—Chap 9, Law 3 (2) — Standing Order No. 4 — Failure to comply with - Effect—Waiver of notice.

The failure to comply strictly, with the provisions of notice contained in the Standing Order No. 4 is not a mere irregularity. It invalidates the meeting and the business transacted thereat unless it is not reasonably practicable to summon a particular person, who is not present at the meeting and has no notice of it, by reason of his address being unknown or his being out of reach.

Where in an ordinary meeting of the Syndicate an urgent question is raised without giving any previous notice, the question of notice may be waived if all the members are present but no question of such waiver arises when an important member is absent. Moreover, where the meeting is called not for any personal benefit but for the purpose of public duty it is not competent for any person to waive it.

Similarly the duration of the notice as required by the Standing Order No. 4 has also to be strictly construed.

Held that as Standing Order No. 4 was contravened and all the members of the Syndicate had not waived the notice, the resolution passed by the Syndicate at that meeting was invalid and inoperative. ILR (1951) Cut 407 : 17 Cut L T 320 : AIR 1952 Orissa 1 (6) (Pr 14) (DB).

CHAPTER 23

—Chap. 23, Law 8, Ch. 22, Law 2 — Syndicate — Power of directing fresh examination.

Though it is true that if Law 8 of Chap. 23 is read independent of other provisions of the Statutes it suggests that the Syndicate has only the power to publish the results of the examinations as reported by the Board of Examiners and has no power to disapporve the results, the last para of Law 2 of Chap. 22 expressly states that the results when passed by the Board of Examiners shall be submitted for the approval and publication by the Syndicate, and the power of approval must necessarily include the power of disapproval also, if for any sufficient reason it holds that the examination has not been conducted in a fair manner. This however does not mean that the Syndicate can arbitrarily throw away the report of the Board. ILR (1951) Cut 407 : 17 Cut L T 326 : AIR 1952 Orissa 1 (5) (Pt D) (Pr 10) (DB).

—S. 9 (1), Proviso 1 — Premature petition—Potential threat not enough—Land of petitioners acquired under U. P. Acquisition of Property (Flood Relief) Temporary Powers Act — Orders for compensation not issued — Provision of Act cannot be challenged on ground of inadequacy of compensation. See Constitution of India, Art. 226. AIR 1962 All 606 (DB).

—S. 9 (1), Proviso 1 — Validity — Acquisition of land — Compensation — No provision for full market value of property acquired — 1st proviso to S. 9 (1) is invalid — Severability of proviso from enacting section and Act — Interpretation of Statutes — Government of India Act (1935), S. 299 — Constitution of India, Arts. 31-A, 31 (2).

Obiter.—S. 299 of the Government of India Act, 1935, embodies the general principle of the law of Eminent Domain and provides for compensation, meaning thereby the full value of the property sought to be acquired. In so far as the first proviso to S. 9 (1) of the Act provides that the value of the land on the date of publication or on the first day of September 1939, whichever is less be treated to be the value of the property acquired, there is no provision providing adequate compensation or the full market value. The proviso is, therefore, in the teeth of the provisions of S. 299 and it was not competent for the U. P. Legislature to have enacted that proviso to S. 9 (1). AIR 1951 All 674 (FB) and AIR 1954 S C 170, Rel. on.

If the proviso to S. 9 is taken away, the enacting clause is not affected. Even without the proviso S. 9 (1) of the Act can function properly and there would be no difficulty in its being administered. (1939) 2 Mad L J Supp 45 : AIR 1939 F C 74, Rel. on.

Where the lands which are being acquired are bhumidari plots, the proviso also cannot be saved by Art. 31-A of the Constitution, as such lands do not come within the purview of the expression 'estate' occurring in Art. 31 A. Bhumidari rights are not proprietary rights. The word 'estate' in Art. 31-A contemplates proprietary rights, i. e., the rights of intermediaries and not the rights of tenants. AIR 1957 All 153 and AIR 1961 S C 1790, Rel. on. Similarly, the Act cannot be saved by Cl. (2) of Art. 31 of the Constitution as it is not covered by Cl. (6) of the Article. The Act was passed in 1948. Therefore, it could not be a law which had been enacted not more than 18 months before the commencement of the Constitution. UTTAR PRADESH ADMINISTRATION OF EVACUEE PROPERTY ORDINANCE (1 of 1949) —Preamble — Invalid statute — If validated by Government of India (Third Amendment) Act — (Government of India Act (1935), S. 83 (3)) — (Government of India (Third Amendment) Act (4 of 1949)—(Constitution of India, Arts. 213, 245, 246).

A statute void for unconstitutionality is dead and cannot be vitalised by a subsequent amendment of the Constitution removing the constitutional objections but must be re-enacted. Section 88 of the Government of India Act did not authorize the Governor of the United Provinces to make an ordinance like the Ordinance No. 1 of 1949. The Government of India (Third Amendment) Act (4 of 1949, adding in List 3 of Sch. 7 of the Government of India Act, 1935, the matter "custody, management and disposal of property declared by law to be evacuee property" did not validate the Ordinance No. 1 that was ultra vires the Governor before it came into force. The Ordinance No. 1, therefore, remained void even after 25th August 1949, when the Government of India (Third Amendment) Act came into force and there did not come into existence any vesting of any property in the Custodian. 5. Previous year.
6. Total Agricultural Income.
7. Proceeding under the principal Act.

1. Agricultural income.

——Ss. 2 (i) and 3—Arrears of rent — Land not held by assessee—No proof that land was used for agricultural purposes—Not liable to tax.

An income on which tax is sought to be levied must be on agricultural income. If there is no proof or finding that the land was used for agricultural purposes in the previous year, income from such land, of earlier years, would not constitute agricultural income within the meaning of the definition in the Act and would be exempt from tax. 1961 All W R (HC) 671 : 1961 All L J 880.

——S. 2 (1) (a)—Ubari—When it amounts to a release or assignment of revenue, the tenure is ubari — Payment of quit rent is neither a land revenue nor a cess. AIR 1924 Nag 133, Rel. on. 1961 All W R (HC) 598 : 1961 All L J 478.

——S. 2 (1) (a)—Scope and applicability.

By a certain resolution certain Jagirdars were exempted from payment of cess in return for their maintenance of roads, schools, etc., in their jagir. Though the resolution in terms means that they would have been liable to be assessed to cess, if they had not undertaken to maintain roads, schools, etc., it could not mean that the jagir lands were subject to cess assessed and collected by an officer of the Provincial Government within the meaning of S. 2(1)(a). 1961 All W R (HC) 598 : 1961 All L J 478.

——S. 2 (1) (a) and (b)—Sale of khair trees—Income—Taxability.

Aboriculture is also agriculture and products, such as timber, which are raised from the land by basic and subsequent operations which involve the expenditure of human labour and skill in the subsequent operations as well as in the basic operation of planting into the soil constitute 'agriculture'. Therefore, the income derived from the sale of khair trees, being income derived by agriculture is liable to be assessed under S. 2 (1) (b) and not under S. 2 (1) (a). 32 I T R 466, Foll. 1961 All W R (HC) 314 : 1961 All L J 253.

——S. 2 (1) (b)—Sale of grain stock of previous year—Amount not part of income of assessment year. See U. P. Agricultural Income-tax Act (3 of 1949), S. 6(3). I L R (1959) 2 All 353.

——S. 2 (1) (a)—"Agricultural income" — Malikana received by assessee from Government—Income Tax Act (1922), S. 2 (1)).

Under a Government notification, the predecessor-in-interest of the assessee was divested of all rights and interest in the land situated in Pargana S. of which he was a jagirdar and instead he was granted a right to one/fourth of the net collections of land revenue of this Pargana after deducing Tahsil expenses.

Held, that the income received by the assessee was agricultural income. AIR 1960 All 264, Rel. on. 1959 All W R (HC) 684 : 1959 All L J 798.

——Ss. 2 (1), 5 and 6—Scope—Deduction of proportionate land revenue in determining assessable agricultural income.

Agricultural income has been placed in several classes and each class of income is computed either under S. 5 or S. 6. Where that income is derived from land upon which land revenue is paid the land revenue relative thereto is deducted in determining the assessable agricultural income. Under S. 5 land revenue is deducted in respect of land from which that type of income is derived which falls to be determined under S. 5, and under S. 6 land revenue is deducted from that type of land from which that type of agricultural income is derived which is indicated in S. 6, so that even though land revenue may have been compositely fixed for all the land of an assessee liable to land revenue at a total figure and all the land treated as one unit, yet for the purpose of deduction the total must be broken up and apportioned. For the purposes of deduction under S. 5 and S. 6 it is apparent that it must be determined to what the proportionate land revenue which a particular plot of land which yields agricultural income attracts and then that land revenue has to be deducted. It follows therefore that under S. 5 proportionate land revenue and not the entire land revenue has to be deducted. I L R (1958) 2 All 663.

——S. 2—Income—(Income-tax Act (1922), S. 4).

Held, that the assessee made no business of growing fruit trees for sale. The sale was made by the assessee because, he apprehended that he would be divested of his rights in the land on which the trees were growing—an apprehension which proved to be correct. The circumstances, showed an absence of that regularity or expected regularity in the receipt of the sale proceeds of the trees which was an essential constituent of income for tax purposes. 2. Additional collector—Assessment by.

Act 14 of 1956) —Assessment year 1952-53 — Proceedings started by Additional Collector on 10th January, 1953—Collector quashing those proceedings on 26th November, 1955 — After passing of amending Act, on review Collector setting aside his order — Fresh assessment by Additional Collector — No question of limitation arises. 3. Person.

●—S. 2 (11)—Trustees holding land for the benefit of beneficiaries would certainly be covered by the definition of person contained in S. 2(11). See Agricultural Income-tax Act (3 of 1949), S. 11(1). AIR 1957 S C 887.

—S. 2 (11)—'Person' — Several persons jointly purchasing certain land and forming Co-operative Society which was registered under Co-operative Societies Act — Society cultivating land belonging to its members — Held, Society was association of individuals and therefore was 'person' under S. 2(11)—Before Society could be said to hold land, enjoyment of interest in land by it was not necessary — Society was distinct from members constituting it and therefore it was not chargeable to tax as common manager under S. 11 unless it was appointed as such. ('64) 54 I T R 503 (All) (DB).

—S. 2 (11)—'Person'—Capacity of assessee as person —If to be established with reference to each item of agricultural income.

When considering the question whether the assessee is a 'person' within the meaning of that word as defined in S. 2 (11) of the Agricultural Income Tax Act it is not at all necessary that the capacity of the assessee as a person must be established with reference to each item of the agricultural income sought to be taxed. All that is required under the Act is that the assessee must be a 'person' inasmuch as he himself owns or holds property as an individual for himself and secondly he must be receiving income which satisfies the definition of agricultural income. 1959 All W R (HC) 684 : 1959 All L J 796.

—S. 2 (11) — Mutawalli holding trust property—His double personality — He is deemed to be two different persons in his two capacities and the assessment of the income from the two different sources must be separate. See U. P. Agricultural Income-tax Act 1948 (3 of 1949), S. 3. AIR 1958 All 38 (DB).

—Ss. 2 (11), 10—Hindu undivided family — Karta also lambardar of agricultural property — Separation of one coparcencer — Karta continuing to manage family property including share of separated member —Assessment as Hindu undivided family—Validity —(Hindu law— Partition.)

Once there is disruption of a joint Hindu family by the separation of one coparcener, the presumption of Hindu Law that the family was an undivided Hindu family ceases to exist. Thereafter there is neither a presumption that the remaining members continued to be joint nor is there a presumption that they all became separate. The question has to be decided as one of fact on the evidence available. Where the assessee besides being the head of the joint Hindu family was also a lambardar of the agricultural property, the fact that even after the alleged separation of a coparcener, the assessee continued to manage the family property including the share of the coparcener who had separated so that the amounts continued to be maintained jointly by the assessee provides no material at all for an inference that the family had continued to remain joint. Where there was ample material to show that the family did not continue to remain joint after the separation of the coparcener, the assessment of the assessee in the status of a Hindu family is wrong in law. When there is a lambardar he is under law entitled to manage property on behalf of all the co-sharers. After realising the agricultural income he divides that income between the co-sharers. This is irrespective of the fact whether the other co-sharers belong to the same family as he does or are entirely strangers. 1957 All L J 436 : (1957) 31 I T R 895 : (1957) All W R (HC) 429 : AIR 1958 All 35 (35, 36) (Prs 3, 4) (DB).

—S. 2 Cl. (II), Explanation — Explanation whether should be given effect to—Explanation was added by the Legislature to clarify the meaning of the word 'person' as used in the principal Act. See Constitution or India, Art. 372. AIR 1955 N U C (All) 3533.

—S. 2 (11) — Section 3 of Amendment Act 14 of 1953 which clarified the definition of person in S. 2 (11) of the principal Act is not ultra vires—Definition of person in S. 2(11) makes no reference to the period of time when the person should have owned or held property —S. 3 of the Amending Act does not change the meaning of the word 'person'. See U. P. Agricultural Income-tax (Amendment) Act (XIV of 1953), S. 3. AIR 1955 N U C (All) 2280.

—S. 2 (11)—Estate taken over under U. P. Abolition of Zamindari and Land Reforms Act—Individual not "person" within meaning of S. 2 (11)—Assessment—The only use of the word "person" in S. 3 is in connection with the total agricultural income of the previous year—The income of the previous year should be of 'person' and therefore whether an individual to be assessed to tax was a person in the previous year or not would depend on whether the person owned or held property in the previous year or not. See U. P. Agricultural Income-Tax Act (1948), (III of 1949) S. 3. AIR 1955 N U C (All) 2280.

6. Total agricultural income.

—Ss. 2 (16), 5 and 6 (2) (b) — "Total agricultural income" — Loss incurred under S. 6 (2) (b)—Set-off against income.

Total agricultural income in accordance with the definition contined in S. 2 (16) of the Act is the aggregate of the income under S. 5 and income under S. 6. In computing the total agricultural income on which an assessee is chargeable to agricultural income-tax any losses which he may sustain in any of the two sources which go to make up his total agricultural income have to be set off against the total earnings of the two sources of the assessee. Therefore the loss incurred by the assessee under S. 6 (2) (b) should be set off against the income under S. 5 of the Agricultural Income tax Act to determine the total agricultural income of the assessee. A I R 1942 Pat 276 (FB), Rel. on. 7. Proceeding under the principal Act.

● —S. 2 U. P. Act (14 of 1956), Ss. 2, 10, 11 — Assessment without jurisdiction validated by U. P. Act 14 of 1956 — Assessee given right to apply for review of orders made under U. P. Act 3 of 1949 — Assessment order set aside under Art. 226 — Review of order under Art 226, under U. P. Act 14 of 1956 is not maintainable — Review application dismissed by Single Judge—Order is "judgment" under Cl. 10 of Letters Patent (All.) and Chap. 8, R. 5 of Allahabad High Court Rules and appealable—Constitution of India, Art. 226 — Letters Patent (All), Cl. 10 — High Court Rules and Orders — Allahabad High Court Rules, Chap. 8, R. 5.

Under the U. P. Agricultural Income-tax Act, 1948 (3 of 1949), an Additional Collector made an order of assessment, which was set aside under Art. 226 by a Single Judge of the Allahabad High Court on the ground that the assessment was without jurisdiction. All the assessments by the Additional Collectors, however, were validated by the State of Uttar Pradesh by Ordinance II of 1956 subsequently replaced by U. P. Act 14 of 1956 with retrospective effect. It was further provided by Act 14 of 1956 that if in any proceeding under the U. P. Agricultural Income-tax Act, any Court or authority had set aside any assessment made by an Additional Collector on the ground that he had no jurisdiction to make it, any party to the proceeding might apply for review under S. 11 of the U. P. Act 14 of 1956. An application for review made to the Single Judge who had passed an order under Art. 226, was dismissed on the ground that the U. P. Act 14 of 1956 did not apply to orders under Art. 226. An appeal against the order was taken to a Division Bench but was dismissed, on grounds (1) that the order dismissing review application was not a "judgment" within meaning of Chap. VIII, R. 5 of the Allahabad High Court Rules and was not therefore appealable and (2) that the U. P. Act 14 of 1956 had no application to an order made under Art. 226. In the appeal by special leave before the Supreme Court :

Held, that the application under Art. 226 was not a "proceeding under the Principal Act" i.e., U. P. Agricultural Income-tax Act, 1948 (3 of 1949) nor a continuation of a proceeding under the Act, and S. 11 of the Act therefore did not apply to the order of the Single Judge under Art. 226. 1958 All L J 61, Affirmed.

It could not be contended that a petition under Art. 226 was a continuation of the proceedings under the U. P. Act (14 of 1956). While Art. 226 confers a discretionary power on the High Court, the second part of S. 11 of the Act (U. P. Act 14 of 1956) enjoins on the High Court to make an order in a particular way. Such a construction to the section as would bring it into conflict with Art. 226 of the Constitution and which would have the effect of invalidating it to that extent should not be given. On the other hand, if the construction confining the first part only to an order made by any Court or authority, other than the High Court in exercise of its jurisdiction under Art. 226 of the Constitution, is adopted both the parts fall in a piece, and it would not only be giving a natural meaning to the express words used in the section but also be saving the section from the vice of constitutional invalidity.

The Supreme Court refused to treat the application filed before the High Court as one under O. 47, Civil P. C., on the ground that the prayer was very belated one and that it would bring in many controversial questions.

Held, Per Sinha C. J., Subba Rao, Rajagopala Ayyangar and Venkatarama Aiyar JJ. (Mudholkar J. not expressing any opinion) :

That the order of the Division Bench dismissing the application for review of the order under Art. 226 was a "judgment" within the meaning of Cl. 10 of the Letters Patent (All.), as well as Ch. VIII, R. 5 of the Rules of the Court (All.) as the new Act (U. P Act 14 of 1956) created a right and the order decided a question relating to this right and the order therefore was appealable. 1958 All L J 61, Reversed. State of Uttar Pradesh v. The expression "agricultural income-tax" in paragraphs (a) and (b) of Part I of the Schedule in the Act does not include 'super tax'. The two are not the same entity. Under S. 2 of the Act the tax on agricultural income was categories under two distinct heads, one called agricultural income-tax and the other termed agricultural super-tax. Not only have these two categories been separately dealt with for the purpose of computation but they have been spoken of as two separate types of tax. The fact that in the Schedule there were two separate parts made is a clear indication of the intention of the legislature to keep those two parts separate and that nothing of the one part was going to affect, add to or detract from the provisions of the other part. 1959 All L J 641 : ILR (1959) 2 All 149.

1. Determination of income.

——S. 6 — Income — Mode of determination — Loss under one head cannot be set off against income from another head, as there is no express provision in this Act unlike Income-tax Act. See U. P. Agricultural Income-tax Act (3 of 1949), S. 5. (1964) 54 ITR 506 : 1964 All L J 85.

——S. 6 — Scope — Deduction of proportionate land revenue in determining assessable agricultural income. See U. P. Agricultural Income-tax Act (3 of 1949), S. 2 (1). ILR (1958) 2 All 663.

2. Permission to change method of computation — Nature of.

——S. 6 (1), Proviso 1 — Mandamus, writ of — Mandamus where duty is discretionary — Where Senior Member, Board of Revenue, had exercised his discretion to grant permission under S. 6 (1), Proviso, to make a change in the method of computation of income for the purposes of the Act, honestly and on full consideration of the materials before him and had refused permission, there is no scope for the High Court to interfere by means of writ of mandamus. See Constitution of India, Art. 226. AIR 1953 All 25 (DB).

——S. 6 (1), Proviso — Judicial and official acts — Performance of — Presumption as to — Where a statute has conferred the privilege of exercising a discretion on a responsible officer, the Court can legitimately make a presumption that he has not acted capriciously. See Evidence Act (1872), S. 114, Illus. (e). AIR 1953 All 25 (DB).

——S. 6 (1), Proviso 1 — Interpretation — Proviso is not limited in its application to variation of method of computation of income in the course of a year.

The first proviso to S. 6 (1) means that once and only once during the course of an assessee's "assessable life," can be unfettered, exercise the option given to him under S. 6 (1) of the Act and if once he has exercised his option, he cannot without the permission of the Board take the other alternative.

There is not the slightest indication in the proviso that the restriction placed by it upon the variation in the method of computation related only to any one year and that the assessee is at full liberty to vary the method of computation every year.

If after the commencement of U. P. Agricultural Income Tax Act, an assessee has once selected one method of computation of agricultural income, he cannot vary it subsequently in any year without the permission of the Board of Revenue. ILR (1953) 1 All 817 : 1952 All W R (H C) 517 : 1952 All L J 557 : AIR 1953 All 25 (27, 30) (Pt A) (Prs 14, 31) (DB).

——S. 6 (1), Proviso 1 — Discretion under — Exercise of — Consideration as to loss of revenue — Relevancy.

A consideration of loss in the revenue, which can justly be collected by the imposition of a tax, is not irrelevant consideration in disposing of an application to the Board of Revenue for permission to change the method of computation of income. (1891) Appeal Cases 173, Rel. on.

As the very name of the authority indicates, the Board of Revenue in its administrative capacity has to take into consideration the effect of the permission it may grant under the proviso of S. 6 (1) upon the revenues of the State. The object of the Act is to raise revenues for the state by imposing a tax on agricultural income. If the Board acts in the above manner it acts within the spirit of the Act. ILR (1953) 1 All 817 : 1952 All W R (H C) 517 : 1952 All L J 557 : AIR 1953 All 25 (30) (Pt C) (Pr 34) (DB).

——S. 6 (1), Proviso 1 — Validity — Provision does not infringe Art. 14 or Art. 19 (f) of the Constitution of India (Constitution of India, Arts. 14 and 19 (f).)

The absolute and unfettered discretion given to the Board of Revenue to grant or refuse permission to an assessee under S. 6 (2) Proviso to make a change in the method of computation of his income, does not infringe Art. 14 of the Constitution: 1952 All L J 274 and 1952 All L J 278, Ref.

3. Option of computation of income.

——S. 6 (1) (a) read with S. 15 (4) — U. P. Agricultural Income-Tax Rules, 1949, R. 5 — Option of computation of income — Declaration in prescribed form — To accompany every return filed — Change in option not prohibited.

Section 15 (4) of the Act expressly lays down that it is the right of an assessee to file any number of returns so long as the assessee discovers any omission or wrong statement in returns filed earlier. No distinction between an original return or a return filed subsequently is made under the section. An assessee can change his option as many times as he files the returns till the filing of the return becomes impossible by reason of the completion of his assessment. Hence the assessing authority must proceed to assess in accordance with the option expressed by the assessee in the return on the basis of which the tax is levied on the assessee. (1962) 46 I T R 417 (All).

4. Assessment for year ending on 30th June 1954.

In making the assessment for the year ending 30th June, 1954, the assessee is liable to be assessed on rent of his land multiplied by 12½ under S. 6 (2) (a) of the Act as amended by Act 14 of 1953. 1963 All L J 1017.

——Ss. 6 (3), 2 (1) (b) — Sale of grain stock of previous year — Amount not part of income of assessment year — (U. P. Agricultural Income Tax Rules (1949), R. 15).

When S. 2 uses the words "any income derived from land by agriculture", it means any income derived during the year. Further, S. 3 clearly shows that if part of the produce has been sold the value of that produce will be taken as income and as regards the balance the assessing authority shall determine the value to the best of his judgment. In case no sales have been effected, it will be the value of the total produce according to the best judgment. Rule 15 also makes it clear that what the Legislature wanted was the value of the yield of the accounting year and not the actual sales which were to be taken into consideration. The sale proceeds of the old grain stock sold during previous year cannot, therefore, be included in the agricultural income of the assessment year. ILR (1959) 2 All 353.

—S. 6 (2) (b) — Deductions — Of loss in produce due to natural calamity—Propriety.

In cases governed by S. 6 (2) (b) no question of any deduction on account of loss in the produce resulting from natural calamity arises. For in such a case the assessee is assessed on the gross proceeds of sale of the produce of his land on the basis of actual produce in the same year in similar land in the neighbourhood. In arriving at the actual produce of the land abnormality, in the circumstances arising from natural calamities like floods and frost, have to be and are considered. 1962 All W R (H C) 607 : 1962 All L J 684 : I L R (1963) 1 All 22.

—S. 6 (2) (b) — Computation of income — Board adopting correct method—No question of law.

Under S. 6 (2) (b), computation of the income has to be made by first computing the gross proceeds of sale of all the produce and then certain deductions have to be made from the amount so determined. Even in the case of best judgment assessment, the assessment has to be made by the assessing authority by first determining the gross proceeds of sale of all the produce to the best of his judgment, then determining the amount of deductions permissible to the best of his judgment and, thereafter, taking the difference as the amount of taxable income. Where the Board adopts the correct method, no question of law fit for reference to the High Court would arise. 1960 All W R (H C) 15 : 1960 All L J 14.

—S. 9—Mutawalli holding trust property—Double capacity — A mutawalli when receiving a income from trust property receives it in his capacity as manager of the property and is another person when he derives his agricultural income from his personal property. He derives it in an entirely different capacity and is, consequently, a different person. Under S. 3, therefore, he is deemed to be two different persons in his two capacities and the assessment of the income from the two different sources must be separate. See U. P. Agricultural Income-tax Act (3 of 1948), S. 3. A I R 1958 All 38 (DB).

—S. 9 — Wakf Alal-aulad — Trust property held by Mutawalli—Assessment — Mode of — Difference between trusts under Mussalman Wakf Validating Act and Trusts Act — (Mussalman Wakf Validating Act (1913), S. 5)—(Trusts Act (1882), S. 6.)

In the case of a trust governed by S. 9, U. P. Agricultural Income-tax Act, the income received from the trust property should be assessed separately from the income received as his personal income by the Mutawalli. A Mutawalli of a trust referred to in S. 5, Mussalman Waqf Validating Act, 1913, does not stand on the same footing as an ordinary trust governed by Trusts Act. In the case of a trust governed by the Trusts Act, the trust property as well as the income derived from the trust property vest in the trustee who is to be deemed owner of the property as well as the income. A Mutawalli of a Waqf Alal-aulad is on the other hand, merely the manager of the trust property. The income received by him as a mere manager of the trust property must, therefore, be assessed separately from his personal income. The word 'coparcener' in S. 10 of the U. P. Agricultural Income-tax Act, bears the same connotation as it does in Hindu Law. A widow who becomes entitled to enjoy by virtue of S. 3 (2) of the Hindu Women's Rights to Property Act, the same interest in the joint family property, as her husband had, is not a coparcener within the meaning of S. 10 of the U. P. Agricultural Income-tax Act and her share of the agricultural income need not be separately assessed to tax. (1964) 53 I T R 770 : (1964) 2 I T J 727 : 1964 All W R (H C) 61.

—S. 10—Application under S. 24 (4)—Jurisdiction of High Court—When arises—Finding that family is joint — Section 10 indicates that the expression undivided Hindu family is used in the Act in the sense of a coparcenary — Hence a disruption of the family is itself sufficient to absolve members from liability to tax as undivided Hindu family — High Court can interfere if they find that the facts and circumstances upon which the inference of jointness was based do not justify the inference that family had no intention to separate. See U. P. Agricultural Income-tax Act (3 of 1949), S. 24 (4). A I R 1956 All 156 (DB).

——S. 11—Scope and applicability — Assessment of Agricultural income arising from land solely owned by him — Payment of guzara amounts charged on land—S. 11 whether applies.

Section 11 provides for representative assessment, that is it provides for the recovery of tax vicariously. The persons enumerated in the section who are treated as assessee do not hold any beneficial interest at all in the agricultural income which is so taxed. They are assessed only in their capacity as a common manager or receiver or administrator or in a like capacity. They are not the beneficiaries of the income taxed but inasmuch as they hold land from which agricultural income is derived at the time of the assessment they are liable to pay the agricultural income tax assessable thereon. But the recovery of the levy is merely on the basis of a representative or vicarious liability. Where the assessee is being assessed in respect of agricultural income arising from his own land and he is not a manager or receiver or an administrator or the like on behalf of any other person, nor has any person along with him a joint interest in the land, the mere fact that guzara has to be paid by the assessee to the guzaradars does not create any interest in favour of the guzaradars at all in the land which is being assessed to agricultural income-tax. The assessee, if he so chose, could pay the guzara from income derived from sources other than the lands charged, and merely because the assessee is bound to pay the guzara amounts would not clothe the assessee with the character of a common manager receiver, administrator or the like. Section 11, therefore, does not enter into the picture at all and cannot be applied to such a case. ILR (1958) 2 All 663.

—S. 16 (4) — Best judgment assessment — Allowances and deductions—Burden of proof—Income-tax Act (1922), S. 23 (4)—(Evidence Act, 1872, S. 106).

The assessing authority in exercising powers under S. 16 (4) no doubt acts in a quasi-judicial capacity and he cannot act capriciously or in an arbitrary manner. The law does not, however, cast any burden on the assessing authority in making the assessment under S. 16 (4), upon the failure of the assessee to furnish full and proper particulars about allowance or deduction, to embark upon an investigation of those points which must necessarily be within the special knowledge of the assessee. The burden of proving a claim to an allowance or deduction is on the assessee, who must allege the same. ILR (1957) 2 All 100.

—S. 21 (5), Proviso — Enhancement of assessment —Notice to assessee—Requirement of—Prior notice when not necessary for enhancement.

The proviso to S. 21 (5) requires that no enhancement of an assessment shall be made by the Commissioner unless the assessee has had a reasonable opportunity of showing cause against it. But the said proviso does not speak of a show cause notice being served on or given to the assessee before the date fixed for hearing of the appeal. In fact, no particular notice is required by the proviso to be given to the assessee. So long as the assessee is made aware of the intention to enhance the tax and he was heard against the proposed enhancement and the assessee did not want any more or other opportunity in the form of time, etc. the tax could be enhanced even if no notice of the proposal was served upon or given to the assessee at least a day prior to the date on which the appeal was heard. 1962 All W R (HC) 607 : 1962 All L J 684 : ILR (1963) 1 All 22.

—Ss. 22, 24 (7) — Jurisdiction of High Court is confined to deciding only questions of law arising out of Revision Board's order.

Jurisdiction of High Court under S. 24 (7) is confined to deciding questions of law arising out of the Revision Board's order passed under S 22 and referred by it. No question, not even of law, which does not arise out of the order passed by the Board can be referred by it to the High Court, and High Court has no jurisdiction to decide such question. 1963 All L J 1082 : (1964) 52 I T R 745 : AIR 1964 All 439 (440) (Pt A) (Pr 3) (DB).

——S. 22—Limitation for revision.

Section 22 does not prescribe any period of limitation within which an application for revision under S. 22 has to be made to the Board. The revisional jurisdiction of the Board is discretionary. If, in exercise of its discretion it decides to revise an order though application under S. 22 was made after undue delay, it is a matter of discretion and cannot be said to infringe any law. 1963 All L J 1032 : (1964) 52 I T R 745 : A I R 1964 All 439 (440) (Pt B) (Pr 4) (DB).

——S. 22 —Board in exercise of its revisional powers cannot revise an earlier order made by it.

The revisional powers of Board under S. 22 of the U. P. Agricultural Income Tax Act is restricted to orders passed by subordinate authorities only and does not extend to its own orders. The revisional jurisdiction is certainly wide. It is expressly subject to two provisions and the limitations placed by the mention of the circumstances in which it can be exercised. It is to be exercised in respect of a proceeding before an authority subordinate to itself and cannot be exercised in respect of a proceeding before its own self. It could revise any order passed by the assessing authority or by the Commissioner but could not revise any order passed by itself because it cannot be said to be subordinate to itself. Any order passed by the Board becomes final and cannot be altered in any manner other than that laid down by S. 22 (2) of the Act and the Board cannot correct its own earlier order. 1963 I T J (Sup) 131 ; (1964) 53 I T R 592 : 1964 All L J 277 (DB).

——Ss. 22 and 44 and Rules, R. 25-C — Revision petition, signing of—By applicant alone — Necessity —Procedure adopted by Board—Validity.

No form of revision application has been prescribed either under the U. P. Agricultural Income-tax Act or under the Rules framed thereunder. It follows that there is nothing in the Act or the Rules to require an applicant, in a revision, to sign the revision application personally and on the principle of qui facit per alium facit per se which is to a limited extent, countenanced by the U. P. Agricultural Income-tax Act itself. The same can be got done through another so long as that other is duly authorised.

The procedure adopted by the Board, without the prior approval of the State Government in requiring revision applications to conform to any particular form or to be signed personally by the applicants is without the authority of law. 1958 A L J (Rev) 69, Overruled. 1962 All W R (H C) 811 ; 1962 All L J 982.

——Ss. 22, 25 — Powers of Board — (Constitution of India, Art. 226.)

Section 25, clearly provides that it is not open to the assessing authorities after the period of the limitation mentioned in the section to assess or reassess any income which ought to have been assessed earlier. If the assessing authority is definitely prohibited from making such an assessment or re-assessment, it can hardly claim to be entitled to do so under direction of the Revision Board. It is obvious that the Revision Board cannot authorise the assessing authority to do something which under the law that authority is not entitled to do. In that sense S. 22 is clearly subject to the other provisions of the Act including S. 25. No period of limitation is however provided for the exercise of the revisional powers of the Board under S. 22. Though the application under S. 22 is made after a very great delay the application cannot be rejected as time barred. The board is entitled to entertain the application. It has jurisdiction to deal with it and to decide it. No writ of prohibition can, therefore, be issued preventing the Board either from entertaining the application or from dealing with it. ILR (1958) 1 All 374 : (1960) 39 I T R 687 ; 1958 All L J 183 : 1958 All W R (HC) 259 : A I R 1958 All 528 (531) (Pt A) (Prs 16 to 21) (DB).

——Ss 24, 23—Communication to assessee—Copy of Judgment obtained by clerk of assessee's counsel — No communication.

In S. 23 there is a mandatory provision that the authority which passes the final order under S. 22 shall communicate such order to the assessee and, therefore, the final order on the revision application of the assessee, should be communicated by the Board to the assessee. It cannot get rid of that responsibility and later on say that since the assessee had come to know of the order (in this case by obtaining the copy of the judgment through the clerk of his counsel), it was not its duty to communicate—What S. 23 contemplates, is a communication of the complete order of the Board, rather a true copy of the judgment delivered by the Board or by any authority, and it would be the date from the receipt of such communication that the limitation would run under S. 24 (2). ILR (1959) 2 All 353.

——S. 24 — Scope — Board can refer questions suo motu—Power not dependent on sub-s. (2) — Distinction between S. 24 and S. 66, I. T. Act - (Income Tax Act (1922), S. 66.)

Section 66 of the Income Tax Act is not equivalent to S. 24 of the Agricultural Income Tax Act. There is sub-s. (1) in S. 24 of the Agricultural Income Tax Act, which has no equivalent and parallel enactment in section 66.

The two powers in sub-s. (1) and sub-s. (2) of S. 24 are wholly independent of each other. The power under sub-s. (1) to refer a question suo motu can always be exercised irrespective of the fact whether any reference has been made under sub-s. (2) or not. ILR (1959) 2 All 353.

——S. 24 (4)— Powers of High Court.

Whatever may have been the ground upon which the Board has refused the application the only affirmative course open to the High Court, if it is not satisfied as to the correctness of the Board's decision is to require a case to be stated. No distinction is made in the procedure to be followed in cases where the Court finds that the Board, after considering an application for a reference on its merits has erroneously come to the conclusion that no question of law arises and cases in which it finds that the Board has wrongly rejected the application or refused to make a reference on the ground that it is time barred or is otherwise incompetent. Bearing in mind that a reference can lie and a case be stated only on a question of law arising out of the order made by the Board under S. 22, it follows that the question whether the decision of the Board that an application made to it under S. 24 (2) is time-barred is not a question which can be made the subject of a reference and must therefore be decided finally by the High Court. If it is of the view that the Board's decision on that question is wrong, then it must examine to the order made by the Board in exercise of its revisional powers and only if it is satisfied that that order passed under S. 22 raised a question of law will order a case to be stated though in a case in which the Board has not considered the application made to it in its merits the High Court will not have the advantage of having before it the opinion of the Board. 1958 All W R (HC) 408 : (1958) 34 I T R 880 : 1958 All L J 214.

—S. 24—Reference—Necessary conditions — Question of law.

The position for making a reference under S. 24 is as follows : (1) When the point for determination is a pure question of law, the decision of the Revision Board is open to reference to the Court under S. 24 (1) of the Act. (2) Where the point for determination is a mixed question of law and fact, while the finding of the Board on the facts found is final, its decision as to the legal effect of those findings is a question of law which can be reviewed by the Court upon a reference. (3) A finding on a question of fact is open to attack as erroneous in law when there is no evidence to support it or if it is perverse. (4) When the finding is one of fact, the fact that it is itself an inference from other basic facts will not alter its character as one of fact.

Where after the best judgment assessment, the assessee filed a return along with an application for rectification, whereupon the authority made a re-assessment and the Revision Board held that the assessing authority did not rectify any mistake which was apparent on the face of the record but wrote out a fresh assessment order upon the materials which were subsequently furnished by the assessee :

Held, that no question of law arose in the case which the Revision Board was called upon to refer to the High Court for opinion after drawing up a statement of the case under S. 24 of the Act. ILR (1957) 2 All 100.

——S. 24 — Judgment, meaning of — Reference by Revision Board to High Court — Judgment answering reference — Appeal — Expression judgment does not include a judgment given by the Court in consultative or advisory capacity and hence no appeal lies against the judgment of Revision Board in reference made to it under S. 24. See Constitution of India, Art. 133 (1). AIR 1956 All 392 (DB).

——Ss 24 (4), 10 — Application under S. 24 (4) — Jurisdiction of High Court—When arises — Finding that family is joint — Sufficiency of evidence — (Income-tax Act (1922), S. 66 (2)).

If the Revision Board bases its conclusions of fact on material which is legal evidence, the sufficiency or otherwise of that material cannot be questioned by the Court, which must accept as final the finding of the Board. The material on which the Board bases its conclusion must however be relevant; if it be irrelevant, or such as not to warrant the inference drawn by the Board the Court will have jurisdiction to intervene. In such cases, the question to be considered by the High Court is whether there is evidence to support that finding, or stated in another way, whether the facts found by the Board justify the inference which they have drawn. 1906 A C 455; 1928 A C 234 ; (1942) 24 Tax Cas 498 and AIR 1954 S C 253 ; 1954 S C J 294 (SC), Rel. on. S. 10 of the U. P. Act indicates that the expression 'undivided

Hindu family' is used in the Act in the sense of a coparcenary. Hence for the purpose of the Act the disruption of the joint family is itself sufficient to absolve the members of the family from liability to tax as an undivided Hindu family. The facts found out by the Revision Board may justify the inference that there has been no separation of the joint family property but that is quite a different thing and the High Court can intervene if they find that the facts and circumstances upon which the Revision Board placed reliance do not justify the inference that the family had no intention to separate. (1956) 30 I T R 647 : 1955 All L J 646 : ILR (1956) 2 All 722 : AIR 1956 All 156 (157) (Pt A) (Prs 10, 11, 12, 14) (DB).

It is well settled that a notice seeking to initiate proceedings for assessment of income which has escaped assessment or has been assessed at too low a rate is a jurisdictional notice; the issue of the notice is a condition precedent to the assumption of jurisdiction for assessing such income. A notice issued to the assessee requiring him to file a return on the next day is not a notice containing the requirements of S. 15 (3) and therefore is not a notice issued in accordance with S. 25, and is not a valid notice. The notice must not merely require the assessee to furnish a return but must require the assessee to furnish a return within a specified period, that period being not less than thirty days, according to S. 25 read with S. 15 (3) of the U. P. Agricultural Income-tax Act. It is only then that it is a notice containing the requirements of S. 15 (3) as specified in S 25. An assessment following an invalid notice must be held to be bad in law and illegal. The mere filing of a return as required by an invalid notice (calling for a return the next day) does not, in itself, establish that the assessee has waived his objection to the notice.

A waiver of a privilege or a right, to be effective, must be based upon full knowledge of the privilege or right to which the persons waiving it is entitled. The burden is on the part pleading the waiver to prove all the facts constituting waiver. ——Ss. 30, 32 (2)—Agricultural Income-tax — Recovery proceedings—'Proceeding'—Suits in civil Courts not included—Tax arrears—Civil suit for recovery—Limitation — Period of one year prescribed for proceedings for recovery — Inapplicable to suits — Limitation — Revision — District Court and High Court—Powers—Res judicata — Prior writ proceedings for quashing recovery proceedings — Taking alternative mode of recovering tax arrears—No plea by the State—Subsequent suit in civil Court—Bar of res judicata—Not applicable—Words and Phrases—'Recovery proceedings'—Civil Procedure Code (5 of 1908), S. 115 — Provincial Small Cause Courts Act (11 of 1887) (U. P. Amendment), S. 25.

The State of Uttar Pradesh filed suits against the assessees, in the Court of Small Causes, for the recovery of arrears of agricultural income-tax and penalty. The Court of Small Causes dismissed the suits as barred by limitation provided for institution of proceedings under S. 32(2) of the Act and this was confirmed by the District Judge in a revision petition filed by the State. The State preferred the revision petitions to the High Court under S. 115 of the Civil P. C. In a prior writ petition filed by the assessee challenging the recovery proceedings taken by the Collector, the State did not plead that they could or would seek remedy before the civil Court to recover the tax dues On the question if the word 'proceedings' in S. 32(2) includes suits in civil Courts and if the principle of res judicata bars the remedy.

Held, that the suit for recovering the tax arrears is not either barred by limitation or by res judicata. The word 'proceedings' occurring in S. 32(2) of the Act does not include a suit in a civil Court. The period of limitation of one year from the date on which the last instalment fixed under S. 30 of the Act falls due, prescribed for proceedings for the recovery of any sum payable under the Act, is not applicable to a suit instituted in a civil Court for recovering such arrears of tax. A suit instituted for the recovery of an amount is a step which can lead to the recovery of the amount but it is not a step which can be said to amount to a recovery proceeding. Such suits would be governed by the ordinary law of limitation. In quashing the recovery proceedings instituted by the Collector, the High Court will not refuse to exercise its extraordinary jurisdiction under Art. 226 of the Constitution simply because by seeking the alternative remedy the State would be able to recover the arrears of tax and penalty. It can even be said that where the proceedings taken by the Collector are without jurisdiction, the State should not put forward any defence and should leave it to the High Court to quash the recovery proceedings. Thereafter the State can decide what further action to take. When it is not necessary for the State to oppose the writ petition. it cannot be stopped from later instituting a suit. which, it can, under the law. Where the District Judge does not exercise the revisional jurisdiction conferred under S. 25 of the Small Causes Court Act in modifying the order of the Court of Small Causes, the High Court under S. 115 of the Civil P. C., can exercise the jurisdiction by passing a suitable order. (1962) All L J 353; (1941) 9 I T R 673 : AIR 1942 Pat 87, Ref. (1965) 2 I T J 740 (All).

——S. 31—Assessment orders quashed but not notice of demant—Penalty orders need not fall.

An order which is not a nullity has legal effect until it is set aside. It cannot be ignored. The assessment order and the notice of demand following it has full legal effect, and the assessee is bound to deposit the tax required of him. The liability to make that payment flows from the notice of demand. The liability continues so long as the notice of demand is not quashed. Therefore, because the assessment orders are quashed the penalty orders need not fall. I L R (1966) 1 All 234 : 1965 All L J 1102.

——S. 31 — Order imposing penalty without prior notice and opportunity to assessee to be heard is bad in law — Constitution of India, Art. 226 — Natural justice.

Where the order is a punitive measure, intended to penalise the assessee for omitting to pay the entire tax arrears within the time specified under the statute prior notice to the assessee giving him an opportunity of being heard is necessary before imposing penalty. There may be a number of reasons which would justify the omission to make such payment and therefore, the order imposing penalty upon the assessee without prior notice to him and without an opportunity to be heard would be bad in law. Under the scheme of the U. P. Agricultural Income-tax Act, there has to be first an order imposing the penalty under S. 31, followed by an order directing its recovery as arrears of land revenue under S. 32. This is even further clarified by the provisions of sub. rr. (3) and (4) of R. 28 of the rules framed under that Act. When the Act and the rules themselves clearly require two separate orders to be made, one imposing penalty under S. 31 and the other directing the recovery of the penalty as arrears of land revenue under S. 32, an order which clearly indicates that it is a mere direction can only be held to be an order under S. 32.

Hence, where the proceedings for recovery of amounts of penalty are not based on any order imposing the penalties under S. 31 of the Act, the proceedings are void. ILR (1960) 2 All 812 : 1960 All W R (HC) 412 : 1960 All L J 542.

——S. 32 (2)—Proceeding contemplated by S. 32 (2) is a mere 'recovery proceeding' and not a suit — Period of limitation prescribed under section would not apply to suits, for recovery of arrears of agricultural income-tax and penalty.

The proceeding for the recovery of the sum payable under the Act as contemplated by S. 32 (2) thereof is a mere "recovery proceeding" and not a suit instituted or to be instituted before the Court of law. Consequently the period of limitation laid down in sub-s. (2) of S. 32 applies to the recovery proceeding and not to suits and suits instituted for the recovery of arrears of agricultural income-tax and penalty shall be governed by the ordinary law, i.e., the provisions contained in the Limitation Act : 1962 All L J 353 and (1941) 9 I T R 673, Rel. on. (1965) 2 I T J 740 (All).

——S. 32 — Arrears of agricultural income tax due from assessee—Amount to debt — Amount of arrears of tax must be included in the aggregate value of debts owed by the assessee — Exception (ii) has no application to such arrears. See Wealth Tax Act (1957), S. 2 (m) Exception (ii). A I R 1963 All 488 (DB).

——Ss. 32 (1) and 32 (2) — Recovery proceedings — When commence—Realisation of tax—Procedure for — Notice by Tahsildar is writ of demand issued during recovery proceeding — Proceedings are not initiated by such notice — Tenancy laws — U. P. Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act (1 of 1951), Ss. 288, 280 (1).

Proceedings for recovery of agricultural income-tax should be deemed to commence from the date of the request made by the assessing authority under the U P. Agricultural Income-tax Act to the Collector to take steps for realisation of the arrears of tax and other dues. For the realisation of the agricultural income-tax, the Collector has to follow the procedure, provided under S. 280 of the U. P. Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act, for the realisation of arrears of land revenue. Hence a notice by the Tahsildar is in fact a writ of demand under S. 280 (1) of the U P. Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act, which is issued in the course of the recovery proceedings.

Held, on facts that the proceedings for recovery were well within one year as contemplated in sub. s. (2) of S. 32 and recovery proceedings could not be held to be invalid as being out of time. 1962 All W R (HC) 275 : (1962) 43 I T R 247 : 1962 All L J 358.

——S. 32 (2)—Rules under Act R. 28 (4)—S. 32 (2) is no bar against taking step-in-aid of recovery of sums due under Act after expiry of one year.

Section 32 (2) places a restriction on the commencement of the proceedings for the recovery of any sum due under the Act beyond one year from the date on which the last instalment falls due. It does not, however, provide that the proceedings once commenced within the stipulated period must further be completed within that period. In other words, there is no restriction under it against taking steps in-aid of recovery after the expiry of the period of one year. Under R. 28 (4) it is by moving the Collector to recover the arrears etc. as arrears of land revenue that the proceedings for the recovery of the amount are commenced.

If this is done within one year from the date when the last instalment fell due and the first writ of attachment issued within that period is unable to satisfy the demand a second writ of attachment issued after the prescribed period would not be barred by S. 32 (2). 1960 All W R (HC) 299 : 1960 All L J 412.

——S. 43—Scope and applicability — U. P. Agricultural Income Tax rules (1949), R. 35A.

Section 43, which is described as an indemnity clause, is both a clause empowering the making of the deduction mentioned therein and providing for an indemnity. The result of the assessee exercising the powers given to him under S. 43 of the Act is that the assessee reimburses himself in respect of the tax which he has paid to the taxing authority qua the amount which he has to pay to the guzaradars. The guzaradars receive their guzaras less the amount of tax which has been deducted by the assessee from the guzara. In this way the net result is achieved that the assessee only pays agricultural income tax on his 'real income'.

There is nothing in the Act to suggest that only a proportionate amount of the agricultural income paid by the assessee can be deducted from the sum paid to the guzaradars. No method of deduction is prescribed. There is nothing to prevent the assessee from treating the income less the guzara amount as his real income, determining what the agricultural income tax payable by him on such real income would be, and then passing on the rest of the tax which he has paid at the higher slab rate to the guzaradars concerned.

Rule 35A has been framed so that by the method of refund the ultimate position is attained that the assessee will pay tax only on his "real agricultural income" and every guzaradar will pay agricultural income tax only at that rate which the amount of his guzara attracted. The agricultural income tax authorities having collected tax on the total agricultural income of the assessee (including the amounts which the assessee will pay to the guzaradars) will not suffer any loss by making a refund in accordance with R 35A of the Act, because the intention clearly is that the total amount of agricultural income tax payable by the assessee and the guzaradars should not exceed the aggregate of the tax payable by each of them individually on the 'real agricultural income' which they actually receive. ILR (1958) 2 All 663.

The words 'carry out' mean 'to carry into practice', i. e. to make practical rules by means of which the Act could be brought into force. The words 'carrying out the purposes of this Act' in S. 44 (1) really mean authorising the State Government to make procedural or adjective law as distinct from substantive law which either takes away or confers vested rights. Sub-section (2) of S. 44 gives rather details of those items on which the State Government is authorised to make substantive law.

In recent times the tendency of the modern legislation has been to lay down general principles and to avoid going into the administrative or practical details. It is within the competence of the Legislature to do so. But there are certain safeguards which have to be observed in delegating this power. So far as the procedural power is concerned, it can be given without any reservations and, therefore usually the first clause of the rule-making section is always in general terms and authorises an authority to make rules 'to carry out the purposes of the Act,' but, where besides the power of making the Act practicable other powers are given, they are always specified usually in the enabling section. The first power has been thus given in sub-section (1) and the second under sub-section (2) of S. 44.

Rule 17 cannot be called a procedural rule as it exempts certain income from being taken. ILR (1959) 2 All 353.

——S. 44 (1)—Rules under, R. 25-D (1)—Validity.

(Obiter) — The State Government's rule-making power is restricted to the making of rules for carrying out the purposes of the Act. The broad purpose of the Act is stated in the preamble as being the imposition of a tax on agricultural income, and the only section in which provision is made for the collection of a fee appears to be S. 24 (2), that is to say the fee of Rs. 100 or such less amount as may be prescribed which must accompany an application under the sub-section. In these circumstances the State Government has no power to levy by rule another fee, namely a fee payable on the application itself and Rule 25-D (1) is therefore ultra vires. 1958 All W R (HC) 408 : (1958) 84 I T R 880 : 1958 All L J 214.

——S. 44 (1)—Rules under, Rr. 25-D, 26 — Application accompanied by treasury challan.

Although R. 25 D (1) purports to make the application chargeable with a Court-fee and the requirement of R. 26 is that the application is to be accompanied by a court-fee, nowhere in the Act or rules is it laid down in what manner such Court-fee is to be paid. In the absence of any such provision the Board was not entitled to demand that the payment of either fee must be by means of court-fee stamps and there was a sufficient compliance with R. 26 if the application was accompanied by a Treasury Challan showing that the appropriate fee has been deposited in the Treasury. Further the fact that the fee prescribed by R. 25 D has not been paid does not entitle the Board to refuse to accept the application. All that the rule says is that the fee is chargeable; how or when that fee is to be collected is not provided. 1958 All W R (HC) 408 : (1958) 34 I T R 880 : 1958 All L J 214.

For setting aside an adverse order inconsistent with the provisions of the amending Act of 1956, a proceeding for review under S. 11 is not the only remedy which is open to an aggrieved party. A court of appeal, in an appeal properly before it, must give effect to the law as it stands if the law has, at some stage anterior to the hearing of the appeal, been amended retrospectively and a provision for review like the one contained in S. 11 of the amending Act does not affect the power of the Appellate Court to deal with the appeal in the light of the amended law. ——R. 17—Validity—Delegation of legislative powers —Principles — Rule 17 not covered by S. 44 (2) or S. 8 — Rule acted upon bona fide by assessee — State cannot challenge validity retrospectively—Rule held effective in respect of past transactions — (U. P. Agricultural Income Tax Act (3 of 1949), Ss. 44, 8)—(Constitution of India, Art. 245).

It is well settled principle of constitutional law that a legislature cannot delegate its essential function. The legislative policy regarding a legislature must be clearly and explicitly explained in the statute itself, but when such powers are delegated they should be canalised and be within limits. Certain details e. g. fixing the maximum rate of imposition of a tax, authorising the executive to determine the rate can be delegated to a subordinate authority.

So far as R. 17 is concerned, no clause under sub-section (2) of S. 44 covers it. Sub-section (1) of S. 44 also does not apply to a rule like R. 17, which is not a procedural law for carrying out the purpose of the Act.

But if a rule has been made by the State purporting to be within its powers for the benefit of the subject, and acting on the basis of which the subject has incurred liabilities and entitled himself to a benefit, the State on its own motion cannot ask the Court to have the law declared later on as ultra vires. The law, in that event, should be interpreted in favour of the subject and in a way that lesser injustice results from its interpretation.

Thus, though R. 17 was not purported to have been framed under S. 8 it had been made under S. 44 and it having been laid before the Legislature and having been acted upon bona fide by the assessee, who had derived advantage, it is not now open to the State to have the law declared ultra vires retrospectively, to affect the past and completed transactions having taken place on the basis of that rule. The answer may have been different if no benefit to the subject had accrued and the State had derived unfair benefit by means of the ultra vires rule.

Held, that so far as the past transactions were concerned R. 17 would be deemed to be effective. I L R (1959) 2 All 353.

——R. 17—Scope—'And' when read as 'or' — Explanation not independent of Rule — Donation to fund or institution not approved by State — Not covered by Rule—(Interpretation of Statutes—And and or).

"And" should be read as "and" and "or" as "or" ordinarily and unless there are strong and sufficient reasons to read one for the other, it is not open to a Court to treat them as synonyms. "And" is used generally in a conjunctive or cumulative sense requiring the fulfilment of all the conditions that it joins together, while "or" is a disjunctive conjunction equivalent to the word "either" and is antithesis of "and".

There is no reason for reading 'and' in Rule 17 as 'or'. Further, Explanation to R. 17 is not to be interpreted and applied independently of the rule and the Explanation to R. 17 is controlled by the rule itself.

The contention, therefore, that in order to avail of the advantage of R. 17 a 'fund' or 'institution' to which a donation is given should be either 'charitable' as explained in the Explanation or 'approved by the State Government', cannot be accepted and hence where a school, a hospital or any other charitable institution is not recognised by the State 'Government or approved by it for the purpose of this rule, it cannot be included in R. 17.

Moreover, a law should be so interpreted that it should not impute redundancy to the legislature or to the rule making authority. If the contention of the assessee that a charitable purpose need not be approved by the State Government is accepted then the words "and is approved by the State Government for the purpose of the rule" in R. 17 would be redundant. ILR (1959) 2 All 353.

——R. 17—Notification under—Approval of or grant from State Government — Supervision of hospitals by Civil Surgeon.

Neither the supervision of hospitals by the Civil Surgeon does amount to an approval of those hospitals, nor the payment of travelling and daily allowances to him can be treated as a grant. A grant in the notification means any grant paid either in cash, kind or even in service but it should be a real grant in the form of a donation. Either there should be some amount paid in cash as a grant or maintenance or there should be free of charge, regular and proper services of a doctor paid by the State available in any of the hospitals. The meaning of grant cannot be extended any further.

Further, an inspection by the Civil Surgeon does not amount to an approval of the Hospital by the State Government 'for the purposes' of R. 17. I L R (1959) 2 All 353.

——R. 17 — Donation—Scholarships paid directly to students.

If an amount is donated to an educational institution recognised by the State, e.g., a University, a college or any other school, which is either recognised by the State Government or by any of the local authorities then, in that event, it would amount to a donation to that institution within the meaning of R. 17 whether it is paid for the purpose of maintenance of the school, for payment as scholarships to students, for prize distribution for Jubilee celebrations or for any other purpose connected with the institution. But if the amount is paid directly to students who may be the students of a recognised school the donation would not come within the purview of R. 17. ILR (1959) 2 All 353.

Where it was contended that the Notification No. 1748/AIT-5, D/- 26-5-1949 made by the Board of Revenue under R. 18 (2), should not be held to be operative for the assessment made in 1955 when the words 'Board of Revenue' no longer existed in R. 18 (2).

Held, that a notification made under a rule by a competent authority continues to be valid unless withdrawn or superseded by the succeeding authority and it will be deemed that the rule continues in force as if issued by the authority succeeding the earlier authority. UTTAR PRADESH BOARD OF REVENUE (DECLARATION OF PROCEDURE AND VALIDATION) ACT (30 of 1953)

PREAMBLE

—Preamble — Validity of Act — Act is not void on ground that it infringes provisions of Art. 14 of Constitution — (Constitution of India, Art. 14). AIR 1955 NUC (All) 1517.

—Preamble — Judgment of concurrence by one of members of Revenue Board quashed on ground that he did not hear parties — Case sent back to Board for disposal according to law — State Legislature passing Act (30 of 1953, authorising Member who had not heard the parties to sign concurrence with judgment written by another member who had heard the parties — Judgment in case signed by another member purporting to act under the new Act—There is no disregarding of the decision of the High Court. See Constitution of India, Art. 226. AIR 1954 All 660 (DB).

—Preamble—Validity—There is no discrimination —(Constitution of India, Art. 14).

U. P. Act 30 of 1950, prescribes a Special Procedure in all cases coming before the Revenue Board and the same procedure is applicable to every case before it. There is no discrimination. Act is not invalid on this ground. 1954 A L J 656 : AIR 1954 All 660 (661) (Pt B) (Pr 6) (DB).

——Preamble—Validity—Act is not invalid because a member of the Board of Revenue who has not heard the parties can sign concurrence to the judgment written by another who heard the parties — (Constitution of India, Art. 226 — Rule of natural justice that parties should be heard).

In India no so-called rule of natural justice that no case shall be decided without giving the parties an oppartunity to be heard can invalidate an Act passed by our legislatures within their legislative competence.

So the U. P. Act 30 of 1953 is not invalid on the ground that it allows a Member of the Revenue Board who has not heard the parties to sign the judgment written by another member who has heard the parties. 1954 A L J 656 : AIR 1954 All 660 (661) (Pt C) (Prs 7, 8) (DB).

——Preamble — Act does not amend C. P. Code and did not require sanction of President for its validity —(Constitution of India, Art. 254 (2)).

The C. P. Code is not applicable to proceedings in Revenue Courts, except to the extent that the revenue law makes it applicable and the U. P. Act (30 of 1953) provides that in Revenue Courts the procedure laid down in the Act shall be followed; and thus there is no question of this Act amending the C. P. Code and therefore requiring the sanction of the President. Act is not invalid on this ground. 1954 ALJ 656 : AIR 1954 All 660 (661) (Pt D) (Pr 9) (DB).

——Preamble—Enactment is not ultra vires of legislature.

The Board of Revenue was constituted by U. P, Acts and it is the U. P. Legislature which is competent to lay down the procedure according to which the Board of Revenue is to act in exercising its judicial powers. Obviously, until the passing of Act (30 of 1953) the procedure in writ cases arising under the U. P. Tenancy Act was governed by the procedure laid down in the Code of Civil Procedure with the amendments to it made by the U. P. Tenancy Act itself. That procedure which was applicable to the Board of Revenue has been amended by Act (30 of 1953) and in passing such an enactment the U. P. Legislature has not in any way exceeded its legislative powers. 1954 All L J 152 : 1954 All W R (HC) 256 : AIR 1954 All 454 (454) (Pt B) (Pr 2).

SECTION 3

——Ss. 3 and 4—Member passing judgment in appeal —Case sent to another Member for orders — Such member passing order without hearing parties—Order is valid. AIR 1955 NUC (All) 1517.

——Ss. 3 and 4—'Appeal' includes review—(Tenancy Laws—U. P. Tenancy Act (17 of 1939), S. 273).

The power of review possessed by the Board under S. 373, U. P. Tenancy Act is a power which is supplementary to the exercise by it of its powers of appeal reference or revision. It is a statutory power which it exercises as part of its appellate, reference and revisional jurisdiction, as the case may be, and not otherwise.

Hence, the word 'appeal' in Ss. 3 and 4 of the U. P. Board of Revenue (Declaration of Procedure and Validation) Act, 1953, includes an application for the review of a decree or order made on appeal.

Where, therefore, a review application is heard and allowed by a single member and the order is concurred in subsequently by another member of the board, the order is not rendered invalid merely because it is concurred in without hearing the parties. 1954 All L J 430 : A I R 1955 N U C (All) 171.

——S. 3 — Hearing of appeal by one only of the two members giving decision—C. P. Code (1908), O. 41, R. 30).

The use of the words "except where it is expressly provided to the contrary, in the second part of S. 3" mean that there should be some express provision of law requiring that hearing must be given by more than one member. Order 41, Rule 30, C. P. Code, does not now apply to proceedings before the Board of Revenue because of the first paragraph of this section and therefore cannot be said to make any express provision to the contrary within the meaning of this section so as to require every member of a Court to give a hearing to the parties and as laying down that an appeal cannot be heard by one member and must be heard by more than one of all the members of the Board of Revenue. 1954 All LJ 152 : 1954 All W R (HC) 256 : AIR 1954 All 454 (454) (Pt C) (Pr 2).

CLAUSE 5

—Cl. 5 — Refusal to renew licence — Appeal — Maintainability.

An appeal to the Controller against an order of the District Magistrate refusing to renew a licence is competent. The word "refusing" mentioned in sub-cl. (c) applies equally to the refusal mentioned in sub-cl. (a) and that mentioned in sub cl. (b). It is impossible to believe that the rule-making authority intended to permit an appeal against the supension cancellation or revoking of a licence but denied such right against a refusal to renew a licence, That would be inconsistent with the other terms of the clause. 1959 All W R (HC) 166.

—Cl. 5—Scope—Interim order passed by appellate authority — District Magistrate not complying with order —Issue of mandamus — (Constitution of India, Art. 226).

An appellate quasi-judicial or administrative tribunal or authority has no power to issue interim orders unless such power is specifically conferred on it by the statute which has created it; where the statute mentions no such power the conclusive presumption is that the legislature did not intend the tribunal or authority to enjoy such power. The Cement Controller is invested only with those powers which are expressly recited in sub-cl. (c) of Cl. 5 of the Order and neither under that clause nor any other clause of the order, nor under any provision of the parent Act namely, the Industries (Development and Regulation) Act (LXV of 1951) under which the Order has been can he possess any greater power. Under Cl. 5 (c) he is entitled to pass only final orders and therefore it clearly follows he has no authority to pass interim orders pending the final decision of an appeal before him. As there is no power in the Cement Controller to pass interim orders there can also be no legal or statutory duty upon the District Magistrate to obey his order and hence a writ of mandamus cannot be issued to him. 1959 All W R (HC) 166.

UTTAR PRADESH CHILDREN ACT (1 of 1952)

—Ss. 17, 29—Scope.

The seduction and indulgence in immoral behaviour is made punishable under the Act if it is done with a girl under the age of 16. As the complainant was a girl under the age of 16 the accused could be punished under S. 17 in addition to their being punished under the Penal Code. But this does not mean that the benefits of S. 29 of the Children Act could not be extended to them, if they were children at this time. 1954 All L J 256 : 1954 Cr L J 1288 : 1954 All W R (HC) 191 : A I R 1954 All 580 (582) (Pt C) (Pr 11) (DB).

—Ss. 29, 75 — Applicability of Section 29 during pendency of appeal.

If a person is arrested in connection with offences under the Act itself and if he is a child on that date, he can get the benefit of the Act. Otherwise, a person must be a child on the date on which an application, oral or written, is made for extending the benefit of S. 29. Where the accused were not arrested in connection with any offence provided for by the Act the Court can extend the benefit of S. 29 of the Act only if the accused is a child when an oral request is being made to the appellate Court, when the accused is over 16 years of age the Court cannot deal with him under S. 29 on the ground that he was a child when he committed the offence and he was also a child when the proceedings were initiated against him and even when the Court below convicted him. 1954 All L J 256 : 1954 Cri L J 1288 : 1954 All W R (H C) 191 : A I R 1954 All 580 (582) (Pt B) (Pr 10) (DB).

UTTAR PRADESH CINEMAS REGULATION ACT 1955 (3 of 1956)

—Preamble — Scope and object of Act — It deals with licensing of cinema house and education and health of community.

The U. P. Cinemas Regulation Act, 1955, does not make provision for the licensing of places alone where cinematograph films may be exhibited. The preamble of the Act is evidently not so restricted but is wider and will include within its ambit provision for regulation of exhibition of films by means of cinematograph. A purpose evident from provisions contained in Ss. 3, 5, 6 and 7 of the Act is that the scheme of licensing is not confined to the using of a place for cinematogroph exhibition on grounds of public safety, etc., but factors such as the educational and scientific advancement of the people and their health can also properly be taken into consideration in determining the conditions and restrictions to be included in a licence. The Act has thus at least two objects in view, one the licensing of the place where cinematograph exhibition can be held and two, the education and health, etc, also of the community making use of them. A I R 1961 All 600 (603) (Pt A) (Pr 7).

——Ss. 3 and 8 — Exhibition of film in unlicensed building—Offence continues so long as the exhibition lasts—If after an interval another exhibition opens, it is a repetition of the act and not its continuation—Giving daily exhibition is not a continuing offence and the person concerned is not liable for daily fine. 1960 All Cri R 254 : 1960 All L J 512 : 1960 All W R (H C) 387 : 1961 (1) Cri L J 202 : A I R 1961 All 88 (88, 89) (Pt B) (Prs 4, 5).

SECTION 5

See Constitution of India, Art. 19 (1) (g). A I R 1961 All 600.

——S. 5 (2) and S. 13—Scope of S. 5 (2)—Failure to make rules under S. 18 does not affect power of licensing authority to impose conditions under S. 5 (2).

The failure on the part of the State Government to make rules in exercise of its rule-making power under S. 13 of the Act has not affected the power of the licensing authority, or of the State Government itself to act in the direction of imposing terms, conditions and restrictions subject to which licence can be granted under sub-s. (2), S. 5. So far as sub-s. (2) exists it does not limit down the power of the licensing authority to include in the licence such conditions only as might have been prescribed by rules made under S. 13. Section 13 as well does not in turn curtail the power belonging to the licensing authority under sub-s. (2) of S. 5 to the terms, conditions and restrictions provided for under its provisions. None of the two sections has thus placed any limitation on the power of the State Government or of the licensing authority that it will in the matter of determining conditions, etc., be confined to the provision existing in the rules framed under the Act. A I R 1961 All 600 (605) (Pt C) (Prs 20, 21).

—R. 23 — Period of Probation — How extended—Retrospective effect of order of extension.

Under Rule 23, the period of probation, is a fixed period and though it can be extended in appropriate cases, it has nevertheless to be a fixed period and not continue indefinitely. An extension in the period of probation does not take place except by a written order which should contain the date upto which this is done.

As one obvious effect of letting the period of probation to be extended even subsequently with retrospective operation would be to divest the Government servant concerned of certain rights already accrued in his favour, the power to extend that period of probation contained in Rule 23 will not entitle the Governor to extend it after the original period has expired. Unless the rule has expressly provided that any particular power conferred by it shall be exercisable with retrospective effect also, the power can be used prospectively only whenever it will have the effect of divesting any rights already accrued. I L R (1959) 1 All 226.

—R. 14—Relevancy of political activities of candidate—Participation in R. S. S. Satyagraha—Relevancy in determining fitness for service.

The opinion which the Governor has to form under R. 14 is whether the character of the candidate is such as to fit him for the service. Further, it is open to the authority recruiting persons for Government service to refuse to appoint candidates who have shown themselves not to be amenable to proper discipline or who appear to lack a sense of responsibility, and in the case of appointment to the judicial service the requirements must naturally be even more stringent than for other kinds of posts : AIR 1958 S C 520, Rel. on. Where the Governor's opinion about the petitioner's fitness of character under Rule 14 has been arrived at on a consideration of two grounds, (a) his political activities and (b) certain other undisclosed matters; and the political activities are held to be a non-existent or irrelevant ground, then despite the other undisclosed grounds the opinion is vitiated as a whole. AIR 1954 S C 179, Rel. on.

Held, that the petitioner's participation in the Satyagraha movements sponsored by the R. S. S. and the Jan Sangh in 1949 and 1953 was a matter that could legitimately be considered by the Governor when deciding under R. 14 whether his character was such as to fit him for the judicial service; and that consequently it cannot be said that the opinion arrived at by the Governor regarding his unfitness was vitiated by reason of its being based on irrelevant considerations. Held further, that the High Court was not concerned with the precise weight that might have been or ought to have been attached by the Governor to the material in question. CLAUSE 12

—Cls. 12, 3 and 6 — Order of State Government cancelling appointment of district importer without recording any reasons — Validity — Constitution of India, Art. 226.

The petitioner was a holder of a licence in form B issued by the District Magistrate under Cl. 6 of U. P. Controlled Cotton Cloth and Yarn Dealers' Licencing Order, 1948. On 17-5-1951 the State Government suddenly and without any warning passed an order terminating the appointment of the petitioner as the District Importer of goods without recording the reasons as required by Cl. 12 of the order. The petitioner thereupon applied under Art. 226, Constitution of India for quashing the order.

Held, that the issue of a license in form B to the petitioner amounted to his appointment as a district importer and the cancellation of his appointment as district importer had the effect of cancelling the licence which could only be done under Cl. 12. Normally, the powers of cancelling a licence is exercised by the licensing authority but under Cl. (3) of the Licensing Order the State Government could also exercise all the powers which are exercisable by the licensing authority. The State Government was, therefore, competent to issue an order cancelling the licence of the petitioners under clause 12 of the Licensing Order but subject to the limitation mentioned therein. Consequently the State Government when passing an order which had the effect of cancelling the licence of the petitioner was bound to record its reasons in writing as required by Cl. 12 and this not having been done, the order was clearly not in compliance with law and was liable to be set aside. 1952 R D (HC) 32 : 1952 All W R (HC) 153 : A I R 1952 All 61 (62) (Pr 2) (DB).

UTTAR PRADESH CONTROL OF SUPPLIES (CONTINUANCE OF POWERS) ACT (43 of 1948)

PREAMBLE

● —Preamble—Delegation of Legislative power — Principles stated—Power to extend life of Statute—Delegation to non-legislative body—Validity—U. P. Control of Supplies (Temporary Powers) Act (2 of 1947), S. 1 (4)—U. P. Control of Supplies (Continuance of Powers) Act (43 of 1948).

The power conferred upon a Legislature to make laws cannot be delegated or transferred by it to any other body or authority. Such a Legislature, though it may have plenary powers within the limits set by the Constitution of the State, cannot give up those powers and thus pass on the duty of making laws to another authority. Such a procedure would amount to a surrender of its Legislative powers, a self-effacement which is not permitted by any constitutional law.

The duration of a statute is a matter for determination by the Legislature itself. It is of the nature of an essential legislative act. Delegation of such power is not permitted by law. There is no real anology between "conditional Legislation" which authorises a non-legislative authority to determine the commencement or termination of an Act and an act done in exercise of a power to determine the life of an enactment itself. UTTAR PRADESH CONTROL OF SUPPLIES (TEMPORARY POWERS) ACT (2 of 1947) ——Preamble—Period of duration—(U. P. Control of Supplies Continuation Ordinance (8 of 1948), Cl. (2))—(U. P. Laws (Expiration) Act (28 of 1950), S. 3).

PREAMBLE

The life of U. P. Act (2 of 1947) was extended first by the U. P. Ordinance (8 of 1948) and thereafter by U. P. Act (42 of 1948) until 30th September, 1950. The next step was the U. P. Act (30 of 1950) and although it did not receive the assent of the President till 25th October, 1950, by reason of S. 3 of the earlier Act (28 of 1950), Act 30 of 1950 shall be deemed to have taken effect from 30th September, 1950.

There is nothing in the Constitution which prevents the Legislature from giving retrospective operation to statutes whether by means of some provision of the Statute itself or by means of another statute. The only limitation is that no one can be punished for a crime, which was not a crime at the date at which it was committed. This was specifically guarded against by S. 3 of the Act (28 of 1950). There could thus be no legal challenge to the validity of Act (28 of 1950) and, by reason of that Act, Act (30 of 1950), was deemed to have taken effect from 30th September, 1950. Thus in law there was no gap between the date of expiration of Act (2 of 1947) (as extended from time to time) and the date of the enforcement of the Extending Act (30 of 1950). Act (2 of 1947) was therefore still in force on 17th September, 1952 when the offence was said to have been committed. 1955 Cri L J 1025 : A I R 1955 All 397 (399) (Pt B) (Prs 13, 14) (DB).

——S. 1(4) — Power of Provincial Government — Nature of — U. P. Cement Control Order, 1948 — Validity — (Government of India Act (1935), S. 59) : AIR 1951 All 181 (FB) held no longer good law in view of AIR 1951 S C 332 in AIR 1955 All 48 (FB).

The words 'or if the Provincial Government by notified order so directs, of two years beginning from that date' in S. 1(4) of the U. P. Act (2 of 1947) do not amount to delegation by the Legislature of its powers and a notification of the U. P. Government, dated 26th September, 1947, directing that Act (2 of 1947) should continue to remain in force till 30th September, 1948, was valid—A I R 1955 All 48 (FB), Foll.; AIR 1951 All 181 (FB), held no longer good law in view of AIR 1951 S C 332 in AIR 1955 All 48 (FB).

Consequently, the U. P. Cement Control Order, 1948, which was promulgated under the powers conferred by Act (2 of 1947) as extended by the above notification was also valid.

In view of S. 59 (1), Government of India Act, which was then in force, the issue of the above notification in the name of the Governor did not indicate that it was not the action of the Provincial Government. 1955 Cri L J 1025 : A I R 1955 All 397 (398) (Pt A) (Prs 7, 8) (DB).

Sub-section (4) of S. 1 of the U. P. Control of Supplies (Temporary Powers) Act (2 of 1947), in so far as it vests power in the Provincial Government by notified order to direct that the Act shall continue in force for two years beginning with 1st October, 1947, is ultra vires the powers of the Provincial Legislature.

The U. P. Control of Supplies (Temporary Powers) Act, 1947, was not in force on 3rd December, 1947, nor would it be deemed to be in force on that date in view of the U. P. UTTAR PRADESH COURT OF WARDS ACT (4 of 1912) ——Ss. 3, 44—Person ceasing to be ward if legally entitled to obtain possession from Court of Wards.

The Court of Wards Act only authorises the Court of Wards to deal with properties of 'Wards' or in certain eventualities of those who succeed to, or are heirs of Wards. In order to constitute a person a ward within the meaning of S. 3 two conditions are necessary, (i) he must be a disqualified proprietor, and (ii) his property must be under the superintendence of Court of Wards. If the declaration by the Government that the petitioner is unfit to manage her estate has become void, the petitioner has ceased to be a disqualified proprietor and can no longer be deemed to be a ward. The Court of Wards can thus no longer, under the very provisions of the Court of Wards Act, deal with her property nor do any of the limitation on the powers of 'wards' apply to her so that she becomes free to manage and enjoy her property as she pleases and this she can only do if the wrongful possessor restores the property to her. I L R (1955) 1 All 162 : A I R 1954 All 608 (622) (Pt G) (Pr 84) (DB).

——Ss. 7, 16 and 37—Ward of Court — Position of cannot be equated to that of a minor—Ward not properly represented in suit — Proceedings not rendered void. See U. P. Court of Wards Act (4 of 1912), S. 56. AIR 1958 All 710 (DB).

SECTION 8

—S. 8 (1) (b) — Court of Wards assuming superintendence of Ward's estate by virtue of declaration made by Government under S. 8 (1) (b), U. P. Court of Wards Act long before Constitution— Assumed Superintendence must be declared void after the Constitution though whatsoever was done by the Court of Wards or whatever liabilities were imposed by the Court of Wards before the Constitution came into force could not be set aside. See Constitution of India, Art. 13 (1). AIR 1954 All 608 (DB).

—S. 8 (1) (b)— If discriminatory against females—(Constitution of India, Art. 15).

A comparison between the provisions of S. 8 (1) (b) and S. 8 (1) (d) of the U. P. Court of Wards Act will clearly reveal that the discrimination is against the woman. While it is left to the absolute discretion of the Government—Subjective and non-justiciable —To declare a female proprietor unfit to manage her estate without any rules being laid down to determine what constitutes incapacity to manage, and she is not even allowed to represent her case before the declaration is made, in the case of a male not only must certain conditions be fulfilled before he can be declared unfit to manage his estate but he must be given the fullest opportunity to have his objections heard. Even though the law may be a benign one there can be no doubt that the discrimination is against the female. Thus the denial to women of the right of representation and the absence in S. 8 (1) (b) of any rules similar to those in S. 8 (1) (d) cannot but be regarded as hostile to women and consequently the discrimination is against 'women.' AIR 1952 All 746, considered and followed. ILR (1955) 1 All 162 : AIR 1954 All 608 (618) (Pt D) (Prs 53, 54).

—S. 8 (1) (b)—Validity—If discriminatory only on ground of sex—(Constitution of India, Arts. 12, 15, 16).

Section 8 (1) (d) of the U. P. Court of Wards Act applies to estates of males as well as females. It lays down certain standards which are to guide the Government in determining whether the person concerned is incapable of managing his or her property and it allows to the person concerned a full opportunity of being heard. If the necessary conditions exist :the estate of a female as well as that of a male may be placed in charge of the Court of Wards, but in the case of females, something more is provided : it is, by S. 8 (1) (b) of the Act, left at the absolute discretion of the Government, even if the conditions imposed by cl. (d) of the same sub-section do not exist, to declare the proprietor incapable of managing her estate. This differentiation is based solely on the sex of the proprietor and the fact that the differentiation is to be made by the Government and not by the Legislature is immaterial because the word 'State' in Art. 15 includes, by reason of Art. 12, a Government also and differentiation by the Government is as much hit by Art, 15 as differentiation :by the Legislature. The fact that Government chooses to proceed in respect of an estate under S. 8 (1) (b) of the Court of Wards Act and not under S. 8 (1) (d) is based only on the sex of the proprietor, since no action can be taken under S. 8 (1) (b) against males.

While classification is permissible it cannot be classification based on any of the factors mentioned in Arts. 15 and 16 In the present case it is based on sex which is a factor on which discrimination is forbidden by Art. 15. It is, therefore, bad without anything more having to be proved.

A classification which the Constitution forbids cannot possibly be said to be reasonable. Moreover it has been held that a provision which leaves the choice to subjective discretion — not justiciable of any executive authority is not reasonable.

The provisions of S. 8 (1) of the Court of Wards Act confer an uncontrolled and arbitrary power not open to challenge in a Civil Court of declaring any proprietor-provided she is a female—unfit to manage her property. Even if it be considered that this is a permissible classification and discrimination it is unreasonable and must be declared to be void. I L R (1955) 1 All 162 : AIR 1954 All 608 (619, 620, 621) (Pt E) (Prs 58, 71, 73, 77) (DB).

—S. 8 (1) (b) — Validity —(Constitution of India, Art. 19 (1) (f)).

The provisions of S. 8 (1)(b) abridge the fundamental right of a ward under Art. 19 (1) (f) when a Court of Ward assumed superintendence of his estate and as such they are invalid. The contention that the word 'holds' in Art. 19 (1) (f) means own and not possess and, therefore, when a person is deprived of possession of his property Art 19 (1) (f) is not infringed, cannot be accepted. AIR 1952 All 746, considered and foll.

In this case it was held that since the petitioner had already been deprived of the management and possession of his estate before the Constitution came into force, he did not by reason of Art. 19 (1) (f) become entitled to be restored to possession.
